General Mola Dies in Plane Wreck in Fog Near Burgos

Body Mangled; 4 Others Killed; 'Mercy on His Soul,' Say Basques.

Fascist Columns Beaten at Bilbao

60 Nazi Warships Steam Through Kiel Canal; Duce Talks War.

The Spanish Crisis.

Gen. Emilio Mola, insurgent leader and driving force in the siege of Bilbao, crashed to his death in an airplane yesterday. The plane was wrecked on a mountainside near Brisiesca.

A Basque communique reported the capture of Lemona and declared the foe had been pushed back 6 miles from that vital highway junction 8 miles southeast of Bilbao.

Field Marshal von Blomberg, German war minister, conferred in Rome with Premier Mussolini on the Spanish situation. A gigantic military show was staged for his benefit.

More German naval craft were rushed to Spanish waters. At Malmo, on the southern tip of Sweden, it was reported a German naval detachment of 60 ships moved through the Kiel Canal traveling westward.

Gen. Mola Killed.

By the Associated Press.

Vitoria, Spain, June 3.—Gen. Emilio Mola, commander of all insurgent armies in northern Spain and director of the 2-months-old siege of Bilbao, was killed today in the crash of a fog-bound airplane.

Two of his staff officers and two pilots died with him in the wreck near Briviesca, 25 miles northeast of Burgos, capital of Gen. Franco's insurgent regime early in the war and still a Fascist stronghold.

Mola's body was thrown 25 yards from the wrecked plane and was so badly mangled it could be identified only by the tan waterproof coat he wore.

The bespectacled Mola was Franco's right-hand man, accounted the ablest strategist among all the insurgent chieftain's lieutenants. He was in command of the drive which had carried the insurgent forces within sight of Bilbao, Basque capital, on the Bay of Biscay.

Mola was flying from the Bilbao front when he met his death.

Only Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano had a place comparable to Mola's in Franco's command. Mola was in charge in the north and even commanded the Madrid front when Franco himself was not there.

Queipo de Llano was in command in the south and was often Franco's spokesman in radio broadcasts; it was his men who swept most of the southern seaboard in February, capturing Malaga.

The loss of Mola was considered a tremendous blow to Franco's military campaign at Bilbao. Who would take command was not known; insurgent radio stations shut down after broadcasting the first reports of his death.

It was believed the plane struck a mountainside in the fog.

The bodies of the five victims were taken to Burgos. One of them was reported to be Col. Doval, who

House Bill Seeks Double Holidays For U. S. Workers

Holiday week-ends galore for Government employes and other workers are proposed in a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Hancock (Democrat), of North Carolina.

Hancock's bill calls for the observance of most of the customary holidays on Mondays so that workers may get the benefit of the double holiday of Sunday and Monday. It also suggests this idea be passed along to the States.

Following are the legal public holidays that would be so designated under Hancock's proposal:

January 1, February 22, May 30, July 4, the first Monday of September or Labor Day, October 12, November 11 or Armistice Day, Thanksgiving, Christmas and every Saturday after 12 o'clock noon.

The 20th of January also would be a legal holiday in each year that a President is inaugurated.

Soviet Explorers Discover Bird Life Exists Near Pole

Moscow (Friday), June 4 (AP).—The Soviet North Pole expedition announced today it had found bird life close to the pole and that this had led its scientists to discuss the possibility that undiscovered land exists in the vast Polar Sea.

Members of Dr. Otto J. Schmidt's party, maintaining a 24-hour watch at their outpost near the earth's axis, reported sighting a guillemot, a black and white sea bird which abounds on North Atlantic coasts, flying over the camp.

Roosevelt Asks 'All-Inclusive' Merit System

Excepts, 'Policy-Forming' Jobs in Backing Plea of Committee.

Alarmed by the inclination of Congress to ignore the civil service system, President Roosevelt yesterday addressed letters to Vice President Garner and Speaker Bankhead urging upon Congress "the desirability of placing all but policy-forming positions under the merit system."

The letter was hailed by Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee, who is author of a bill to extend the civil service laws to all New Deal employes.

The President included in his letter a communication from the Civil Service Commission pointing out that 70 bills have been introduced in this session which propose "complete exemption of all positions affected thereby."

Roosevelt's Letter.

The text of the President's letter follows:

"I have received a communication from the Civil Service Commission which states that in addition to numerous other bills exempting from the merit system all but minor positions, there have been more than 70 bills introduced in this session of Congress which propose complete exemption for all positions affected thereby. A copy of the commission's letter is herewith inclosed.

"Aside from the undoubted fact that the merit system affords the best method for administration of Government business, the particular feature of the system which has the greatest appeal is the open competition it provides to the taxpayers to seek public employment for which they pay. Please let me urge upon Congress the desirability of placing all but policy-forming positions under the merit system."

The commission in its letter stated its complaint as follows:

"The commission has been greatly disturbed by the increasing number of bills introduced in this session of Congress containing provisions which completely exempt from the merit system employment thereunder. There have been 70 such bills, 3 or 4 of which are now law.

Rail Retirement Bill.

"Two of the recent bills transgress even the fundamental principle of open competition for admission to the classified service. They provide that after a period of service in a nonclassified position the incumbent employe may secure a classified civil service status by noncompetitive examination, thus becoming eligible for transfer to a classified position in one of the regular 'old line' establishments and yet his position will continue to be exempt and be open for personal or political appointment * * *."

One of the two bills believed to have been cited by the commission as outstanding examples is the railroad retirement measure now in committee. This contains a provision which would allow the employes to take noncompetitive examinations given by the Retirement Board and thus obtain a civil service status, whereas their jobs would remain political.

Representative Ramspeck said his bill to extend the civil service to all executive departments has been blocked by the insistence of the Civil Service Committee upon open and competitive examinations for all jobs.

"I know that the bill would never pass Congress with that provision, in view of the President's recommendation for noncompetitive tests,"

Duke and Wallis Board Train On Honeymoon Trip to Austria

Wed at Last in Monts Chateau, Famous Couple Heads for Castle in Alps; First Stop Trieste; Lost Dog Delays Express at French Station.

By the Associated Press.

Laroche-Migennes, France (Friday), June 4.—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor boarded the Simplon-Orient Express at this small station in the department of Yonne early today and sped away on their honeymoon journey to Austria.

The newly married couple, having motored here from the Chateau de Cande, where they were married yesterday, boarded the train a few minutes after midnight.

It was 12:11 a. m. (6:11 p. m., Eastern standard time) when the brightly lighted train pulled out into the night toward Italy and Austria.

The shiny special car attached at Paris was made ready for the couple's occupancy before it reached this station.

The duke and his bride, the former Wallis Warfield, are en route to Wasserleonburg Castle, near Austria's southern border.

Two attendants stood ready to help the bridal couple when they arrived at the station in the new automobile driven by George Ladbrooke, the duke's chauffeur. Other passengers craned their necks from windows to see the famous newlyweds board the train.

It was believed they would leave the train at Trieste, Italy.

The couple arrived at the railroad yards just as the train pulled in. The duchess reached the special car a moment before her husband. She seemed very happy.

Smiling broadly, the Duke helped porters hand luggage into the car.

U. S. to Pursue Way of Peace, W. C. T. U. Told

Roosevelt Message Read to Convention by Sayre.

The United States remains steadfast in its determination to pursue the ways of peace, President Roosevelt last night assured the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in sixteenth triennial convention at Constitution Hall.

In his message, which was read by Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, the President declared that this country not only desires peace, but that "we are determined in all of our relations to avoid those perils that would endanger the gains that have been made."

His message follows:

"I am glad to know that peace continues to be one of the vital concerns of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union. It is indeed fitting that in connection with the forthcoming sixteenth triennial convention of the organization in Washington a great peace meeting is to be held.

"In the conflict of principles and policies, aspirations and ambitions which the world today witnesses, the United States remains steadfast in its determination to pursue the ways of peace. We shall continue to strive under Divine Providence with heart and soul and all of our strength to serve the cause of peaceful humanity by setting an example.

"We rejoice today that all of the nations of the Western Hemisphere are at peace with each other and with the rest of the world. The United States seeks no conquest. We have no imperial aspirations. Not only do we desire peace, but we are determined in all of our relations to avoid these perils that would endanger the gains that have been made. We desire to be a good neighbor and we are ready at all times to co-operate with all nations and peoples to make the spirit of peace a

1936 Incomes To Escape Levy In D.C. Tax Bill

Subcommittee Also Votes to Allow Credits on Payments.

By James D. Secrest.

The retroactive provision of the District income tax bill was eliminated yesterday as the Kennedy sub-committee completed consideration of the tax program it will recommend to the House District Committee.

At the same time the sub-committee voted to allow credits on the income levy for payments of the intangible personal property tax.

The other major change in the bill drafted by Corporatoin Counsel Elwood H. Seal at the sub-committee's direction was to raise the exemption for dependents from $300 to $400 and to broaden its application so as to include all persons entirely dependent upon the taxpayer.

Half of Revenue Lost.

By striking out the retroactive provision of the bill, the sub-committee deprived the District government of a half-year's revenue which had been anticipated for next October. The provision assessed half the regular rates against 1936 incomes.

The elimination had been recommended, however, by the District Commissioners themselves, although they admitted the District needs the money.

As the income tax measure now stands, it imposes a scale of taxes ranging from 1 to 5 per cent on all incomes in excess of $1,000 for single

Aviatrix Finishes Jaunt to Guiana; Takes a Car Ride

Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, June 3 (AP).—Amelia Earhart made a 750-mile hop over South American jungles today to get to Dutch Guiana, and then had to ride 25 miles on a trolley car.

She brought her silvery monoplane down at the Zandery airfield, 25 miles from Paramaribo, at 12:50 p. m. (11:50 a. m., E. S. T.) at the end of the third leg of her round-the-world jaunt from the United States.

Authorities, apprised of the plane's departure 5 hours and 2 minutes earlier from Caripito, Venezuela were awaiting the aviatrix and her navigator, Capt. Fred Noonan, and gave them a rousing welcome.

Miss Earhart thanked them, inspected her plane, had it refueled, praised the scenery and then boarded the trolley for the journey to this capital. Her next hop is to Natal, on Brazil's easternmost tip She hopes to make the flight tomorrow. The distance is roughly 1,600 miles.

George Washington Receives $500,000 for 2 New Buildings

Gifts totaling $500,000 for the erection of two new buildings for George Washington University were announced yesterday by President Cloyd Heck Marvin at the annual meeting of the university's board of trustees.

Included in these gifts was one in the amount of $250,000 from Abram Lisner, retired Washington financier and philanthropist, for the erection of a new library building, and another in the same amount, by a donor who chose to remain anonymous, for the erection of a hall for the school of government.

The board, at its meeting, accepted gifts for the current year aggregating more than $1,000,000, including the funds for the new building, the DeKnight bequest of $290,000 and numerous small gifts.

A fund of $1,000 establishing the Joshua Evans 3d Memorial Award to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., who was a member of the senior class, was accepted by the board.

This award will be made annually for excellence in social studies.

A petition was received from a group of students urging the reten-

Death Robbed Keene of Big Profit on Art

Stood Chance to Earn $50,000, Widow Discloses.

Retained to Sell Famous Works; Had Drawing Account.

Charles F. Keene, who disappeared from a Norfolk night boat May 14 with a bullet in his head and a weighted brief case tied to his neck, was about to earn a commission of $50,000 for selling a famed art collection, Mrs. Clemence Keene, his white-haired widow, told The Post last night.

Mrs. Keene thought this ought to smash the theory her husband, worried over the future, had committed suicide.

"Everything was looking rosy for him," she said.

Other developments in the bewildering case were:

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said a man had telephoned police headquarters with a "vague tip" in connection with Keene's death. The informant, Thompson said, gave a description of an individual who, he thought, ought to be questioned.

Bring Clews Here Today.

Detective Sergt. J. J. Cassidy, of the Maryland State police, will arrive here at 9 a. m. with the evidence in the mystery—the brief case loaded with an automobile jack, a hammer, a tire iron and other articles that was tied to Keene's neck when the body was found in Chesapeake Bay. Inspector Thompson said he would tell Cassidy about the telephone call.

A laboratory test in Baltimore showed that the bullet found in Keene's skull was of .32 caliber and that it matched the three unfired bullets found in Keene's vest pocket.

The St. Joseph, Mich., firm that manufactured the numbered automobile jack found in the brief case said it was part of the standard equipment placed in 1935 Studebaker cars. Keene never owned such a car.

Engaged by Lawyer.

An art connoisseur, Keene had been engaged by Tazewell T. Thomas, a lawyer of Baltimore, to sell the collection of masterpieces. He was to receive not only a commission, but money to cover all expenses.

Thomas, interviewed in Baltimore last night, said that, in view of Mr. Keene's death, it would be "awkward" to reveal the identity of the art collection which he had engaged Keene to handle. He did say, however, the collection was a notable one, well known to connoisseurs. Part of the collection, he said, was in a warehouse in New York and the other part in Europe.

"Mr. Keene called at my office in Baltimore about a week before his death," Thomas said. "He was bright and cheery. Certainly he did not act like a man who contemplated suicide."

Could Draw Funds.

"The matter he was handling for me would have brought him a substantial compensation. In addition, he knew that I had made provision for him to draw funds as he needed them. He could have called on me for funds at any time, and they would have been cheerfully given."

Thomas said that, on one occasion, when he and Keene visited the warehouse in New York where part of the masterpieces are held, he offered Keene a check for his expenses.

"He told me the amount was entirely too much," Thomas said, "and I had to take back the check and give him a smaller sum in cash."

Mrs. Keene, suffering from the strain of her husband's disappearance and the shock attending discovery of the body, said talk of suicide was ridiculous to all persons who knew him.

Thought Suicide Cowardly.

"I remember about a year ago," she said, "a good friend of ours committed suicide. Charles was very much moved. He said he thought it was a very cowardly thing to do, especially when our friend's wife was left behind to face the world.

"My husband was not the type to take his own life. If he were, he would have done it back in 1922. In that year, he went through hades. He lost $150,000 and he was ill for many months. He had five doctors attending him.

"That was a bad time. But here lately all that was forgotten. The future was looking rosy."

Keene was an architect, and at one time was associated with the famous Stanford White. He painted pictures for his own pleasure, and Mrs. Keene yesterday displayed one of his works—a sketch of a pretty girl.

The announcement that the bullet found in Keene's skull matched the Retreat on Court Stand By Roosevelt Indicated; Compromise Is Sought

U.S. Offers $800,000,000 Notes As Gold Stocks Pass 12 Billions

Mounting Deficit Forces Morgenthau to Seek Money in Market.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Forced by the mounting Treasury deficit again to dip into the money market for funds to keep the Federal Government going, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau yesterday offered an issue of $800,000,000 of notes as of June 15.

From the proceeds of this issue $300,000,000 will be used to refund maturing discount bills in that amount and the remaining $500,000,000 will go into the Treasury's general fund for operating purposes. This financial operation will add another $500,000,000 to the gross public debt, which now stands at the gigantic sum of $35,211,417,940.

Morgenthau's announced intention to borrow $500,000,000 of new money caused surprise, especially since revenue will run high this month as a result of the June 15 quarterly income tax collections. But the Treasury's working balance has Treasury Holdings Gain $16,000,000 in Day From Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—A flood of yellow metal, moving toward New York from private gold hoards and government holdings in Europe and the Far East, was augmented today by more than $16,000,000, raising the total for the last three days to nearly $40,000,000.

A rush to exchange gold for dollars and other currencies, centering in London, washed one of the biggest waves of metal imports toward Uncle Sam's shores since the dollar was revalued early in 1934.

Bankers engaged during the day $10,753,000 in London for shipment to New York and $5,250,000 in Japan.

Incoming liners, doing a lucrative business hauling metal across the ocean, brought $9,213,400 from England. The United States' holdings topped $12,000,000,000, a sum surpassing the world's recorded gold

Congress Told Wage-Hour Bill Aids 12,000,000

Economist Cites Advantage of Plan; 30-Hr. Week Urged by Industrialist.

By Sidney Olson.

Twelve million workers would be directly affected by enactment of the Black-Connery wage-hour bill, Leon Henderson, one-time economic adviser and now an economist for the Works Progress Administration, told the joint session of the Senate and House Labor committees yesterday.

Of the 12,000,000, about 3,000,000 now are receiving less than 40 cents an hour, he said. At least half, or 6,000,000 workers, now are working more than 40 hours a week, he asserted, basing his estimates on numerous researches conducted into the employment problem.

He said, in response to a question put by Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin: "If a flat 40-hour week were rigidly invoked now throughout the country, at least 6,000,000 people would be affected. At least 1,500,000 would go back to work on a 40-hour basis."

Robert Johnson, blunt-spoken president of Johnson & Johnson, druggists' goods manufacturers, and a long-time advocate of a 30-hour week throughout industry, told the committee at the morning session a large number of employes in his three cotton textile mills are on 30-hour week now.

He complained only that the present bill, which may set a 40-hour week "floor," doesn't go far enough.

Johnson suggested three broad codes be drawn—Code A for modern industries, with a 30-hour week; Code B, for semimodern industries, with a 35-hour week, and Code C for backward industries, with a 40-hour week.

Johnson, rocking casually in the red-leather chair before the two

Girl, 15, Accused of Killing Father in Home Quarrel

San Diego, Calif., June 3 (AP).—Marian Ayers, 15-year-old school girl, was accused of murdering her father, Frank Thompson Ayers, 47, U. S. Navy chief petty officer, in a complaint issued last night by the District Attorney's office.

Earlier, Coroner Chester Gunn had quoted the girl as saying she shot her father when she believed her mother was being treated with violence.

The family had planned to leave soon for Norfolk, Va., where Ayers had been assigned to three years of shore duty.

Senate Groups Fight to Handle '7 TVA's' Bill

Harbors Committee Gets President's Measure in House.

President Roosevelt's vast plan for control of the Nation's water power and other natural resources was sent to a work-burdened Congress yesterday and immediately precipitated a fight in each house over which committee should handle legislation to carry out the program.

While utility executives and some Republicans opened fire on the proposal, the jurisdiction dispute apparently was settled in the House, where the Rivers and Harbors Committee received the bill introduced by Chairman Mansfield (Democrat), Texas, over the Flood Control Committee, whose chairman, Representative Whittington (Democrat), Mississippi, withdrew from the running. Also seeking the bill were Interstate Commerce and Irrigation and Reclamation committees.

In the Senate, however, the struggle was not yet ended. The bill introduced by Senator Norris (Independent Republican), of Nebraska, in conformity with the Presidential message, was sent to the Agriculture Committee over protests of several Senators, and Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, announced that on Monday he would ask the Senate to discharge the Agriculture group from consideration of the measure and send it instead to the Commerce Committee, headed by Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, which has handled much flood-control legislation.

Seven Planning Areas.

Calling for the "prudent husbandry of our national estate" against floods, droughts and dust storms, the President's message proposes division of the country into seven regional planning areas, with an authority over each, similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Territories assigned to the authorities, he suggested, should be the Atlantic Seaboard, the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley, the drainage basin of the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers, the basins of the Missouri River and the Red River of the North, the basins of the Arkansas, Red and Rio Grande rivers, the basins of the Colorado and rivers flowing into the Pacific south of the California-Oregon boundary, and the basin of the Columbia River in the Northwest.

The present Mississippi River Commission would be left undisturbed in its field.

"Floods, droughts and dust storms," the message said, "are in a very real sense manifestations of Nature's Robinson Says Even He May Offer Changes, but Bill Must Pass.

Denies Candidacy For Supreme Court

Other Pending Measures Called 'Advantageous' but Not 'Must.'

By William V. Nessly.

Strong indications of the Administration's first recession from its "no compromise" stand on the court reorganization bill came last night from a protracted conference between President Roosevelt and Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson.

Determination to put through the bill at this session, even in amended form, was manifested as the Senate leader emerged from the suddenly announced conference, shortly after 10:30 p. m., and talked to reporters who had waited in the rain for more than two hours.

At the same time Senator Robinson, in jovial mood, said he was not a candidate for the Supreme Court vacancy caused by retirement this week of Justice Willis Van Devanter, and declared the matter of appointments had not been discussed with the President. Many of the majority leader's colleagues are actively backing him for the appointment.

Amendments Certain.

The court bill itself will be proceeded with, Robinson said, with expectation it will be enacted at this session. It is certain amendments will be proposed and he might propose one himself, he said, though he cautioned reporters not to quote him as saying he would do so. He declined to say what the amendments would provide, or to indicate if Administration forces would accept a limit of two more justices on the Supreme Court in lieu of the increase of six proposed by the President.

At the same time he indicated numerous important measures now before Congress are not to be considered "must" legislation, though he said their enactment would be advantageous and was desired.

Reports have been current Robinson and other Senate leaders had urged compromise on the President as the only means of salvaging the court plan at this session. Some Senators are known to have been approached by Administration leaders with feelers on a two-judge compromise. The majority leader, apparently well pleased with the outcome of the conference, said to reporters:

"There is no foundation for the story published today that the court reform bill has been abandoned.

"The measure will be proceeded with and it is expected that action will be taken on it during the present session.

Action on Other Bills.

"Aside from the provisions that relate to the Supreme Court, other features of the bill are to be regarded as of vital importance.

"It is felt that during the last few months there have been some changes which modify the situation, but there still exists the necessity for injection of new blood into the court."

"Other legislation of importance has been discussed this evening. There are several subjects which it is hoped will receive final action. Among these are farm tenancy, slum clearance, nuisance tax extensions and provisions to close loopholes pointed out in the President's recent message, the executive branch reorganization bill and the maximum-hour and minimum-wage bill.

"It is not suggested that passage of any of these is imperative, but final disposition is desirable and would be advantageous.

"The Norris bill and the message on natural resources were not discussed.

"Understand, I am not making a list of legislation that must be passed."

Asked whether the court reform bill would be changed, he said:

"I do not know what amendments may be proposed.

"It is certain that some amendments will be suggested, but," laughing, "you will have to wait to see what they are."

He said he had no guess as to when the court bill would be brought on the floor.

It had been expected that among the topics at the important night

'Thank Heaven,' Sighs Washington Father, Hearing Triplets He Expected Are All Girls

By Gerald G. Gross

THE MAN WHO KNEW HE WAS ABOUT TO BECOME THE FATHER OF TRIPLETS paced the corridors of Columbia Hospital yesterday afternoon with this reporter.

Neither reporter nor father were disappointed or surprised when the nurse came out to Alexander Robertson Middleton and said:

"It's three girls. They're doing fine and so is your wife."

But it must be reported that the father, who is director of athletics at St. Alban's School for Boys, was just a bit awed at this expected climax.

He smiled wanly at the nurse and then after a speechless minute said:

"Thank Heavens."

Not every reporter has the opportunity to record the reaction of a man who knows his family is going to increase by three all at once.

For Middleton, who lives at 2844 Wisconsin avenue, had been told by Dr. Prentiss Willson what to expect. Like any other prospective father, he was waiting to hear his wife was doing well, but what set him apart was a kind of suspense experienced by one man in a million: Will it be three boys, three girls, two boys and a girl or two girls and a boy?

What does a man in that position think about? Well, only he knows that, but he talked about the Keene mystery and his school work and a college chum whose name happens to be identical with this reporter's and the hot weather—in short, everything except the things that really occupied his mind.

A bland smile, effective mask for all the thoughts which must have been playing leapfrog inside his brain, never left his face. It was present when, in answer to questions, he volunteered he is a grad-

Tax Publicity Issue Delays Evader Inquiry

Fight on Treasury Use of Congressional Powers Also Crops Up.

By Robert C. Albright.

A fight on publicity of tax information and Treasury use of Congressional powers yesterday forced another House postponement of action to investigate wealthy tax dodgers.

The inquisitorial resolution which slipped nimbly through the Senate three days ago was snarled in an unusual controversy between the House Rules Committee, the Ways and Means Committee and House majority leaders.

Leading the fight on tax publicity and delegation of hearing powers to the Treasury was Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, whose rules committee on Wednesday ordered the provisions stricken from the Senate measure.

The modified resolution was scheduled for House action yesterday but went over until next week after objections are said to have been raised in Administration quarters. Instead, O'Connor was called before an informal meeting of Ways and Means Democrats, attended by Speaker Bankhead and Majority Leader Rayburn.

O'Connor Adamant.

Following the conference, O'Connor said he was "personally adamant" against withdrawing the rules committee changes but will talk with members of his group today and hold a full committee meeting Monday. He said the original provisions would virtually reverse the Congressional attitude against tax publicity.

Meanwhile, the Ways and Means Committee, by a strictly party vote of 18 to 7, ordered a favorable report on the Administration's two-year extension of more than $500,000,000 in so-called nuisance taxes.

Outstanding among the levies to be extended are the Federal gasoline tax, netting the Government about $180,000,000 annually, and the 1-cent addition to first-class postage, producing nearly $100,000,000 a year.

Republicans on the committee voted unanimously against any extension of the taxes, and some Democrats joined them on a few of the individual items.

Pledge Held Violated.

Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the committee, said the proposed extension (the third since their enactment) was "in violation of the pledge made to the American people in 1932 that they would be allowed to expire at the end of two years."

He said the extension "would be wholly unnecessary if the Administration would reduce expenditures by the $500,000,000 which the nuisance taxes raise," and declared they "fall most heavily on those least able to pay."

"The obvious purpose of the two-year extension, rather than one year, is to avoid the necessity for the Administration to pass another extension resolution next year in the face of the Congressional elections," Treadway charged.

He said the Republican minority voted solidly for reduction of the first class postage rate from 3 to 2 cents, and supported unsuccessful motions to eliminate excise levies on soap, gasoline, lubricating oil, sporting goods and mechanical refrigerators.

Shortly before the excise tax extension was approved, Chairman Thomas P. Henry, of the American Automobile Association, made public a letter to Chairman Doughton urging discontinuance of motor excise levies "in behalf of millions of motorists."

Inquiry Not Opposed.

Inasmuch as business conditions are improved, and there are "admitted inequities" in the tax, Henry said, "it appears that 'emergency' now is giving way to 'expediency'."

There was no evidence of any House opposition to the President's proposal to investigate tax dodging in yesterday's continued controversy over the form the investigation should take. The Senate resolution provides for inquiry by a joint Senate and House committee.

Commented O'Connor following yesterday's leadership conference:

"The fundamental fallacy is this: The Ways and Means Committee is the Constitutional authority to conduct the inquiry. There is no need for a joint committee whatever. All the Ways and Means Committee needed was supena power. This resolution merely means the injection of another body, that is entirely unnecessary, into the picture."

O'Connor Stand Outlined.

Throughout yesterday's conference, O'Connor held out against withdrawal of the Rules Committee amendment denying the joint committee power to make public tax information and tax returns. But the resolution still gives the committee power to report this information to Congress.

O'Connor said if the original provision remained, the committee could give out daily tax information elicited from witnesses in executive session. He said this further tied into the other section stricken out by the Rules Committee, which would have permitted the joint group to delegate a Treasury official to conduct hearings in the name of the Congressional committee. If both the provisions remained, O'Connor said, a Treasury employe not only could take testimony in the name of Congress, but make that testimony public.

If the Rules Committee dclines to rescind its modifying action, it was indicated the publicity battle will be fought out on the floor next week, as the Administration is insisting on the original sections.

New Faces in Congress

Watching Vast District Keeps Case, New Legislator, Busy

REP. FRANCIS H. CASE.

South Dakota Republican Has 25 Counties in Territory; Says College Paper Landed Him in Politics; Likes Trout Fishing.

Keen-eyed Representative Francis H. Case (Republican), of South Dakota's vast Second District, took a moment off yesterday during a lull in the House to make a few comments, which centered principally on the vastness of his district and the wide range of interests that it embraces.

Now, he pointed out, the district includes 25 counties—Armstrong, Bennett, Butte, Corson, Custer and so on—and has, among other things to be looked after, two national forests, a national park, an Army post, an irrigation district, a dry lands experiment station, a national soldiers' home, three large land purchase programs, a regional conservation office, a district CCC office and five Indian reservations.

There are mountains and prairies and the largest gold mine in the world. There are bedeviling droughts and alarming dust storms. There are farm problems and invasions by insects, there are road problems and Democrats to bother with. There is little that comes up in Congress—except it be some marine or coastal matter—that doesn't involve him. He is a busy man.

With all the issues that these interests daily incur staring him in the face, the Representative sometimes is waited on by delegations of Indians from one or another of the reservations. Full of feathers and a little indignation, they tell him that they are compelled to eat their horses—and they complain to him of having to walk on sidewalks in Washington; they tell him that they don't like anything they see around here, and then, after they go home, they write many letters urging that he send them copies of all the photographs made of them in Washington, along with the official records quoting their complaining word before the Indian Affairs Committee. The Representative, at times, is a much-beset man.

But of all this, he has only pleasant words. Yesterday, he reaffirmed his stand for a pure representative government. He believes that a Congressman is here to reflect—as nearly as humanly possible—the sentiments of his district. That Case will continue to do.

He scarcely knows how he got into politics, but suspects that his first training came when he was business manager, then editor, of his college paper. Now, he wouldn't come out flatly and say that politics is mixed in the running of a college paper, but he insinuated that a young man might get some ideas there.

He had attended Dakota Wesleyan University and Northwestern University, had served in the Marine Corps during the World War, and then, in 1924, was selected to direct a big Republican campaign in his district. And then, when he decided himself to run for office, he received 34,812 votes to 32,549 for his Democratic opponent.

In private life he is a newspaper editor and publisher. In off moments, he likes trout fishing.

Roosevelt Favors More 'Merit' Jobs

he said, "and because of the great cost of holding these examinations."

Ramspeck originally favored the competitive examination, but he changed his position, he said, in order to get the legislation enacted.

President Roosevelt's plea for the merit system came on the heels of an attack on it by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, on Wednesday.

Nichols, a member of the House District Committee, assailed the "inefficiency and laziness" of civil service employes and proposed that new jobs to be set up in the District Building be noncivil service, so that "we can get work out of them or fire 'em."

Federal Workers Seek to Re-enter Union of Employes

The five lodges of the American Federation of Government Employes that were ousted from the A. F. G. E. by the national convention last September on charges of radicalism yesterday appealed to the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to conduct an investigation "to the end that the five lodges may be offered an opportunity for reinstatement and unity in the labor movement."

The appeal was brought by Railroad Retirement Board Lodge, Public Assistance Division Lodge, Social Security Board Lodge, Farm Credit Administration Lodge and Securities and Exchange Commission Union Lodge.

Aimed at the executive council of the A. F. G. E., the appeal is a seven-point analysis of the experiences of the five unions in their relations with the A. F. G. E. They allege the executive council "illegally deprived" them of representation at the 1936 convention and then expelled them "on vague and unsubstantial charges of radicalism." They allege that their application for a reaffirmation "was afterward denied without even the formality of a hearing."

"These actions," the document declares, "are apparently motivated by a determination to stifle all opposition to their policies and to prevent even the expression of minority views."

$800,000,000 Notes Offered For Treasury

Mounting Deficit Forces Morgenthau to Seek Money in Market.

dropped to $457,000,000 as a result of expenditures running substantially ahead of revenue.

In some quarters the Treasury's decision to borrow $500,000,000 in new money was taken as an indication the present gold sterilization policy would be continued indefinitely and that no change in the price of gold is now contemplated, despite contrary reports from Europe.

Under the gold sterilization policy, the Treasury since last December has borrowed in the money markets, through the issuance of bills, the sums necessary to buy gold sent to this country from abroad. Under this arrangement gold imports do not expand the Nation's currency and credit base.

Since December the Treasury has acquired under this arrangement $793,861,973 of foreign gold. If the present rate of gold inflow continues—and with war scares shaking Europe this is likely—the sterilized or inactive gold stocks of the Treasury will total $1,000,000,000 around August 1. This means that the Treasury needs $100,000,000 or more a month with which to purchase the gold imports.

Stocks Pass 12 Billion.

All Treasury gold stocks yesterday passed the $12,000,000,000 mark, an all-time high, not alone for this country but for any nation in the world. The United States thus has approximately one-half of all the known gold in the world and though this makes this country the richest Nation on earth, the care and handling of this treasure are costly.

Despite the Midas touch which Uncle Sam has acquired, the Federal Government continues to suffer from budget troubles. The Treasury's deficit for the 11 months of this fiscal year totaled $2,377,264,019 as against $2,945,952,433 in the first 11 months of the last fiscal year. On the surface it would thus appear that the Treasury is somewhat better off than it was a year ago.

This is true as far as the figures go, but when these are analyzed there is not much difference between the two years from the viewpoint of establishing budgetary stability. In the first place, despite the diminished need for emergency undertakings, Federal expenditures are greater in the current year than in the corresponding period of last year.

Debt Retirement Lower.

Thus between July 1 and June 1 the Treasury disbursed $6,803,404,361, as against $6,532,693,433. But those figures do not tell the whole story. Included in the latter figure is $392,636,650 for debt retirement, whereas the figure for the current year includes only $101,744,800 for debt retirement. So if debt retirement payments are eliminated, the comparable figures would be expenditures of $6,701,659,561 for the first 11 months of this fiscal year, compared with expenditures of $6,140,057,245 in the same period last year.

Furthermore, repayments to the Treasury by Federal lending agencies, which are offset against expenditures before they are totaled under the Treasury's bookkeeping system, were $150,000,000 greater in the current fiscal year than in the corresponding period of the previous year. Adjustment of the disbursements to take care of these figures would show an even larger increase in expenses this year.

Treasury receipts for the eleven months of this fiscal year, however, show an increase. The sum of $4,426,140,342 was collected in this fiscal year, compared with $3,586,841,461 in the corresponding period of the last fiscal year. Of the increase social security taxes accounted for $199,479,197 while income taxes yielded approximately $494,000,000 more.

A surprising fact is that if the Treasury had made the same debt retirement payments, namely $392,000,000, in the first eleven months of this fiscal year as it did in the corresponding period of the previous year, the total revenue collected would have been less than the ordinary expenses of the Government, excluding the so-called relief and recovery items. As it is, receipts exceeded these ordinary expenditures by $208,000,000.

Baby Is Found Dead.

Winchester, Va., June 3.—Jaquelyn Juanita Jackson, aged three months, was found dead in her crib yesterday afternoon by her mother, Mrs. Edward C. Jackson. A physician stated the child probably died of an internal hemorrhage. Final rites for the child were conducted this afternoon.

reserves before devaluation of leading currencies.

Record offerings were reported in the London bullion markets as private hoarders joined Soviet Russia, Japan and peak production of new metal from mines in the rush for dollars and pounds.

Rumors persisted that leading monetary nations, including the United States, wree planning some step pertaining to the status of the metal, although official quartres lent no support to the talk.

In certain financial circles, however, dehoarding of large stores of privately held gold and sales from Russia were attributed chiefly to belief the world price had gone as high as was probable on the circle of currency devaluations since 1931.

If currencies are entering a prolonged period of stabilization, it was pointed out, there would be little incentive o tcontinued holding of metal in hope of profiting by further currency devaluations since storage charges accumulate and the hoarder loses interest on capital.

A dehoarding movement pivoting on London, has been under way since the French franc, the Dutch guilder and Swiss franc were devalued last fall but offerings have increased of late.

While the British stabilization fund was reported absorbing part of the offerings in London, the major share seemed to be headed for the U. S. Treasury's vaults. More than $25,000,000 engaged aboard this week was taken in England.

Advices received in Wall Street from London said about $10,000,000 in Russian gold had arrived there, with more shipments expected. Whether any of the metal offered today came from that source was not indicated.

London Unsettled.

London, June 3 (AP).—Excitement continued at a high pitch in financial quarters today as a record amount of gold was offered in the bullion market and a fresh crop of rumors caused further unsettlement in securities.

A total of £2,533,000 (equal to $12,475,025) in gold changed hands at 140s 9d (equal to $34.67) a fine ounce, one penny higher than on Wednesday. It was understood the British exchange fund took more than 90 per cent of the metal offered.

Senior Editor To Buy Control Of the Nation

Publisher, Who Disagreed With Paper's Court Stand, to Dispose of Holdings.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—Maurice Wertheim, publisher of the Nation who recently disagreed with the editors of the magazine in their indorsement of President Roosevelt's court reforms, today announced that the publication would be sold to Freda Kirchwey, its senior editor.

Citing the instance in which he and Oswald Garrson Villard, former publisher, took issue with the Nation on the court plan, Wertheim said, "it has become increasingly clear that group control is not effective and that absentee ownership creates an anamolous situation."

After 11 years as a member of the magazine's board, Wertheim created the Civic Aid Foundation in 1935 to buy the Nation, then in financial difficulties, from Villard. Wertheim controls the foundation.

The paper now is self-supporting and several offers have been made for it, he stid. "I believe, however, that its independent character and direction can best be preserved by placing control in the hands of its senior editor * * * one of the truest liberals in the country."

Miss Kirchwey has been associated with the Nation for 16 years. Joseph Wood Krutch and Max Lerner are the other members of the board of editors which has controlled its policies since last October. Editorial associates have been Villard, Alvin Johnson and Heywood Broun.

Aryan, Jew 'Races' Held Non-Existent

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—There is no "Aryan race," the University of Chicago anthropologist, Dr. Day-Cooper Cole, contended today.

And, he held, there is no "Jewish race," either.

"Race is purely a biological differentiation which means a group of people who have certain physical characteristics in common, so definite that they mark this group off from all other groups of mankind, he told an alumni gathering in stressing the discrepancy in the use of the term by scientists on one side and propagandists on the other.

"No anthropologist recognizes a Jewish race, for what was once a nationality is now a religious cast, scattered across the world. The majority of Jews now belong to the Alpine race, although originally they were Mediterranean."

Wallace Repeats Claim He's Mae West's Spouse

Los Angeles, June 3 (AP).—Frank Wallace, New York actor, filed a new court action today repeating his contention he is the husband of blonde, buxom Mae West.

The new complaint replaced one invalidated recently when Superior Judge Robert W. Kenny sustained the actress' demurrer.

Elder, Facing Assault Count, Is Granted Bail

Headmaster's Mystery Slaying Revived at Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

Greenfield, Mass., June 3.—Free on $10,000 bail, Thomas E. Elder, retired dean of Mount Hermon School, tonight faced grand jury proceedings July 12 on a finding of the district court that he be held on a charge of intent to murder a former school associate.

Elder headed for White River Junction, Vt., at the conclusion of a crowded hearing, smiling and non-communicative.

The name of Dr. Elliott Speer, murdered with a shotgun 33 months ago while serving at Mount Hermon, was heard several times during the cross-examination of S. Allan Norton, former cashier of the school, who accused Elder of assault. The Speer slaying never was solved, nor have investigators ever found the weapon used in the slaying.

"Strained Relations.

Norton testified today that relations between himself and Elder had been "strained" during much of their long association at the school.

Charles Fairhurst, defense counsel asked Norton if he ever had any trouble with Dean Elder about looking over his mail.

"No," Norton answered.

Then, he turned to questions concerning Dr. Speer. Fairhurst asked Norton if, prior to Dr. Speer's death in 1934, he ever saw any papers of his that were sealed.

Norton said he didn't recall seeing any.

"Did Dr. Speer ever leave any private papers in the vault?" Fairhurst asked.

"He frequently left a large envelope in the safe," Norton said.

Asked by Fairhurst if he knew whether a large envelope was in the vault when Speer died, Norton answered "I don't know."

"Kiss" Testimony.

Norton told of seeing Elder "kiss" a secretary at the school in 1930 when Dr. H. F. Cutler was headmaster, and of reporting the incident to Dr. Cutler.

The "kiss" testimony brought a retort from Fairhurst during his brief argument.

"In a case as serious as this," Fairhurst said, "there should be stronger evidence to hold a man for the grand jury. You have only the unsupported testimony of Mr. Norton, a man who would deliberately make holes to spy—a man who would sneak against a school associate."

District Attorney David H. Keedy came to his feet with the reply that "Norton was justified, in my opinion, in looking through any hole by what he saw when he looked," and added:

"Kissing a stenographer—has that lingered in Elder's heart all these years so he should come down from New Hampshire and do this to this man?"

Remain Neutral, Pittman Pleads

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee, advised the Nation yesterday preservation of American neutrality in the Spanish conflict requires the "utmost caution and deliberation."

Both the bombing of a German warship and the subsequent bombardment of the Spanish City of Almeria, he said in a radio address, were "violent acts of war," but he added that blame remained to be officially fixed. In view of conflicting reports, he continued, "Our Government should not be influenced to hasty action by the clamor of excitable and thoughtless people."

Washington Man Dies in N. C. Crash

William Deaver English, 24, of Washington, was killed instantly near Henderson, N. C., yesterday when his automobile crashed into a bridge abutment, according to an Associated Press report.

English, with his brother Donald, was on his way to visit his father at Winston-Salem, N. C., when the accident occurred. Donald received numerous cuts and bruises and was taken to a Henderson hospital for treatment.

The dead man is the brother of Henry J. English, an employe of the Government Printing Office, who lives at Rogers Heights, Md.

Explosive-Laden Army Freighter Controls Flames

The transport-freighter Ludington, carrying 1,000 tons of explosives, is proceeding to Cristobal, in the Canal Zone, with the fire in her hold apparently under control, the United States Army Transport Base in New York announced last night.

The Ludington was loaded with high explosives for the fleet, submarine and air bases at Coco Solo. Master of the transport-freighter informed the base at New York that he expected to reach Cristobal this evening sometime.

The base reported the fire was brought under control by piping carbon dioxide into the holds. The blaze was discovered yesterday at 2 a. m. and immediately the hold was sealed.

1936 Incomes To Escape Levy In D.C. Tax Bill

Subcommittee Also Votes to Allow Credits on Payments.

persons and $2,500 for married couples. The first payment will fall due in April, 1938, and will be a tax on income derived during the calendar year 1937 or a fiscal year ending therein.

An abortive attempt was made by Representative Allen (Democrat), of Delaware, to raise the rate on incomes in excess of $50,000.

Proposed 10 Per Cent Rate.

Allen proposed that the rate be 7 per cent on net incomes between $50,000 and $75,000; 9 per cent on incomes from $75,000 to $100,000, and 10 per cent on incomes in excess of $100,000.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, made a substitute motion that the rate be 6 per cent on incomes between $50,000 and $100,000 and 7 per cent on those in excess of $100,000.

As neither would support the other and Chairman Kennedy, the only other member present then, would not support either proposal, the rate was left at 5 per cent on all incomes in excess of $50,000.

Allen indicated, however, he will renew his motion for hiking the rates on the larger brackets when the bill goes before the full committee.

The sub-committee's decision to allow credits for payments of the intangible tax, while generally approved by the District officials, further confused estimates as to the amount of revenue that will be derived from the income levy.

Income Tax Estimates Vary.

Estimates on the income tax alone have varied from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000, whereas the intangible tax now raises about $2,400,000 and is expected to raise up to $1,000,000 more when the law is strengthened as proposed in one of the bills approved by the sub-committee.

Seal pointed out, however, that the original estimate on the Collins income-tax bill, which carried a provision repealing the intangible tax, was $5,000,000.

"If that estimate was anywhere near right," he said, "we are all right."

He also noted that a combination of the intangible and the income taxes will raise more than the income levy alone, as the former tax hits nonprofitable stocks and securities and savings accounts.

Intangible tax credits, he added, will not completely nullify the income tax, as the latter will reach many salaried persons who are exempt from the former.

Delay Forecast.

Although the sub-committee has completed its long inquiry and will be prepared to report to the full committee early next week, it is doubtful whether the latter committee will be ready to act.

Chairman Kennedy of the sub-committee asked that a meeting of the full committee be held next Tuesday so that the bills may be brought to the House floor under a special rule the same week, if possible.

Chairman Mary T. Norton of the full committee, however, stated she will be out of the city until Friday and that she wanted to be present when the tax measures are acted upon.

She is prepared to object to portions of the tax program and to propose either substitution of a sales tax for the income levy or a hike of 20 cents in the real estate tax.

Firemen Stand By While Blast Rocks U.S. Experimental Farm

Visiting Chiefs Learn How Small Amounts of Grain Dust Cause Destruction; Methods of Control by Ventilation Shown.

About 250 visiting firemen yesterday had the rare opportunity of enjoying a series of spectacular blazes without making a move to extinguish them.

The firemen were members of the Eastern Association of Fire Chiefs in tenth annual convention in Washington. The flames were provided by the Department of Agriculture's dust explosion testing station at Arlington Experimental Farms.

The purpose of the demonstration was to show how fires resulting from dust explosions in plants handling grain can be controlled. The miniature explosions were set off in a hollow metal structure about 30 feet long with an 18-foot tower at one end.

Grain Dust Explodes.

Twice grain dust was placed in cups scattered throughout the structure, blown into clouds by compressed air and ignited by an electric charge. The first time vents were left open for the escaping flames, which provided an impressive display of fireworks without damage to the apparatus. The second time no outlet was left. Fire, smoke and gas burst through the glass panes on one side of the structure, leaving nothing but jagged rims and causing the spectators to retreat in alarm before the shower of splinters.

The two experiments showed how proper venting, by relieving the pressure of the gas and flames in such explosions, prevents damage to the plant. A running commentary was provided by Dr. David J. Price, principal in charge of the chemical engineering division of the Department of Agriculture.

Other demonstrations showed the ease with which dust will ignite when it is dislodged from overhead and falls on burning material. The chiefs next went to Arlington Cemetery, where their president, Chief Ross B. Davis, of Philadelphia, placed a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb.

Review School Tragedy.

Dr. Price also spoke at yesterday morning's meeting. Discussing the New London schoolhouse explosion, he stressed the fact the natural gas which caused it has no odor. He urged that all schools and public buildings use effective malodorants to detect escaping gas.

He believes the recent tragedy was caused by a spark from a switch which ignited fumes accumulated in the basement.

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen greeted the delegates and invited them to accompany Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom on a tour of District firehouses. He assured them they would see all the modern fire-fighting equipment, but could not promise they would be shown the 30-year-old engines.

Admiral Cary T. Grayson could not be present, but James K. McClintock, finance director of the American Red Cross, spoke for him in praise of the work done by firemen in the recent floods.

The fire chiefs will reconvene today at 9:30 a. m. for technical discussions.

Father Happy As Nurse Says 'It's Three Girls'

uate of Haverford College in the class of 1927, a native of Centerville, Md., a member of the St. Alban's faculty for the last seven years.

Once, when the suspense became a bit thick, he strolled down the corridor to a third-floor porch for a smoke. But that cigarette hardly got warm before it was stamped under foot.

It was just 3:45 p. m. when the nurse, Miss Elizabeth Robinson, stepped into the agony chamber and made her fateful announcement, which was garnished with a heartening smile.

"It's three girls. They're doing fine, and so is your wife."

Before Middleton could gain his courage, the nurse had gone back and he had to wait a few minutes before Dr. Willson came in with the news that the girls weighed 5 pounds 14 ounces, 5 pounds 6 ounces and 5 pounds 1 ounce.

In some 30 years of obstetrical practice, they were Dr. Willson's first triplets. When he informed Middleton the family was shipshape that blank smile gave way to a million-dollar grin that tried the capacity of the room.

Middleton, quite pardonably, had sort of hoped for a son. But his wife, he said yesterday between fidgets as the stork fluttered, was partial to girls.

"She often said she would like to have twins," he confided, stamping out a cigarette after a couple of puffs.

And so there came triplets.

No, papa has not decided what the three girls will be named.

Congress Told Wage-Hour Bill Aids 12,000,000

Economist Cites Advantage of Plan; 30-Hr. Week Urged by Industrialist.

committees, endeavored to demolish every argument against a short work-week that could be presented to him.

He related that the impact of the NRA had caused him to think the problem over, and that he had experimented, always successfully, with the 30-hour week ever since.

In the three mills, a 36-hour week prevails in his Georgia mill and a 36-hour and a 40-hour week operate on the average in his two New England mills. The 30-hour week applies, however, to a large number of his employes in certain departments, he said.

Says Production Speeded.

He declared he made good profits despite the fact that none of his competitors have such short work-weeks; that production was increased over long periods and that he used the speed-up system by working employes straight through their six-hour shifts, with but a short respite for soup or milk, furnished them free.

He was particularly emphatic twice. Once Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, asked him if he is a member of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

"No!" roared Johnson scornfully.

Again, when Pepper asked him how long it would be before his industrial colleagues were converted to the short work-week, he declared:

"If you're going to wait until all my colleagues are converted, I'm not even interested in this legislation."

Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), of Alabama, and Representative William Connery, jr (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate and House committees, respectively, joined in adroit questioning of Johnson to bring out his belief it is cheaper to pay higher wages and use shorter work-weeks than to pay high taxes for relief.

Model Town Praised.

Johnson, who said his father "left me with a velvet carpet under my feet," noted he had been a working man himself most of his life, and was without a college education.

Despite his advocacy of the 30-hour week, he said in answer to a question put by Senator John Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, that in his opinion "the establishment of a 30-hour week at one blow, with one gesture, throughout the country, would be very unwise at present, much as I would like to see it done."

He explained numerous industries must be adapted gradually to shorter work weeks.

Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, praised Johnson's model company town in Gainesville, Ga., as "the finest thing of its kind in the South—brick cottages, hardwood floors, electric equipment including refrigerators. He said it was a "beautiful village."

Called Good Investment.

Johnson revealed occupants of the town pay $1 per room per week in rent, and remarked that while the town had been costly to build, its upkeep was small, and that "all in all, it's been one of the finest investments I've ever made."

Henderson's testimony, drawing on his long New Deal background as a Federal economist associated intimately with the NRA, went into results of NRA abandonment at considerable length. NRA industries increased employment 11.4 per cent during the recovery act period, he said, while other industries increased only 4.4 per cent. All gains have been lost to labor since, he showed by statistics, and nearly all industries have lengthened the work-week and lowered, pay-rates since May, 1935.

Income Issue Stressed.

The single dissenting voice yesterday was that of Paul S. Hanway, executive secretary of the National Fiber Can and Tube Association, who objected to the procedural methods of the bill.

He asserted that "it is a matter of profound conjecture whether the proposed methods to accomplish these purposes will not instead reduce income of skilled workers in the present higher wage brackets due to freezing of earning capacity . . . and will not result in confusion comparable to the defunct NRA.

"The bill cannot be carried out throughout the United States without overburdening itself with red tape, detail, slow progress, and finally, disgust."

Do the American people favor national regulation of wages and hours in industry? See the answer as found by Dr. George H. Gallup's American Institute of Public Opinion in next Sunday's Washington Post.

Rent Striker Convicted In Pontiac Eviction Trial

Pontiac, Mich., June 3 (AP).—A jury divided evenly between tenants and property owners convicted a tenant of illegal possession today in the first eviction trial held here since a "rent strike" began June 1.

As a result, Wilbur Jennings, a factory worker, must surrender possession of a four-room apartment to Mrs. Ada A. Cook, the owner, within five days.

15,000 Machinists Quit A. F. of L. to Join C. I. O.

New York, June 3 (AP).—The United Electrical and Radio Workers of America announced tonight more than 15,000 members of the International Association of Machinists in New York, New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania and Connecticut had severed their connections with the American Federation of Labor and moved to affiliate with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

"The action followed an almost unanimous referendum of the members involved," the announcement said. "Similar action is pending throughout the Midwest and West."

Steel Workers Seek Support In Ore Fields

70,000 Miners May Join Gigantic C. I. O. Struggle.

By the Associated Press.

Youngstown, Ohio, June 3.—The steel workers organizing committee reached into the ore fields of Minnesota and Michigan tonight for recruits in its battle for bargaining contracts with three independent steel producers, a drive which reaches into seven States and affects more than 70,000 workers.

Philip Murray, chairman of the militant S. W. O. C. division of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization announced a campaign for members in the ore fields as he came into the Mahoning Valley, criss-crossed with steel pickets, to direct the strike strategy.

At the same time a Committee for Industrial Organization union called a strike in the Canton, Ohio, plant of the Timken Roller Bearing Co., employing 6,000 men. A union official said a dispute over wages was responsible. Several thousand steel workers employed by Republic Steel Corporation previously had been called out in the Canton-Massillon District.

Inquiry Planned.

Announcing the strategic move in the ore fields, Murray said he was advised today that two agents of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee would arrive here soon to investigate his charges that Republic Steel Corporation plants were arsenals, and also "any other interference with the rights of strikers."

Up and down the valley, from Youngstown to Warren, S. W. O. C. organizers spread the message of John L. Lewis' C. I. O. and urged its followers to a new vigilance after the shooting of one picket, Steve John, 55, as he and several others tried to prevent six workers from returning to their jobs in Republic's Warren plant.

Some 400 workers continued to work and live in Republic's strip and tin mills at Niles, Ohio, dependent for their food upon bundles dropped from airplanes.

No break in the seven-State strike affecting some 73,000 workers appeared imminent.

"Strike or Starve."

Additional pickets were moved into Warren and Niles, where the precarious food situation of the workers still in the plants brought forth the picket line slogan "Strike or starve."

The United Rubber Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate, which last night offered its assistance to the striking steel workers, at Canton, only a few miles from Akron, today tied up production in the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.'s No. 1 plant for nearly 22 hours with four sit-downs. Production was resumed late today after nearly 5,000 workers had been affected.

Sherman Dalrymple, president of the Rubber Workers' union, said: "The Akron rubber workers will see to it that Canton C. I. O. members are able to carry their strike to a successful conclusion."

In a statement today, Republic said the "Republic Steel Corporation declines any challenge to settle an industrial dispute by force of arms."

Court Change Must Pass, Says Sen. Robinson

Bill Is Essential, Even if Amended, White House Talk Reveals.

conference would be the movement to have Senator Robinson appointed to the Supreme Court, insisted the matter of appointments had not been discussed.

"And I am not going to talk about appointments now or at any other time," he said.

Any amendments to the court bill would have to be offered on the Senate floor, as the bill already has been ordered adversely reported by the Judiciary Committee. The report probably will be filed some time next week.

A majority of the Senate Judiciary Committee is as much opposed to a two-judge compromise increase in the Supreme Court as they are to the original increase of six, but in the Senate the vote on such a compromise would be admittedly close. Apparently, a straight six-judge increase could be easily defeated in the Senate.

McCarran Now Opposed.

Outstanding advocate on the committee of a two-judge increase formerly was Senator Pat McCarran, of Navada, but McCarran now says he will accept no compromise, and does not think any increase is justified.

Even a two-judge increase still has the House Judiciary Committee gauntlet to run before it could reach the House floor for a vote. This committee, headed by Representative Hatton Sumners, of Texas, is traditionally conservative, and now is heavily opposed to the original court bill.

One reason the compromise route probably was taken was because opponents in the Judiciary Committee of the House had the votes to hold up the six-judge increase indefinitely. It would take a stiff fight to bring a two-judge increase out of the House committee, and it is even possible the petition route would be required. A petition to discharge a committee from further consideration of a measure must be signed by 218 members.

Prepare Adverse Report.

At the Capitol, two of the latest Senate recruits to the court plan opposition yesterday took over the preparation of the Senate Judiciary Committee's adverse report on the court bill.

Because of continued illness of Senator William H. King, of Utah, who has been drafting the hostile report, Senators McCarran and Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, were called to his aid.

McCarran and O'Mahoney, whose commitments against the plan swung a majority of the Judiciary Committee in opposition, will confer from time to time with King on their progress.

Recent Rulings Cited.

The "changes" that have "modified" the situation were taken to be recent Supreme Court decisions in favor of New Deal legislation, as well as retirement of Justice Van Devanter.

Among opposition Senators, Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, said upon hearing Robinson's statement:

"We welcome the opportunity, and the last few days indicate that no modification of the bill will be acceptable to the Senate. There is no doubt that we can demolish the measure, including the section affecting the lower courts."

Senator McCarran said, "So far as I, individually, am concerned, it is a matter of principle and there will be no compromise on my part."

U. S. to Pursue Way of Peace, W. C. T. U. Told

Roosevelt Message Read to Convention by Sayre.

practical and a living fact. May God hasten the day when this spirit shall dominate the whole world."

Sayre Gives Views.

When he had concluded the President's greetings, Secretary Sayre continued his address with some of his own conclusions on the subject of peace.

"There is no more burning issue today," he declared, "than that of war or peace.

"If we would have permanent peace we must build for it. There is no other way. We must delve deeply into the economic, the financial, the social causes which make for war-breeding situations.

"In the last analysis," Secretary Sayre said, "the root causes of war are not inflamed racial hatreds or national prejudices, but underlying economic, financial or other political policies of an non-co-operative nature which in time produce tense problems from which war seems to bellicose minds to offer the only way of escape. * * *

"Today, throughout the world, the standards of living—in many cases the very lives—of whole peoples rest upon a steady inflow of raw materials and foodstuffs and upon a steady sale in foreign markets of their own surplus production."

Thirty-six Nations Represented.

Thirty-six countries are represented at the convention, which will continue through next Tuesday with approximately 2,500 official delegates and members in attendance.

Today's program will include a discussion and reports on "The Situation in the United States," with Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, of New York, a national vice president, as principal speaker.

At the close of their first day's program, the delegates visited Statuary Hall to place a wreath on the statue of Francis E. Willard, organizer of the world union.

Tribute to Miss Willard, the only woman in Statuary Hall, was made by Miss Agnes E. Slack, of London, who praised the W. C. T. U. as the "pioneer in allying many races and nations."

Dr. Ella A. Boole, of Brooklyn, N. Y., president, in her opening address yesterday morning called upon the nutrition department of the League of Nations and on medical schools throughout the world to make a survey of the effects of alcohol on the maternity death rate.

Makes Welfare Plea.

Dr. Boole asserted that any child welfare organization which ignores the prenatal effects of alcohol on children born of drinking parents "fails to accomplish its purpose." She termed the W. C. T. U. a social service organization, and asked all welfare groups to consider its "total abstinence" program.

"We are disturbed over the increase in crime, especially among youth, and we deplore the fact that in a majority of the cases the crimes never would have happened except for alcohol."

Miss Mary B. Ervin, of Ohio, presented reports of intensive temperance training among the youth of 30 nations, and Miss Bertha R. Palmer, of California, reported that alcohol education has been included in a WPA education program in Pasadena.

Despite increased education and intensity of purpose, however, the speakers and delegates at the opening day's meeting reported general world increase in drinking. Especially, it was reported by many delegates, has there been a considerable pickup in the use of alcohol at "social gatherings."

Resolutions on Tuesday.

Resolutions setting forth the plans of the union to combat the increase and to continue work for "prohibition as the best method of dealing with the liquor traffic" will be reported Tuesday.

Among them probably will be one that contains a reference to "Government aid in promoting the rum industry" in the Virgin Islands, according to Mrs. Maskew Miller, of Cape Town, South Africa, superintendent of the department for the protection of native races.

Mrs. Miller said her committee has this question under consideration.

Wagner Act, Lewis Assailed At 'Congress of Enterprise'

Moscow Now Calls Detroit 'Lewistown,' Rep. Hoffman Charges; J. P. Morgan's Nephew Terms Labor Relations Measure 'Unfair.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—Radical union leaders and the Wagner labor relations act were denounced by members of the State and national legislatures today at a "Congress of American Enterprise" sponsored by the New York State Economic Council.

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, accused C. I. O. Leader John L. Lewis of responsibility for the fatal riot of Chicago steel strikers last Sunday and declared the City of Detroit had been renamed "Lewistown" on Moscows' revolutionary map.

The Wagner act and its corollary State law in New York were assailed as one-sided by Assemblyman Laurens M. Hamilton, Republican, nephew of J. P. Morgan. He declared they empowered the Labor Relations Boards to "find the employer guilty of almost anything, but they have no power to find an employe or a labor agitator guilty of even breach of agreement."

Another speaker, State Comptroller Morris S. Tremaine, called for the repeal of the capital gains and loss tax, which he described as "an outstanding extreme in our badly balanced tax system."

Assembled in what its sponsors called a nonpolitical forum on taxth, relief, labor, "the alien menace" and other problems, approximately 500 representatives of business and professional life throughout the State heard Representative Hoffman inveigh against John Lewis "and his Red bedfellows."

Planes Here Get Air-Conditioning

Pre-flight air-conditioning equipment, which completely changes the air in a 21-passenger transport plane in less than 10 minutes, has just been installed at Washington Airport by American Airlines.

The conditioning unit, which is mounted on a truck, will bring the temperature of airplanes standing on the ground from hottest summer weather to 70 degrees; in winter time it will raise the temperature to comfort heat in about the same length of time. Passengers boarding the plane several minutes before the plane takes off have the same comfort they will have later in higher altitudes.

The equipment was recently installed at Washington Airport. Similar equipment will be installed at American Airlines terminals at Chicago, Newark, Boston, Detroit, Nashville and six other cities.

Film Salesman Assaulted Her, Actress Claims

Extra Charges She, 125 Others Lured to Party on Promise of Job.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, June 3.—A young movie actress story that she was plied with liquor at a studio party and then assaulted by a film salesman is under investigation by the district attorneys office, Deputy District Attorney Eugene Williams disclosed today.

Williams refused to name the girl, the accused man or the studio.

He said the girl made her complaint recently, and detectives have just learned the name of the man she accused. He said he was awaiting a report, expected next week, from his investigators, before filing a criminal complaint or placing the case before the grand jury.

"The girl says that she and 125 other extras were given a routine call for work at the studio," Williams said. "She says they all dressed in cowgirl costumes, reported at the studio and were taken to a ranch.

"At the ranch, the girl says, a camp had been built, with a barroom, dance hall and a big dining room.

"She says there was a bottle of whisky and two bottles of champagne on each of the small tables. They discovered then, according to her story, that what they thought was to be a 'mob scene' was to be a party."

Williams said the girl told him about 50 other women, whom she believed were not actresses, joined the party.

"Her complaint says a salesman, whose name she did not know, forced his attentions on her. She says she does not drink, but that he was so persistent, she finally took a sip of whisky. She claims she left the room and sat in an automobile to recover from the effects of the liquor.

"Then, as her story goes, this salesman got in the car with her and began to struggle with her. She says he forced her to submit."

Williams said the girl told him she became hysterical, was treated by a physician at the party, and sent home.

Harlow Reported Out of Danger Now

Beverley Hills, Calif., June 3 (AP).—Jean Harlow, exotic screen star, has been in a critical condition from inflammation of the gall bladder, her mother disclosed today, but the actress now has passed the crisis in her illness.

"I feel like the whole world has been lifted from my shoulders," the mother, Mrs. Jean Bello, exclaimed, near tears, after staying up all night outside her daughter's sick room.

"This baby of mine is quite improved. Her doctor, E. C. Fishbaugh, says she is out of danger."

Autopsy Today In Bathtub Death Of Captain's Wife

An autopsy, to determine the cause of death in the case of Mrs. Lucy E. Purdon, 43, wife of a retired Army captain, who was found dead yesterday in the bathtub of her apartment at 1028 Connecticut avenue, will be conducted this morning by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald at the District Morgue.

Mrs. Purdon's body was found by Mrs. Louise Guest, assistant manager of the apartment, and Capt. Purdon when she had failed to respond to phone calls and raps on the door.

Capt. Purdon, president of the National Homes Exposition, Inc., of New York City, told police he and his wife had been separated for some time. He had called on her Tuesday night and had left her apparently in good spirits.

She is the mother of one child, Lucy Ann Purdon, who is in a school in St. Louis.

Lee Is Called World Statesman At Confederate Memorial Rites

Jefferson Davis Still an Inspiration, Rep. Sparkman Says at Monocacy Cemetery Service in Montgomery County.

Robert E. Lee was a statesman, not of the United States, but of the world, Representative John Sparkman, of Alabama, said at the Confederate Memorial Day services at Monocacy Cemetery, near Beallsville, yesterday. Jefferson Davis remains an inspiration to the young people of today, he said.

Perhaps it was best for the South to lose the Civil War, the speaker declared, because the heroism expressed in hardships and privations has been ingrained in the young people of today.

Tribute to John B. Munger, 95, of Poolesville, veteran of Stonewall Jackson's "foot cavalry" and believed to be the last Confederate veteran in Montgomery County, was paid by Representative David J. Lewis. Pointing to Munger, he said:

"Those ears are not so responsive now but when the call of his battalion came, he heard." Representative Lewis said the Confederates knew how to "fight like the devil and to make up like patriots."

Mrs. J. Collison, president of the Maryland division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, also spoke. Benjamin Allnutt, member of the graduating class at Poolesville High School, read a paper on the history of E. V. White Chapter, U. D. C., sponsors of the celebration. He pointed out that Monocacy Chapel, in which the services were held, was built in 1915 as a memorial to the Confederate soldiers, many of whom rested on its site after the battle of Monocacy.

In keeping with custom cakes were presented to the speakers by two girls of the community, Mary Lee Tipton and Jane Allnutt. The invocation was said by the Rev. E. T. Harrison, pastor of the Poolesville M. E. Church South, and benediction by the Rev. Guy H. Crook, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Poolesville. The combined church choirs furnished the musical program. J. Furr White presided.

Holy Cross Group Elects at Banquet

Miss Regina Hartnett, of the Class of 1930, last night was elected president of the Holy Cross Academy Alumnae Association at the association's annual reunion banquet at the Shoreham Hotel. She succeeds Mrs. Gerald Egan.

Other officers elected were Mrs. Ida Hayes Quin, first vice president; Mrs. Eugenie Lieutaud Widmayer, second vice president; Gwendolyn Dickinson, corresponding secretary; Lucy Hammet, recording secretary; Elizabeth Leech, treasurer; Margaret Batcheler, historian. Those named to the board of trustees were Mrs. Egan, Lillian Kengla Harper, Melita Haardt Link and Helen Casey.

Principal speaker at the banquet was Mrs. H. Winship Wheatley, jr., District head of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae. Mrs. Wheatley outlined the aims of the federation and invited members of this year's graduating class at Holy Cross to join the federation's creative writing class.

90 Pictures Given To Georgetown U. By Dr., Mrs. Scott

A collection of 90 etchings and prints of the most distinguished lawyers and judges of the British Isles was presented to Georgetown University Law School last night by Dr. and Mrs. James Brown Scott. The presentation was made at the class day exercises held at Sixth and E streets northwest, by the graduating class.

The presentation was made on Dr. Scott's seventy-first birthday anniversary, in appreciation of the years he has served on the Georgetown Law School faculty.

Included in the class day exercises themselves were addresses by J. J. O'Conner, of Washington, president of the morning section; Jerome J. Downey, of Washington; Burlin G. McKillip, jr., of New York, and Joseph A. Hoskins, of Missouri. Class prophecies were given by John B. Dennis, of California, and Francis B. O'Mahoney, of New Jersey. William V. O'Connor, jr., of North Dakota, delivered the valedictory.

General Mola Killed as Plane Wrecks in Fog was born in the Philippine Islands while they were Spanish possessions. Doval was noted for his repression of outbreaks in Asturias in 1934.

Some reports said the two pilots were Germans.

Many government leaders considered Mola the ablest general in the enemy camp.

In Bilbao Basque officials, asked to comment on the death of their chief foe, whom they had called "the destroyer of Guernica and Durango," replied only, "May God have mercy on his soul."

Spain's "Most Hated Man."

As director general of police and organizer of a police and spy system with a terrorist character under the first Fascist dictatorship of Gen. Primo de Rivera, Emilio Mola Vidal was known as "the most hated man in Spain."

During his tenure of office his agents ferreted out republicans, labor agitators and "illegal" organizations and meted out punishment with a coldness comparable to the rule of the medieval Medicis.

Mola was 50 years old at the time of his death. He was a professional soldier, fought in the Moroccan campaign of 1925 and was decorated for valor under fire.

Vigorous leader of the Carlist detachments in the northern rebel army now driving hard on Bilbao, Mola was one of the five leading plotters of the bloody revolt that flared last July. The others were Gens. Franco, Sanjurjo, De Llano and Gil Robles. Sanjurjo, the real leader, was killed in an airplane crash at the outset on a flight from Lisbon to Madrid; De Llano heads the southern army; Gil Robles is the political front.

A monarchist, who looked upon Alfonso as a "usurper," Mola, like the other Carlists, was a traditionalist. He was the champion of a rigid Catholicism firmly established as the official state religion and an absolutist monarchy unchecked by parliamentary control. His Requetes, with their red berets and green arm-bands decorated with a red cross, are basically opposed to the Spanish Fascists, yet they constitute a strong factor in the insurrection and now permit themselves to be called "Nationalist Fascists."

Mola was tall, dark and wore horn-rimmed spectacles. He was looked upon as Franco's right-hand man and his logical successor.

Basques Claim Big Victory.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, June 3 (AP).—Bilbao's defenders in a furious surprise attack sent their insurgent foes reeling back more than 6 miles from Lemona, vital highway junction, a Basque communique reported tonight.

Lemona, about 8 miles southeast of Bilbao, and a range of hills overlooking it were recaptured, the Basques reported, and the government forces pressed on against new lines the insurgents established some distance southeast of Amorebieta.

Britain Offers Program.

London, June 3 (AP).—Great Britain today submitted a three-point program for drawing Germany and Italy back into the non-intervention patrol of warring Spain.

The proposals, sent to France, Germany and Italy were: (1) That safety zones for neutral ships be established in Spanish waters. (2) That the Spanish government and insurgent leaders be asked to guarantee protection of warships of the patroling powers. (3) That Britain, France, Italy and Germany confer immediately if a warship in the patrol is attacked.

Six Rebel Planes Shot Down.

Valencia, June 3 (AP).—Six rebel planes were shot down in a half-hour aerial battle between 25 rebel Fiat planes and a large number of government ships on the central front, the government announced tonight.

Elliott Authorizes RA to Lend Cash To Pants Factory

By the Associated Press.

The Resettlement Administration received permission yesterday from Richard N. Elliott, the acting Comptroller General, to lend Federal funds to a co-operative for the establishment of a pants factory.

Elliott approved a proposed $65,000 loan to a co-operative formed by residents of the Westmoreland homestead project at Mount Pleasant, Pa. The Westmoreland project is a community established by the New Deal's now liquidated subsistence homesteads agency to care for 250 families stranded by the slackening of coal mining operations.

The acting comptroller's decision recalled that his predecessor, J. P. McCarl, whose term expired last summer, had refused steadfastly to permit use of Federal funds for a factory at Arthurdale, W. Va., another community of "stranded" families in which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was interested.

Elliott explained, however, that the present proposal is for a loan to a co-operative while the previous one was for a direct Federal expenditure.

Milo Perkins, assistant administrator of resettlement, said yesterday's ruling had been requested merely to test the authority for the loan.

Reich Speeds More of Navy Toward Spain

Mystery Fleet Leaves as 60 Nazi Warships Pass Through Kiel Canal.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 3.—More German

Berlin, June 3 (AP).—More German naval craft sped toward Spanish waters tonight to crush any new Spanish government attack on German vessels.

Just what ships were on the way was not clear. First, an official statement said the torpedo boats Tiger and Iltis had departed; then the official German news agency, asking newspapers to withdraw that announcement, declared instead "parts of the third torpedo boat flotilla" had gone.

The newspaper Nachtausgabe, asserting the dispatch of the units was known to foreign governments well in advance, said:

"The sending of warships is an act of self-defense which, however, does not mean that Germany, on principle and forever, declines to co-operate in international control or help advance measures for securing peace."

The newly departed vessels followed a fleet of German submarines which left yesterday to reinforce the German warships already in Spanish waters.

Fleet Goes Through Canal.

(At Malmo, on the southern tip of Sweden, it was reported a German naval detachment of 60 units moved through the Kiel Canal last night, traveling westward.

(The canal cuts through Germany south of Denmark. Vessels pass from the Baltic Sea to the North Sea via the canal without going around Denmark.)

The German fighting ships near Spain were acting outside the scope of the international nonintervention committee. Originally sent to Spanish waters to form a part of the four-nation patrol, which was designed to keep foreign arms and volunteers out of Spain by peaceful means, they remained when the Reich quit the neutrality group Monday after the bombing of the German pocket battleship Deutschland by Spanish government planes.

Duce, Blomberg Talk.

Rome, June 3 (AP).—Premier Mussolini today piloted Reichsfuehrer Hitler's war minister through a realistic display of Italy's military power and then the two laid plans for Italo-German collaboration in the Spanish War and wars to come.

The German visitor was Field Marshal Werner von Blomberg. Here chiefly to confer on the Spanish crisis, he scouted the strength Italy can muster alongside that of Germany. Much of it he saw from an airplane with Il Duce himself at the controls.

First he was taken to the huge experimental aviation station at Guidona. Next Il Duce took him aloft in a great tri-motored plane to watch the Italian air armada destroy a simulated naval base. Then he went to the new Mussolini sports forum to see a military-gymnastic demonstratoin by Fascist youth organizations.

Ambassador William Phillips was hopeful and confident the latest crisis in the Spanish civil war will be liquidated without further complications.

Phillips made a visit to the Italian foreign office arranged a week ago to discuss other matters, but brought up the Spanish question informally.

three found in Keene's vest pocket was made in Baltimore by Sergt. Marlin Brubaker, of the Maryland State police.

The bullet that was fired into Keene's neck near the Adam's apple and entered his brain, Sergt. Brubaker reported, must have been discharged from either a Smith and Wesson or a Harrington and Richardson .32-caliber revolver.

Keene Had .35-Caliber Gun.

Brubaker has been under the impression Keene once owned a .32-caliber revolver and that this had disappeared. He said last night, however, that Lieut. Charles F. Keene, jr., son of the dead man, told him the weapon owned by his father was not a .32 caliber, but a .35-caliber Smith and Wesson automatic.

According to the widow, Keene sold the gun a year or more ago.

Those who believe Keene committed suicide have attached great importance to the bullets found in his vest. They felt that if these were mates to the one found in his skull, then the case for suicide was strengthened considerably.

However, those who believe Keene was murdered regard the bullets in an entirely different light. They ask this question: Couldn't the murderer have put the three spare bullets in Keene's vest pocket?

Murder Belief Refuted.

And the pro-suicide theorists answer this with another question: Why should a killer put the bullets in Keene's vest pocket when he just as easily could have thrown them out the window of the stateroom on the Norfolk and Washington night boat from which Keene disappeared May 14.

Fire-Swept Ship Limps for Manila

Manila (Friday), June 4 (AP).—The German freighter Oliva, crippled in stormy waters by fire which injured three crew members, limped toward Manila under her own power today.

The German steamer Friderun, which sped to the rescue with the Dutch steamer Tjikarang, messaged the Associated Press that the five injured men had been taken aboard the Tjikarang.

The Friderun reported she was piloting the Oliva, whose bridge was destroyed by flames in the China Sea yesterday. The vessels expected to dock here by 8 p. m. (7 a. m., E. S. T.).

The message did not mention the fire, leading shipping men to believe the Oliva's crew, reported to have twice abandoned and returned to the ship, had controlled the flames.

Senate Urged To Curb Rail Holding Firms

Truman, Head of Inquiry, Seeks Legislation to Halt 'Looting.'

By the Associated Press.

Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, said yesterday Congress should legislate quickly to halt the looting of railroads and "glaring misuses of the public's money" by New York financiers.

Truman made his statement on the Senate floor prior to a session of the Senate committee investigating railway finances. He is acting chairman of the committee.

Six months of inquiry has disclosed, he said, that laws have been "deliberately evaded and sometimes broken by railroad holding companies." He said such companies were devices to "go around regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission."

A few minutes after he left the Senate floor, Truman heard testimony before his committee the Van Sweringen transportation system, greatest of the Nation's holding company networks, had rescued the management of the Chicago Great Western Railroad during the depths of the depression by extending a $4,000,000 loan:"

Carriers Are "Football."

At another point, Patrick H. Joyce, president of the Chicago line, testified that the carriers "are being used as a football by holding companies and everybody else," and said he would welcome remedial legislation.

The Van Sweringen setup was bitterly criticized by Truman in his Senate speech as a maze of holding companies "too complicated even for the New York bankers to untangle."

These pyramided holding companies have made it possible for persons with a "shoestring investment" to control America's greatest railway system, he asserted, noting command of the Van Sweringen enterprises has been sold several times within the last two years for relatively small sums.

"Control of 23,000 miles of railroad with $2,500,000,000 of assets has been bandied about like a plug horse," he declared hotly.

Robert R. Young, New York broker who now dominates the network, put up only $255,000 of his own money for the controlling common stocks, Truman said. This, he added, was about one-hundredth of 1 per cent of the system's value.

"That's like buying control of $25,000 for $2.55," he remarked.

The Missouri Senator observed Americas first train robbery was committed on the Rock Island line by Jesse James, who "used a gun and a horse and got up early in the morning."

Make Hair Grow while the sun shines"

"It is a well known phenomenon that in the summer the growth of hair is more rapid," says Dr. Arnold Lorand, Vienna Dermatologist.

THAT Hair grows faster in the summer than at any other season is an established scientific fact. You can take advantage of this seasonal peculiarity by starting Thomas' hair and scalp treatment at once.

Your hair will respond more quickly to this famous proved method of treatment now than at any other time. Within an unusually short time your dandruff will disappear, hairfall will stop, and new hair will actually be visible on the thin and bald spots. Call at the Thomas' office and talk your problem over with the specialist in charge. He will gladly examine your scalp without charge or obligation and frankly tell you what Thomas' treatment can do for you.

Edward and Wallis, Wed at Last, Board Special Train for Honeymoon

Dual Ceremony Unites Couple At Old Chateau

She Pledges to 'Obey' as Police Repress Crowds; 50 Guests Present.

remarking to Ladbrooke, "I hope to see you in Austria."

The newlyweds occupied the middle cabin—the largest—of the rose-decorated special car.

Departure of the train was held up nine minutes because one of the couple's dogs escaped from a maid in the confusion of transferring from the automobile.

As the duke and duchess hurried across the station platform, the duchess noticed she had left a hat in the car. The maid, who held the leashes of two dogs, was sent to get the hat. When she dashed back, one of the dogs slipped its leash and scurried about the platform.

On the drive from the Chateau de Cande ,the duke disclosed, his car and a truck with baggage lost their way, nearly missing the train connection.

Wed at Last.

Chateau de Cande, Monts, France, June 3.—Edward, Duke of Windsor, and Wallis Warfield, the blue-eyed lady he preferred to a crown, came to the wedding crossroads of romance today—contented winners in an epoch's struggle.

A French civil service and an Anglican altar—won at long last—started life anew after 40 for the man who was King and the woman who could never be Queen, or even "Royal Highness."

The scene was behind the old walls and the spired turrets of this sixteenth century chateau in romantic Touraine—a chateau borrowed from an American. The time was noon.

A "poor man's parson," and his last-minute will to fill the office his bishops shunned, made it a Church of England wedding, gave Edward and his thrice-wed bride the blessing of a faith of which—until December 10—he was the nominal master.

Royalty, Official Banned.

But the frigid hand of government Britain lay on the union until the last. The bare half-hundred within sight or hearing of the service found among its ranks no member of British royalty and no Briton in official role. And, by decree of the King, George VI, whom Edward's abdication elevated, today's Duchess of Windsor may never bear the title "Her Royal Highness."

But if this mattered today, it found no mirror in the boyish face of Edward, 43 this month, and Wallis, just two years younger.

She gladly chose a prayer book for her wedding bouquet; a dress of blue—"something new"—to wear. And ahead lay an ardent search for happiness on the honeymoon trail to the Carinthian castle of Wasserleonburg in Austria, a place of dim memories of a "Lady Blubeard," but in a setting of fairyland.

Before the skies were gray with dawn over the old chateau today there were throngs nearby from far and near, moving along the winding country road that passes the iron gates of this court of content.

Then, at the waning of a pale half moon and the first break of morning light, truckload upon truckload of gendarmes descended on the castle area. They stiffly set about keeping all but wedding guests a half mile away—despite the French law that makes a civil marriage a public event.

Suddenly, postcard hawkers added a dowdy and carnival touch to the crowd outside. They marketed stacks of glossy prints that pictured Edward, his bride and the castle.

"Get your souvenirs!" they bellowed.

The folding night-time blinds on the lofty windows of Cande were up early. Sleepy-eyed servants were about the chores of "the day." Pale wisps of smoke from the kitchen chimney pots told of brewing coffee, frying eggs for the guests, many of them Americans.

There were sightseers on the road from Germany, Italy, Switzerland and The Netherlands. There were English folk and Frenchmen from Paris and the rolling farms nearby.

Wears "Wallis Blue."

The interior of the old chateau was a riot of color, offsetting the formal attire of Edward and the men bidden to his wedding.

Mrs. Warfield's wedding gown was of the blue that Edward adores —"Wallis blue"—and the frocks of the women guests and the masses of flowers that made a bower of each historic room ran the range of the rainbow.

Thirty-three chairs were placed in the music room, scene of the religious or second ceremony, an index of the comparatively small scale of the service that would have been an immense pageant were Edward still king and Wallis his bride-queen. There were 15 more seats for the chateau staff in the adjacent library.

It was far removed from London's Westminster Abbey and the winding streets where, on May 12, wended the coronation pageant that might have been Edward's.

First of the role of supporting actors in today's romantic tableau was the Mayor of Monts, pudgy Dr. Charles Mercier, peering near-sightedly through his heavy-lensed spectacles, to read the civil ceremoney in French and hear the answering, low-voiced "Oui!" from the former monarch and his mate. That was in the big salon, before official witnesses and men from the newspapers.

Then it fell on Mayor Mercier to proclaim, with all the dignity of time and place:

"Au nom de la loi, je vous declare unis par les liens du marriage." ("In the name of the law, I declare you united by the bonds of marriage.")

Then to the music room! Flowers banked the sedate chamber furnished in the style of Louis XVI . . . a room just 18 by 23 feet, tiny compared to the salons of Buckingham Palace.

But it is one of the finest rooms in the castle, the French home of New Yorker Charles E. O. Bedeaux, which looks out so majestically over the surrounding valleys.

In the more spacious oak-paneled library, across from a thirteenth century alabaster of the crucifixion, was the pipe organ under the weaving fingers of Marcel Dupre, the French master.

There was "obey, love, honor, serve and keep" for Wallis Warfield to say in the Anglican ceremony, its grave, beautiful phrases so familiar to the English-speaking world: ". . . in sickness and in health" . . . "keep thee only unto her" . . . "keep thee only unto him" . . . "so long as ye both shall live . . ."

Carefully Rehearsed.

And two humbly kneeling figures, two bowed heads . . . "this man and this woman" . . . "whom we bless in thy name" . . . "may they ever remain in perfect love and peace together" . . . "and live according to thy laws, through Jesus Christ our Lord. . . . Amen."

Carefully rehearsed beforehand, the civil service in the salon and the religious service, following immediately, were timed to last about half an hour, beginning at exactly 11:30 a. m. (5:30 a. m. E. S. T.).

Then the wedding breakfast, around the great cake with its frosted roses (Edward stopped the chef from topping this piece de resistance with a glittering miniature crown).

The chosen guests, or those who could accept, heard first in the salon the two questions of Mayor Mercier: One apiece, calling for the simple answer "Oui." Thereby, in the simple French code, the man promises to provide; the woman to obey and follow; together they pledge each other "fidelity, support, assistance."

To give the bride in marriage and to act as her witness was Herman L. Rogers, of Hyde Park, N. Y., and the Riviera, Mrs. Warfield's host at Cannes after she fled England during the December abdication crisis.

The duke's best man and witness was Maj. E. D. Metcalfe, one of his former equerries.

D. C. Friend Praises Liberalism Of Vicar Who Married Edward

Dix Price, Who Met 'Poor Man's Parson' Abroad, Not Surprised.

The Rev. Dr. Anderson Jardine, the "poor man's parson", who braved ecclesiastical wrath to make peace with his own conscience and do right by his former King, has at least one champion in Washington to commend him for his "liberalness and broadmindedness."

He is 25-year-old Dix W. Price, clerk for the Senate Judiciary Committee, who in 1931 met the now-famous vicar of St. Paul's, Darlington.

"It was a very unusual experience," Price commented yesterday. "I was touring England in the interests of the Mormon Church, Everywhere there were frowns cast in my direction. People I called on would say: 'Better not let our vicar see you.' You see, Mormonism is still a bugaboo to a good many people. And the dour English vicars had turned stony glances toward me."

And then Price happened on Darlington. There was nothing unusual about the town to distinguish it from other towns. Its church—St. Paul's—was old, to be sure. But age was usually associated with stern uncompromise and deep-set traditions. At least so it seemed to Price and a companion as they set out to call on people in their homes for the purpose of correcting misrepresentations about the Church of Latter Day Saints.

But—imagine his surprise when the first resident said: "Our vicar would certainly like to see you; you surely must call on him."

And it was not only the first, but the second and so on, until finally a lady volunteered to take them to the vicarage.

Jardine was there, middle-aged, partly bald and rotund. There was a smile on his face, his arms were outstretched and he invited his visitors in for "a spot of tea" and muffins.

DIX W. PRICE.

Over their teacups and late into the afternoon they talked. Jardine proved amazingly tolerant, Price said. To him there was "no great difference between the myriad religious creeds, "since all missionaries are working for the same common good."

Price does not remember everything they talked about. There was no hint of a constitutional crisis then, no talk of a woman named Wallis Warfield. But as they talked and as shadows lengthened around the ancient church and a deep hush fell over the historic pews through which they had strolled, Price became moreand more convinced that he had met "a most unusual man."

He still thinks so. As for the vicar's dramatic eleventh-hour dash to the Chateau de Cande to unite Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, Duke of Windsor, and "the woman I love," Price merely said, "I am not at all surprised."

Another House Revolt.

Unlike the Senate, the House has shown a marked unwillingness to approve, in its original form, the joint resolution authorizing investigation of tax evasion and avoidance. The pressure exercised by Administration spokesmen to bring the recalcitrants into line is equivalent to an admission that the investigation is designed to make life very unpleasant for certain large taxpayers.

The Congressmen who have refused to rubber-stamp the resolution, as written for their indorsement, strongly object to the section permitting officers or employes of the Treasury, with the authorization of the investigating committee, to hold hearings and take testimony. They also wish to restrict the right of investigators to make tax returns public.

It would, indeed, be intolerable if an employe of the Treasury, acting as an investigator, were to journey about the country taking testimony from witnesses summoned to appear and make such testimony public at his discretion. Yet that might happen, as the resolution stands. If the Administration is simply seeking to plug holes in the tax laws, it can do so without resorting to any sensational disclosures or beating of tom-toms.

The House "rebels" are entirely sympathetic with the general program. They merely want assurance that the investigation will not degenerate into a "head-hunting" expedition that would violate all rules of fairness and decency. Furthermore they object to the irregular way in which the proposal was introduced and the attempt to rush it through without giving time for adequate debate.

This is the kind of revolt that does credit to legislators. It is to be hoped that their sturdy stand will find support when the issue comes up for a vote.

Japan's New Cabinet.

In accepting the mandate to form a new cabinet, Prince Fumimaro Konoye declared it was his aim to "liquidate all rivalries between various forces at home" and to govern "in conformity with the spirit of national unity."

Whether he will succeed in that ambitious endeavor remains to be seen. But there is no mistaking the fact that the government which he has succeeded in forming is much broader based than was that of his predecessor, Gen. Senjuro Hayashi. While still predominantly "nonpolitical," in the sense that it is not dominated by politicians, his cabinet does include one representative from each of the two major political parties. This is a departure from the policy of the last government. Premier Hayashi's collaborators were either militarists or bureaucrats.

The presumption is, therefore, that under pressure from the imperial court, the industrial and financial interests and the major parties in the Diet, the army extremists agreed to retreat from their intransigeant position and accept a compromise. Yet it would be a mistake to imagine that their power has been curbed to any considerable degree. For the time being they are apparently willing to share the government with civilians. But the army budget, which the Diet will soon be called upon to approve, is likely to indicate that this retreat on their part is largely tactical.

In this connection it is interesting to note that there has been no change at the war ministry. That key post will continue to be occupied by Gen. Sugiyama, who not long ago threatened the Diet with "drastic measures" if the parties continued to filibuster against cabinet bills. It is also something of a concession to the army that the new foreign minister is to be former Premier Koki Hirota, who has the approval of the army chiefs.

Hirota's return to office is not, however, likely to result in any substantial change in the more moderate policy toward China recently assumed by Japan. When foreign minister before, Hirota did, it is true, make far-reaching demands on the Nanking government which, had they been accepted, would have made China a satrapy of the island empire. Yet, by and large, Hirota showed himself to be a man of peace. Moreover, China today is in a much better position than it was a year and two years ago to resist Japanese aggression. And Japan has begun to learn that the bayonet is by no means an ideal instrument of policy.

The Konoye cabinet is obviously transitional in its nature. The period of complete nonparty government is temporarily over. On the other hand, the day is still distant when the Diet will be in a position to reassert its authority over the cabinet. For the time being, however, the new cabinet is probably the best that can be had. At least it may give Japan a period of relative political calm after some months of turbulence and confusion.

The Message On Power.

In a message to Congress President Roosevelt yesterday recommended the creation of eight regional agencies to function within as many drainage areas, including almost the entire country. Excepting the TVA, the Columbia Valley Authority and the Mississippi River Commission, which have work already cut out for them, these new agencies would devote themselves for the time being to "developing integrated plans to conserve and safeguard the prudent use of waters, water-power, soils, forests and other resources" of their respective areas. In other words, the President's plan is presented in the guise of a water control and general conservation program.

If that is its real objective, it is difficult to understand why Congress is being urged to set up expensive administrative machinery at once, merely for the sake of working out new plans. We already have on paper comprehensive plans for dealing with the problems created by droughts, dust storms and floods.

Drainage basin studies have been made, for instance, by experts for the National Resources Committee in co-operation with State planning boards and Federal agencies. The Great Plains area was also recently made the subject of extensive investigation. In fact, a vast amount of information is available to guide governmental agencies in expending public funds wisely. Unfortunately these plans are frequently forgotten when appropriations are actually being made.

Light is thrown on the obscurities of the President's message, however, by Senator Norris' bill to set up the new administrative agencies. The purpose of the Norris bill is quite plain; it is designed to commit the country to a national power policy of the TVA type by establishing the machinery of control before the projects to be managed are brought into being.

Each authority, the Senator explains, is "directed to generate electricity wherever the same can be done—consistent with the improvement of navigation and flood control—to build transmission lines, to transmit electricity thus produced and sell the same to States, municipalities and farm organizations." Such elaborate organization, in anticipation of future administrative needs, seems decidedly premature. Moreover, it calmly ignores constitutional doubts regarding the validity of such invasions into the private power business.

The appearance of Senator Norris as sponsor of the President's program creates a strong suspicion that the emphasis placed upon the problems of flood control and soil erosion is largely camouflage. Toward the close of his message, indeed, the President said: "Provision should be made for the effective administration of hydroelectric projects which have been or may be undertaken as part of a multiple purpose watershed development. The water-power resources of the Nation must be protected from private monopoly and used for benefit of the people."

As a general statement, no exception can be taken to this opinion or to the emphasis placed upon tying our power policies into our plans for conserving and utilizing all our natural resources to best advantage. The President's expressed desire to integrate regional planning, to start from the bottom and co-ordinate the problems of local government through Federal agencies is entirely commendable. But that is not the kind of planning which Senator Norris is trying to impose upon unprepared communities, presumably with the President's approval. His bill is plainly intended to "TVAize the Nation" as the protesting private utility groups maintain.

If that is not the purpose of the President, if he really wishes to leave Congress free to determine a power policy on the basis of more extended experience, there can be no need at this time for eight power authorities.

A Pleasing Sequel.

If any be needed, final proof of the complete futility of the "red rider," now repealed, may be found in the statement of the Board of Education published Wednesday. Indeed, it is a restatement—a restatement of educational policy, issued to guide teachers still confused as to how far they should go in discussing foreign political systems in their classrooms.

The important word in the statement is "intelligent." It occurs in the following: "The essential outstanding purpose of an American public school system is the education of our youth for intelligent and loyal citizenship." More than loyal citizens are needed if this Nation is to survive, a point overlooked by many "red rider" enthusiasts. Citizens who understand the forces at work in the world as well as the virtues of the democratic system are the foremost bulwarks of free government. Without such understanding a people under stress may become easy prey for the first demagogue to reach them.

To mold the rising generation of Washington into citizens in the first instance intelligent, the Board of Education directs its teachers to conduct studies in "all forms of government . . . and especially . . . our ideals of democratic government under a constitution." A stern warning is added, however, that the board will tolerate no teaching "which has the purpose or effect, directly or indirectly," of indoctrinating students with political philosophies antagonistic to that of the United States.

Under these orders and this warning, any teacher worthy of the name should tend naturally to train young minds to grasp the comparative superiority of a democracy. Only from such intelligent procedure can intelligent loyalty be derived. No quantity of "red riders" could ever produce the constructive type of citizenship at which our public schools aim.

One Serious Defect.

Representative Kennedy's sub-committee appears, on the whole, to have worked out a satisfactory tax program for the District. As if to expiate for previous delay, this group has really labored over the tax bills during the last week. Some objections may still be raised against its proposals. But the committee seems to have made a conscientious effort to eliminate Washington's prospective deficit without imposing new hardships upon any class of taxpayers.

Defeat of the sales tax in the committee was a good day's work. Likewise, that body appears to have withstood demands for an increase in the already burdensome tax on real estate. Its proposed inheritance tax, motor vehicle weight tax, the increased levy on insurance premiums, the business privilege tax and income tax will give the District a more comprehensive revenue system than it has ever had.

Fortunately the sub-committee eliminated the provision making the levy on incomes retroactive to 1936. Attempts to tax income that has been collected and spent without taxation are never satisfactory. The sub-committee has displayed a great deal of courage, moreover, in applying the income tax to the salaries of Congressmen. If other nonresidents deriving their income from Washington are to be taxed, with exemptions only to offset income taxes paid to the States, that levy should certainly apply to members of Congress. This provision will afford a severe test of Congressional enthusiasm for higher District taxes.

The most unsatisfactory part of the program is the failure to repeal the obsolete intangible property tax. Only one excuse can be offered for maintaining this unscientific levy upon the statute books in the past—the absence of an income tax. If incomes are now to be directly taxed, it will be impossible to justify retention of an exorbitant levy upon savings. The sub-committee proposes to allow deduction of any sum paid under this law from the amount due in income taxes. But that would not relieve persons with incomes too small to be taxed from paying unreasonable rates on savings accounts.

Apparently the Commissioners and some members of Congress fear that the District might be left in desperate straits if this law should be repealed and the income tax should be declared unconstitutional. That possibility seems to be remote. But even if the income tax should fail, the situation could readily be corrected by further legislation. By far the greater danger is that if this premium upon dishonesty is left on the statute books now, it will remain there for years to come.

One of the chief advantages of the bills proposed, aside from the immediate question of raising needed revenue, is that they tend to distribute the tax burden more equitably. This long awaited reform will remain conspicuously incomplete, however, if the District clings to a discredited revenue measure that virtually all other local governments have long since discarded.

Music Loses A Champion.

With the passing of Richard Aldrich, music critic emeritus of the New York Times, American journalism has lost one of its most authoritative writers in the field of the arts and American music has been bereft of one of its staunchest champions. As a colleague of James Gibbons Huneker, Henry Taylor Parker and Henry Edward Krehbiel, he was one of the distinguished group of musical commentators who, at the beginning of the century, maintained the standards of criticism at a high level and exerted an incalculable influence upon public taste. For more than 50 years his judgments have been esteemed and his pronouncements have had weight in the formation of popular opinion.

Since his voluntary retirement from active reviewing in 1924, he had held the unique position of critic emeritus, supervising the musical policy of the Times and contributing articles as the spirit moved him. In his youth a pupil of John Knowles Paine, he brought to his critical appraisements a thorough knowledge of music as well as a perceptive mind. His conception of the critic's function was based on idealism and sincerity, and he strove not for his own aggrandizement but for the furtherance of artistic principles. Unshakeable in his adherence to standards, he was severe toward pretension and tolerant toward honest effort.

It's Not So Funny.

From the New York World-Telegram.

Having failed in three previous attempts, Representative John Ridley Mitchell (Dem.), Tennessee, has again introduced a bill to abolish the allowance of 20 cents a mile which Congress votes each session to each member for travel to and from Washington. And again his bill has been pigeonholed in committee.

Other Congressmen regard Mr. Mitchell's one-man campaign against a time-hallowed congressional custom as amusing and harmless.

What respectable reason is there, after all, for letting Senators and Representatives take $220,000 a year for travel that costs less than $50,000? Why shouldn't they get their actual expenses, and no more? We think this bill should be taken from its pigeonhole and passed.

Government Guards.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During these last holidays the guards of the Smithsonian Institution have served and protected approximately 50,000 constituents of the Congressmen now on Capitol Hill and I feel sure they (the constituents) would heartily approve any help their representatives would give us.

The public visiting the Smithsonian buildings always seems very much surprised to learn that the Government guards with the responsibilities of the Smithsonian guards are paid the trifling sum of $1,200 per year minus 3½ per cent reduction for retirement. Why can't it be arranged for this indispensable branch of the Government service to live instead of barely existing.

I often wonder how some of the high paid Government officials who keep salaries down would feel if their check was for only $48.25 each first and fifteenth of the month, especially if they had a wife and two or more children to care for. But, of course, their check is not for any such inadequate amount, therefore, why should they worry?

If some of our Representatives would only investigate the deplorable conditions of the Government guard forces in and around the District, I feel sure they would see the human side and better our conditions. R. A. BRANTLEY.

"Africa The Goal."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent the crisis in Europe, the newspapers are publishing the current developments. It is well that we understand the underlying cause for a definite idea. Communism and fascism are not the main factors. According to my point of view, it is the supply of natural resources which Germany and Italy need most especially.

Both Hitler and Mussolini are striving with the similar purpose. Africa is the object. Unless England relinquishes the colonies taken from Germany, there is no prospect of peace. All efforts will not avail. War is obviously inevitable as the British government has said, "No." It is the outstanding reason which agitates the European powers at this time. W. E. MARSHALL.

On Tax Evasions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt accuses rich men of evading income tax payments. Why shouldn't they in self protection?

When the Government gets into the hands of a gang of political racketeers who pass laws enabling them to legally loot the National Treasury and is also controlled by Socialist-minded fanatics who are trying to wreck capitalism by enacting legislation intended to confiscate private wealth, American citizens should use every legitimate, legal means to protect their incomes and their rights. They owe it to their business associates and to their families to do so.

Now, while Mr. Roosevelt is on the subject of public morality, let him explain to the people of the United States:

1. Why he seized gold from its rightful owners?
2. Why he high-handedly and unjustly canceled the air mail contracts?
3. Why he permits the use of public funds to corrupt millions of voters?
4. Why he did not denounce John L. Lewis for intimating that $465,000 contributed to the Democratic campaign fund by Lewis and his labor group was given with the expectancy that the President would support the C. I. O. attack on industry?
5. Why did he wait until after election to attempt to pack the Supreme Court?

It probably would be useless to suggest that Franklin Roosevelt ponder the Master's saying: "Let him who is without sin throw the first stone." PONTIFEX.

Washington, May 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President of one of the most corrupt Administrations this country has ever known denounces certain wealthy individuals for tax avoidance and evasion.

This comes with poor grace from one who has conveniently overlooked Farleyism in the pay rolls and use of millions of dollars of relief funds for political propaganda.

There is far more of a problem of "decency of American morals" in the Federal Government than there is in tax collections. J. C. NALLY.

Washington, June 2.

Supporting An Abattoir.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mrs. Mary Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, should know that a new Benning's abattoir would help 500 men and women pay their share of the 20 per cent tax to raise the $8,000,000 deficit in the District. Moreover, it would curtail the number on relief. So all of the $1,400,000 asked by the Senate District Committee would not be needed for relief.

This modern abattoir will give a near market for cattle raisers in Maryland and Virginia, help many other taxpayers by giving them a saving of 2 cents a pound on meats under Chicago and Baltimore shipping prices.

It is indorsed by the Benning Citizens' Association and the Washington Central Labor Union; the plans are approved by the Department of Agriculture, and it will be more modern in every way from the first slaughter-house built at Benning in 1877.

Children there are as healthy as any in Washington, regardless of the five sewers from Prince Georges County that empty into the Eastern Branch and flow under the Benning bridge, which is a greater menace to health than even a slaughter-house. Each year the residents of Prince Georges County have asked that the branch be dredged. The Federal Government cannot and will not give employment to all the residents of the District and this modern abattoir will help the unemployed. JOHN RIGGLES.

Seabrook, Md., June 2.

Education's Value.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was very much impressed by the words of Henry Ware Allen which recently appeared in your letter column. They sound like the deep-rooted prejudice of the dead past. Can it be that men still measure the value of "higher" education by dollars? It is, of course, true that some spend the extra four or six years in the study of technical subjects by which they receive a higher money value for their services, but are not those services of many times greater value to the human race? Take, for instance, the medical profession—all those who spend many years in pursuit of the knowledge and skill necessary to cope with the maladies by which all life, animal and vegetable, as well as human, is assailed.

Surely Mr. Allen would not have us go back to the ages where all ills—sickness, insanity, even loss of crops by drought or storm or blight—were attributed to evil spirits and the only recourse was to the incantations of the priests. Is it not true that everything which makes life worth living we owe to those whose education extended far beyond the age of 16?

And is it true that artists are wiser than those who are regarded as practical? It is the lovers of music and of pictorial art who ask for, and strive for, the cultivation of a more wide-spread appreciation of these arts. Would not, in the same manner, a more wide-spread appreciation and understanding of every branch of human effort and knowledge that tends to the betterment of human life be equally desirable? LOIS CHRISTENSEN.

Two Comments On Proposed Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems strange that in the consideration now being given to the new tax plan for the District only passing mention is made as to the effect of the intangibles.

To those who are not subject to this tax, one-half of 1 per cent reads mildly, but an illustration is illuminating. A woman having a capital of $10,000, if fortunate enough to invest it at 5 per cent, receives $550 in income, and under this tax pays to the District $50, which is 10 per cent of her income. As the tax takes from me 11½ per cent of my income I have reason to be conscious of its injustices. At the assessor's office, where I make a yearly outcry, I meet with sympathy and understanding, and learned there that there had long been a bill before the Congress for an income tax to take its place, but it would now appear that both taxes may be operative. In a comment on this subject in The Post some time ago the word "unethical" was used. Its injustice makes it no wonder that this tax is evaded, and with apparent success, as I never met anyone who is willing to discuss the subject. ONE WHO PAYS.

Washington, May 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The proposed sales tax that Congress is playing around with now as a measure to be enacted for the good of the District is one that is surrounded with injustice and danger for all District residents. It should be squashed immediately before it has a chance of growing and taking root in this fair and lovely city, where the residents are not only left with the heat and humidity during the summer, but also have to endure any experiments that the departing Congressmen have worked out in their infinite wisdom—devoting one or two hours a session to the affairs of the Nation's Capital, whenever District day rolls around, and there is nothing else to take up.

The writer has been in New York the past few years and knows at first hand just how the New York sales tax affects the average man and average woman. For the information of those who are totally unfamiliar with such matters, the New York sales tax law is supposed to be a model. It propounds a tax of only 2 cents on a dollar—offhand, not enough to hurt anyone at all. Foodstuffs and several other vital necessities are exempted. In actual practice, however, the tax amounts to quite a bit more than 2 cents on the dollar. For example, the tax on a single package of cigarettes amounts to 1 cent, since it is impossible to collect less than a cent tax. I distinctly remember buying cigarettes at 13 cents a pack, plus a cent additional for the sales tax. Thus, buying singly, it cost me 7 cents in taxes to purchase seven packages of smokes totaling 91 cents. This means that I paid a sales tax of approximately 8 per cent on small items totaling less than a dollar.

Naturally the tax would only have amounted to 2 cents had I been so fortunate as to have possessed one dollar (intact) and could have used such intact dollar for smoking purposes. Since this was not to be, it was necessary to buy a pack whenever I was lucky enough to have 15 cents. The foregoing once more demonstrates that it is always the poor sucker that gets it in the neck on these sales tax proposals or schemes or whatever they choose to call it. The rich fellow, or at least the man who can afford it, only pays the small tax actually intended to be derived from the operation of the law. But the poor guy—his pennies pave the way for additional profits for the merchant acting in the capacity of tax collector, since that fellow adds up all the individual sales and pays his tax only upon the gross volume of business he has done in round dollars. What a system! No wonder soap boxes are coming back into use around Columbus Circle and Union Square in New York City!

And don't think for a minute that it is only the man who smokes cigarettes who has to pay the exorbitant taxes outlined above—remember the poor man's wife who has to do her shopping in the five and ten. How many pennies will she pay extra for each dollar spent in multiples of 15 or 20 cents? You add it up—I've already had the experience of paying it when my wife went on shopping sprees in the city of New York. ANTI-TAXI.

Washington, June 2.

Thoughts From Abroad

OUR rescue expedition for a disabled freighter that detoured us nearly to the Azores, delayed us nearly seven hours. So we reached Southampton at 7 o'clock in the evening instead of at noon.

The rules of the sea represent a high point in civilization. When a ship in distress broadcasts a call for help, the nearest steamer is bound to go to her aid. It is very much like sending an ambulance from Kansas City to rescue some people in Chicago. Only in this case the ambulance had more than 1,000 persons on board.

The nations that are responsible for such humane regulations as this are responsible also for sending soldiers to Spain to take part in a civil war which is none of their affair. Human affairs are curiously managed.

It has been a turbulent voyage. We take a degree of satisfaction in the official notice of the ship's run posted daily at noon: "Weather very rough." We knew it was rough without being told, but we like to have the fact recognized by high authority.

Ropes are stretched along the middle of the promenade deck so a passenger need not be thrown across the deck by a lurch of the ship. Chairs and tables are cleared from the large square in the middle of the great lounge, and ropes are passed around the columns to give support to unsteady passengers and to keep the furniture from charging from side to side as the ship rolls.

• • • •

Every ocean liner has more or less vibration—more rather than less. There are centers of vibration. One table in the lounge may be quite restless; another 30 feet away may be quiet. The giant Normandie with her enormous horsepower had great trouble from vibration. Bell telephone engineers were called into consultation. Some of them made several voyages and then presented a plan to soothe the ship that was carried out while she was laid up for the winter. It worked.

• • • •

The German currency regulations make difficulties on board a German liner unless the passenger has equipped himself in New York with a German letter of credit in travel marks at 24 cents each. It is the custom to give the room steward $5 per passenger, and the same amount goes to the table steward. On a British or French boat a $5 a bill is all right. But to a German steward $5 is worth only $3 in gold marks.

The passenger with a travel-marks letter of credit can cash it with the purser for "boat marks" which must be used on the voyage. It takes close calculation to come out even.

• • • •

People of every language, every clime on this terrestrial ball are found on an ocean liner. They bring gossip from all over the world. Usually it is conflicting. We have been making desultory inquiries from persons who have been recently in Germany about the diet restrictions there, with these results.

Hotel menus are much restricted. Little butter, no cream, meat poor. Hotel menus are not restricted at all. Plenty of butter and cream, and meats as usual. These reports are from travelers. A German housewife reports that butter and cream cards are required and the amount of purchases limited. Other articles of food are available as usual. Apparently we shall have to visit Germany and see for ourselves.

• • • •

Some of the English notices on the boat are baffling. We haven't figured this out yet:

It is not allowed for the boot-cleaner (evidently bootscleaner) to cash any money himself. The chief steward-office takes an eventual amount on receipt.

We haven't the faintest notion of what the "eventual amount" on receipt refers to.

• • • •

At Southampton our boat doesn't take time to go to the dock. She stops in the outer harbor and we make an hour's voyage on a tender to reach the customs house and railway station.

The customs examiners are courteous and not unduly suspicious. They seem concerned chiefly over cigarettes and cameras. As we leave the inclosure an officer steps up and politely says: "I hope you won't mind if I feel your overcoat pockets?" We don't mind—or if we do we don't say so.

The porter piles our bags in the luggage van. No checks are given. The British railways rely on the honesty of passengers to claim their own bags in London.

The nonstop run is an hour and forty minutes; first class fare $4, and Pullman seat $1. The car is marked "Pullman," but it is British Pullman—a car built low to go under bridges that were constructed in the earlier days of railroading.

• • • •

Just before midnight we roll into Waterloo station. We tell the station red cap we have five bags in the van. He will look after them, sir, and he points to a place on another platform, where he presently appears with the five bags on a hand truck. He has picked them out by the name tags that were attached to them on the boat.

"Are they all right, sir? Very well, sir. This way to the taxi, sir." And we are off to the hotel.

Fair Enough

Nazi Reasoning.

THERE ARE a couple of points of confusion in the current policy of the Nazis toward the Catholic clergy.

The Nazis accuse certain members of the cloth of vile practices, and, quite aside from the truth or falsity of the charge, it would be interesting to know when such practices became offensive to the Nazi morality. True, as Josef Goebbels said in his denunciation of Cardinal Mundelein, there were 60 perverts among the Nazi leaders who were slaughtered in the great purge, but that was not the reason they were put to death.

The 60 degenerate Nazi leaders were killed for political opposition to Adolf Hitler, and among them was Capt. Ernst Roehm, a pioneer in the movement who was Hitler's old comrade and confidant notwithstanding the fact that for years he had been notorious for his peculiarities both in Germany and in South America.

In Berlin, long before his death, Roehm's name was the subject of many a ribald jest, and American correspondents who knew him recall that he used to join in the merriment at times, discussing his eccentricities with the enormous joviality of thoroughly abandoned character.

• • • •

THEN, TOO, the fact that there were 60 such characters among the early leaders of the movement, as Mr. Goebbels says, indicates that degeneracy was rather common in the pioneer element, which was small in numbers at the beginning. And the fact that the 60 perverts were destroyed, though perhaps laudable, does not prove that all degenerates in the higher brackets of the regime were wiped out.

Inasmuch as political opposition and conspiracy was the offense, there exists a temptation to suppose that other low characters who were politically correct and loyal might have been allowed to pursue their careers.

Another point is that raised by the wife of Gen. Eric Ludendorff, the old soldier who is opposed to the worship of any international god and demands that the Germans create an exclusive, national god of their own or dust off the old pagan deities and use them, knowing that nobody else on earth would be tempted to muscle in.

• • • •

THE GENERAL'S WIFE, who is a physician, is reported to have given her scientific opinion that the celibacy of the Catholic clergy is morally injurious, tending to create conditions such as those alleged against certain Catholic clergymen.

One naturally wonders how the good lady will go about squaring herself with the regime considering that Herr Hitler is himself a celibate. This phase of the leader's existence has always been rather puzzling, inasmuch as he has imposed economic penalties on other bachelors and has promoted the league of those who are rich in children.

Being something of a god himself and a national treasure, it would seem incumbent on Der Fuehrer to reproduce himself rather numerously, as Mussolini has done, and unpatriotic of him not to provide this legacy for the land of his adoption, although, to be sure, there are those, addicted to the worship of other deities who thank God there is only one Adolf.

These are just a couple of little problems which have troubled one who tries to follow the Nazi reasoning and dislikes to give annoyance. The difficulty is that when one fails to understand any point in the Nazi philosophy or procedure the Nazis lose their tempers. Up to now they have lost their tempers with the Jews, Catholics, Protestants and Masons, and from the way things are going from day to day it appears that very soon the whole civilized world again will be out of step with Germany.

The Once Over

The Perfect Taxpayer.

I.

Phidias Gideon Sassafras Fry
Loved to pay taxes exceedingly high;
He like to pay more
Than the tax laws called for;
To save, though 'twas legal, he never would try.

II.

He'd read the tax law and whenever he'd see
A chance to save something he'd murmur, "Not me!"—
When a loophole he saw
He would pipe, "This is raw;
I wouldn't feel quite the same man morally!"

III.

Phidias Gideon Sassafras Fry
Always from any deductions would shy;
He refused to be tight
When quite legally right
And the thought that he coudn't pay more made him cry.

IV.

Opinions of lawyers and experts he'd shun
For fear they might show him a way to save "mon;"
When they'd point out a flaw
In the income tax law
He'd say, "Why, you tricky old son of a gun!"

V.

No matter how clearly a lawyer would show
How legal it was for a man to save dough
He would say, "Why, I'd feel
Like a terrible heel
To have those clean Democrats find me so low."

VI.

Phidias Gideon Sassafras Fry
Often exclaimed, "Oh, I'd just as soon die
As not to pay twice
When just once would suffice—
And have to look straight into Morgenthau's eye!"

VII.

If he found a clause to save one buck or many He'd lift up his eyebrows and say, "Not a penny!"
For he wished to be sure
He was morally pure—
Like those Washington fellows who never pay any!

After The Coronation Was Over

Ceremony In London Brought Strangers Together.

By Geoffrey Crowther.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

THE CAPTAINS and the kings have departed after a coronation which is officially—and popularly—considered to have been "a good show." But they have left their prime ministers and foreign ministers behind. There has been a round of visits paid in London between representatives of all the European states, and the consultations are continuing in Paris. The opportunities for personal conversation have been even better than at a Geneva meeting, for the congregation has not been limited to politicians and diplomats. For example, Gen. Gamelin and Field Marshall von Blomberg, key figures of the French and German armies, have been able to enjoy a few hours' quiet conversation.

What the upshot of all this talk has been will, as usual, only gradually emerge. In British government circles the mot d'ordre is that the results have been very satisfactory. But many European countries are in some doubt what the British government would regard as a satisfactory result. Some of the central European countries who are most directly menaced by the current friendship between Berlin and Rome—pre-eminently Austria and Czechoslovakia—are repoted to be dissatisfied at their failure to get specific pledges of help from Mr. Anthony Eden.

Continentals Not Only Important Guests Of Eden.

BUT MR. EDEN cannot forget that the continental statesmen are not the only visiting notabilities in London. The periodical Imperial Conference is meeting, and the prime ministers of the Dominions are also anxious to know what British policy in Europe amounts to. But their anxiety is directly opposite to that of the continentals. For their pressure will always be directed toward a limitation of British commitments on the continent, while the French and their central European allies never cease to hope for more precise British undertakings.

British policy is necessarily a compromise between these two opposite pressures. Geography forbids a policy of complete isolation; but a policy of complete commitment is equally impossible. Britain's frontier is the Rhine, which means that the eastern frontiers of France and Belgium are unconditionally guaranteed. But east of the Rhine, Mr. Eden can go no further than to profess a lively interest in developments and a no less lively attachment to the principles of the League of Nations. The central Europeans, potential aggressors and potential victims alike, will have to make of that what they can.

It is easy to criticize a policy such as this. There are many who argue that since Britain will certainly be involved in a first-class struggle on the continent, she had better declare her attitude now. But this argument is closely akin to that used by the people who say that since the United States would certainly be involved in another world war, it is the policy of the ostrich to talk of avoiding entanglements. Indeed, it may be suggested that the chief difference between the foreign policies of the United States and the United Kingdom is three thousand miles of ocean.

Anglo-American Trade Agreement Also Important.

CLOSELY bound up with the question of peace and war in Europe is the British attitude to the proposed Anglo-American trade agreement. No responsible person in London believes that the signature of this, or any other agreement, would induce a change in American foreign policy, the reasons for which are clearly understood here. But it is nevertheless thought to be important to leave nothing undone to secure American good will. Further, some relaxation of trade barriers is an indispensable condition for any appeasement, and agreement between Britain and America would give the whole movement considerable impetus.

In spite of these arguments, however, the British cabinet is hesitating. Concessions to American agricultural produce would involve some departure from the strict terms of the Ottawa agreements with the dominions. Can anything be gained from an Anglo-American agreement commensurate with a loss of dominion good will? The question can only be answered by the dominions themselves, and it is not impossible that something may emerge from the sessions of the imperial conference.

There is one conspicuous absentee from the imperial conference. President de Valera did not choose to come. Strangely little comment has been made on his absence. A generation ago even limited home rule was anathema to half England, but the Irish Free State is already almost written off as an independent country. There is a genuine wish in England for friendly relations, and a readiness to go a long way in concessions, but the matter is not considered to be of very great importance.

It is noticed that Mr. de Valera always hesitates to go the whole hog to independence, and there is reason to believe that he, too, is more anxious to settle the quarrel than appears on the surface. But it is difficult for the practical Englishman to understand the importance of symbols and phrases to the Irishman, or for the Irishman to believe that there are certain symbols in which even the Englishman passionately believes. That a settlement has not come long ago is not due to any lack of common sense on either side, but to the fact that common sense has no more relevance to the dispute than logic to a prize fight.

A prize fight is not an exact metaphor, for the astonishing thing is that one contestant is refusing to fight. Ireland is right out of the news here. Mr. de Valera's constitution, drafted in terms of a unified, republican Ireland, has excited protests only from a few of the more academic constitutionalists. There could be no apter commentary on the essential wisdom of the old home rule policy, or on the criminal folly of those who for 30 years obstructed home rule in the name of the sanctity of the union and of the disasters which would overwhelm both countries if they were put asunder.

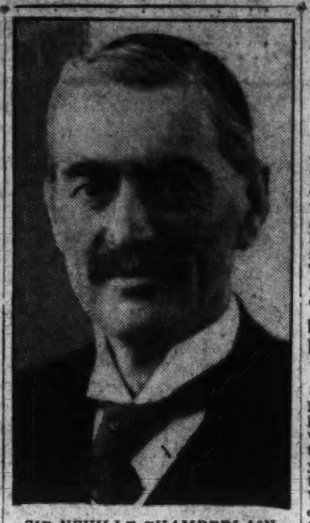
Resignation Of Baldwin Said Largely Significant.

FAR MORE important, in any ultimate sense, than the coronation is the resignation of Mr. Stanley Baldwin. The event had been prepared with meticulous care. It was made known last year that Mr. Baldwin intended to resign after the coronation, and even the date was fixed with tolerable accuracy months ago. It has not escaped notice that this elaborate procedure of publicity was very different from the reticence of past prime ministers. Disraeli left the Commons without a word of warning or farewell. Gladstone told only his cabinet colleagues, and even they were informed only a day or two before.

There was an almost embarrassing series of farewell speeches. The House of Commons received with emotion what was announced to be a farewell plea for peace in industry as long ago as May 5, and the farewell speech to the faithful constituents of Bewdley in Worcestershire came even earlier. Later there were a farewell broadcast, a farewell speech to a great public meeting, a farewell after-dinner speech.

No star of the stage ever lingered longer over a final exit than this simple, modest man, whose simple modesty has of late years had an almost Caesarean ring about it. Last Friday the last ceremonies were gone through. Mr. Baldwin was received by the King and, to His Majesty's official surprise and personal regret, offered the resignation of himself and all his colleagues. Following constitutional precedent, the King (who is not supposed to read the newspapers) asked whom Mr. Baldwin advised him to send for. Mr. Baldwin said he thought Mr. Neville Chamberlain is the man for the job. Mr. Chamberlain was summoned, accepted the task and, with quite unconstitutional preparedness, produced a list of his cabinet from his pocket.

There was one more formality. The King conferred a peerage on Mr. Baldwin. By inflexible custom, a retiring prime minister is made an earl (former secretaries of state get viscounties, lesser former ministers baronies). There is some humor about this. An earldom carries with it minor courtesy titles, of which one is bestowed upon the earl's eldest son. Mr. Oliver Baldwin, the prime minister's eldest, is a Socialist of a not very moderate hue, who has caused his father considerable embarrassment in the past. There is a delicious irony in forcing a courtesy title, and an eventual earldom, on him in revenge.



SIR NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN.

Baldwin's Successor Commonly Adjudged Mediocrity.

History's Estimate Of Baldwin Declared Uncertain.

IT IS far too early to attempt a final assessment of Mr. Baldwin's place in political history. It is fully possible that future historians will wonder why it was that he was able to dominate British politics for 14 years without putting a single spectacular achievement to his credit. Will he be forgotten like Lord Liverpool, who was prime minister for 15 continuous years a century ago? Or will he be remembered like Sir Robert Walpole, another prime minister whose forte was political management rather than statesmanship?

In any case, it is on his merits as a politician that Mr. Baldwin's reputation must stand or fall. His achievements have been negative rather than positive. Wherever a sedative influence has been required, he has shone. He deserves a very great deal of personal credit for the remarkable decade of industrial peace that followed the general strike in 1926, and it was very appropriate management which led him to make his last Commons speech on the theme of "Give peace in our time, O Lord." In the same way, he has restrained the more impetuous Tories for a decade from pushing through their pet project of "reform" (i. e. reinforcement) of the House of Lords. Similarly, once again, he held his party in line in support of the program of Indian constitutional reform which he inherited with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald from the Labor government in 1931, and which, with luck, will prevent India from going the same way as Ireland.

These policies of moderation have undoubtedly broadened the base from which the Conservative Party draws its support, and have correspondingly helped to kill the old Liberal Party. But in other spheres compromise has been less successful. Pre-eminently in foreign affairs, history may have a harsh verdict to pronounce on a prime minister whose policy was to have no policy, and who did nothing while Europe ranged itself in opposing camps, armed to the teeth.

The greatest achievement of all, however, has been the personal one. It is something, after all, to spend 14 years as leader of the largest party in the state, and to be prime minister three times, and then to retire under no compulsion of defeat or ill-health. Judging by present indications, Mr. Baldwin could remain prime minister until he dropped in the traces. That has not been true of any prime minister since the days of Pitt the Younger, and he did not have to woo the democracy. "A person of the utmost insignificance" cried Lord Curzon when he was himself passed over in 1923. But it is certainly the right brand of insignificance to appeal to the British public. Mr. Baldwin has always seemed to be the amateur in statesmanship. But he is a professional master politician such as England has not seen for many decades.

Neville At Last Wins Ambition Of Chamberlains.

HIS SUCCESSOR is Mr. Neville Chamberlain, son of Joseph and younger half-brother of Sir Austen. At last the Chamberlains, who have so often seemed to have the highest post in their grasp, are to come into their heritage. "At last" is the right expression, for Mr. Chamberlain is 68. This is much the oldest age for a first premiership for a long time past. Bonar Law was 64 in 1922, but he only lasted six months. Mr. Lloyd George was only 53 when he became prime minister, and the other recent prime ministers—Asquith, Baldwin, MacDonald—have ranged between 55 and 57 when they first went to No. 10 Downing street.

Mr. Chamberlain will thus have no chance to dominate the political scene as Mr. Baldwin has. Nor is it age alone that will get in his way. He is neither a popular nor even an impressive character. He has neither the dramatic brilliance of a Winston Churchill or a David Lloyd George nor the homely geniality of a Baldwin. He is aloof, dry, obstinate, frosty. Lloyd George once said of him, "Neville would make an excellent Lord Mayor of Birmingham—in a quiet year," and it sums up the general belief.

The fierce light of the premiership may reveal qualities that are unsuspected. But until they do many people will agree with the judgment passed recently by a very shrewd observer, who remarked that Great Britain is to be governed by a cabinet of second-raters, presided over by a mediocrity.

Bachelor-Maiden National Tribute Day Now Sought

A movement to establish a "Bachelor-Maiden Day," patterned after Mother's and Father's Day is being launched by Miss Cecile Calling, of Chesea, Mass., now in Washington to enlist Congressional support for the day.

Miss Calling suggests June 27 as the first "Bachelor-Maiden Day," honoring "those men and women who through righteous obligations and love of service have sacrificed the pleasures of parenthood but have shared equally its problems and responsibilities."

There is a Mother's Day, and a Father's Day, reasons Miss Calling; why not another day for the bachelors and bachelor-maids? She has already interested several Congressmen, she says, hopes to get Presidential support and intends to contact Washington clergymen.

"Let us all, therefore," Miss Calling concludes, "enlist to observe Sunday, June 27 Bachelor-Maiden Day. Let us all then go a-bachelloring and a-maidening by giving or sending flowers, cards, tokens, or trinkets to bachelor uncles, nephews, brothers, sons and to maiden aunts, nieces, sisters, daughters. This universe kindles all kinds, and kindness knits the kindly into kinder kindred."

In Barcelona

By E. O. Deebles

The Madness Over.

Barcelona.

BARCELONA has lived through her moment of madness. More than 200 potential anti-Fascist soldiers are dead and perhaps four times as many lie wounded in the newly overcrowded hospitals. They fought against other anti-Fascists, in sanguinary street battles where no one seemed to know exactly who was the enemy. As a lad behind one of the uptown barricades said to me, "If I see someone shooting at me, I shoot at him, and my aim is good." And that was, unfortunately, all that many of the dead, the wounded, and the survivors knew about what they were doing.

As nearly as can be learned, the trouble in Barcelona was started by the Trotskyite organization called POUM. This is a group which was originally founded by a thoroughly fine man named Joaquim Maurin, who was killed in the war last autumn. Since then the POUM has been going definitely downhill. Foreigners, attracted by its admittedly excellent advertising in other countries, have been either wild-eyed lunatics who wanted to use unhappy Spain as the guinea pig of their experiments in large-scale vivisection, or if honorable people, have been so appalled by the tactics of this small but vociferous party that they have left it, or the country, or both, as soon as they could get away.

American journalism has much to answer for here, since the newspaper which expressed POUM's views and has been for some time inciting its members to counter revolution, is edited by a clever (one must give him his due) young Spaniard who spent some years in the United States learning thoroughly the trade of yellow journalism. Both his paper and the outrageous riots to which it gave the first impulse have now been suppressed with a strong hand. Indeed, one might say, with strong hands, since not merely the Barcelona and Valencia governments came down upon the offenders with a heavy hand, but they had the sincere backing of the best elements in all the parties and trades unions, and all these are now beginning to clean house with a vengeance, knowing with whom they have to deal.

• • • •

IT HAS BEEN a costly lesson, but it appears that Barcelona has learned it. Some of the barricades still stand at street corners, but a gang of road-menders is at work resetting the stones all over the city. The thought will come, in spite of the seriousness of what has passed, that if Barcelona would pave all her streets with smooth cement or asphalt, instead of with stone blocks set in fine sand, easily pried from their places to build barricades, perhaps a good deal of trouble might be averted. If it were necessary to dig out irregularly shaped chunks of cement, at the cost of much hard labor, before the building of barricades could begin, there would be time for thought. The sweat of the brow has a notoriously cooling effect on hot heads. Besides, the rough chunks do not lend themselves so well to proper military construction. Perhaps this thought may also occur to the city fathers. We hope so.

Another excellent step toward anti-Fascist solidarity here has been taken in the giving up of arms, with the exception of duly licensed pistols. These arms, being in almost every case suitable for the purpose, have been issued to the troops in training, a number of whom were already almost ready for front-line duty.

In talking this morning with a militiaman in training, he told me of another item of considerable interest, which was that today and yesterday volunteers have been pouring in to the barracks. The slight let-down in patriotic enthusiasm which was the natural result of the victories of recent weeks, has disappeared completely. No longer does the youthful citizen of Barcelona seem to think to himself that since the war has been practically won, there is no use in his offering himself at the last minute for military training.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to speak too highly of the work of the Red Cross and Sanitary Service during the days of fighting. Several of their members were wounded, one at least of them seriously, for they exposed themselves recklessly to cross-fire in the torn-up streets to bring into safety the wounded and dead. One of the most moving of the appeals broadcast by the radio to the fighters to lay down their arms was one which was signed by the leading doctors of the city, men belonging to all the various political parties and groups of thought, all of whom were working tirelessly in the hospitals while their message was being broadcast.

One definitely human touch there was throughout all the gravity of the fratricidal battling. Since Spain is a nation which buys its food from day to day, in the interests of complete freshness, starvation would have faced a large part of the city's population by the second day, had not the combatants on both sides, by an unvoiced but perfectly understood agreement, refrained from hostilities during the two hours that are by long custom sacred to marketing. After that, the women, except for those few amazons who, as always in such cases, were fighting at the side of men, and more fiercely than they, retired to their homes, shut the heavy wooden shutters if there happened to be fighting in their own street, and went about the day's housework as usual.

TODAY, in happy contrast to the tragic week that has passed, the children of Barcelona joined their young voices to those of other parts of the world in a polygot broadcast of peace and good will. Small Catalans and Spaniards, with youthful representatives of each of the foreign colonies of the city, read their greetings before the microphone to the children of other countries.

This charming interlude is to be repeated on Sunday in slightly different form, when the little refugees from all the other regions of Spain, of whom Barcelona is taking such generous and hospitable care, will have each a chosen representative who will broadcast for his or her regional group, in addition to the many foreign children who will repeat their message.

Spain is suffering a hideous war, but she is strongly determined that so far as possible the lives of the younger generation shall not be blighted by it, and everything that can possibly be done for these children is being done wholeheartedly.

Junebugs.

By William Lyon Phelps

Their Real Name.

This being the first day of June, my thoughts turn naturally to the Junebug. When I was a lad, the whole family not only went four times to church on Sunday, morning and evening service with sermon, Sunday School and Young People's Prayer Meeting, but we also always went to the weekly prayer meeting, which came either on Wednesday or Thursday evening. During this hour in hot weather, one or more Junebugs usually succeeded in effecting an entrance, diverting the minds of even the most sincere and serious participants, and affording comic relief to the very young. It was fascinating to watch these bugs, which started up with a noise like a 1904 Ford, gradually circle around the bald head of some conspicuous deacon.

• • • •

And when, as a little boy, I was sent to bed by daylight, my brother and I were often visited by Junebugs.

I have not seen a Junebug for 30 years. Where are they? Have they gone the way of wild pigeons? Or are they in some other clime?

Curiously enough, the naturalist's name for Junebug is Maybeetle. It seems they are more numerous in May than in June, and specifically, accurately, meticulously, they are not bugs at all, but beetles, whatever that may mean. They are third cousins of the Scarabs of Egypt.

I am informed by those who seem to know, that more than 60 varieties of Junebugs are known in the U. S. A., and that they, like nearly everything else in the universe, are bad for crops. There must be something good for crops, but I have never heard of it.

• • • •

When the Junebug reaches young manhood or womanhood, he eats the leaves of trees (this is in his salad days), and while he is still in infancy, he stays in the ground and eats the roots of valuable fruits and berries.

The Junebug rests during the winter; as Emerson said of the bumblebee, he makes the icy blasts of winter ridiculous by sleeping through them.

Blood Supply to Brain Cells Governs Human Intelligence

Large Vessels Feed Organ More Adequately, Recent Discoveries Indicate, Says Philadelphia Physician.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 3 (AP).—The intelligence of human beings ranging all the way from idiots to Nobel Prize winners, depends largely on the brain's blood supply, Dr. Henry H. Donaldson, of Philadelphia, said today in his presidential address before the American Neurological Association.

The size of the human brain, about three pounds, and the number of cells it contains is almost constant in all human beings whether idiots, criminals, ordinary individuals or distinguished scientists. He said that efforts to analyze mental performance on the basis of size or structure has not brought satisfactory results.

"Recent work has shown, however, that the blood supply reaching the brain is one of the main factors governing intelligence," he said. "In highly intelligent individuals the blood vessels feeding the brain are larger and more numerous. Thus, in other words, the machine is alike for all, but the fuel fed to it is different for each individual."

The strong influence of ancestry in determining how intelligent a child will be is indicated by the fact that almost all of the nerve cells "destined to form the mature brain are present at birth," he added, since the brain grows about three and one-half times from birth to maturity "changes in size and weight must be due to changes in the original elements."

Dr. Donaldson declared that his address outlines "the nervous skeleton" in an effort to indicate the necessity of treating the nervous system as a whole instead of its individual parts. This revolt from over-specialization is evident in many other fields of medicine, he added.

The nervous system has "a somewhat illusive impression of permanence," the Philadelphia scientist said, but since no nerve cell can reproduce itself because it is so highly specialized, "the individual survives as long as his nerve cells—rather than the nerve cells as long as the individual."

Mr. Roosevelt cited floods which had shown control involved not merely work on the main streams and major tributaries, but also involved going back into the headwater areas with measures of applied conservation, "such as restoration of forests and grasses on inferior lands, and encouragement of farm practices which diminish runoff and prevent erosion on arable lands.

The Norris and Mansfield bills differ in several phases. The Senate measure would create a corporate conservation authority in each area, with a board of three $10,000 a year members, while that in the House proposes regional planning agencies with a director and a regional conservation committee in each.

The Norris bill permits each board to administer generation and distribution of power in its area, while Mansfields authorizes the President to set up a separate power authority in each territory. Chief among those who complained of the road damage was O. T. Wyatt, of the Branchville association. He said the Branchville road between the Washington-Baltimore highway and the Baltimore & Ohio Railway tracks had been torn up by heavy trucking. This road, he said, was built for maximum loads of about 2 tons and in the Greenbelt project trucks hauling up to 10 tons had traversed it.

The Senate recently voted to extend the law indefinitely, thus probably necessitating a Senate-House conference committee to reach a compromise.

The vote on final House passage was 188 to 92.

Slayer of 18 Is Hunted By Filipino Constabulary

Manila, Philippine Islands, June 3 (AP).—Constabulary pursued today a grief-crazed tribesman credited with slaying 11 of the 24 persons he has vowed to kill.

In all, 18 have died as a result of the jealous frenzy of Kalinga Boli, who first ran amuck nine days ago in the belief his wife had been unfaithful.

Text of President's Message on Planning

The text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress on national planning follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

Nature has given recurrent and poignant warnings through dust storms, floods and droughts that we must act while there is yet time if we would preserve for ourselves and our posterity the natural resources of a virile national life.

Experience has taught us that the prudent husbandry of our national estate requires far-sighted management. Floods, droughts and dust storms are in a very real sense manifestations of nature's refusal to tolerate continued abuse of her bounties. Prudent management demands not merely works which will guard against these calamities, but carefully formulated plans to prevent their occurrence. Such plans require co-ordination of many related activities.

For instance, our recent experiences of floods have made clear that the problem must be approached as one involving more than great works on main streams at the places where major disasters threaten to occur. There must also be measures of prevention and control among tributaries and throughout the entire headwaters areas. A comprehensive plan of flood control must embrace not only down-stream levees and floodways, and retarding dams and reservoirs on major tributaries, but also smaller dams and reservoirs on the lesser tributaries, and measures of applied conservation throughout an entire drainage area, such as restoration of forests and grasses on inferior lands and encouragement of farm practices which diminish runoff and prevent erosion of arable lands.

A National Problem.

Taking care of our natural estate together with the stopping of existing waste and building it back to a higher productivity is a National problem. At last we have undertaken a National policy.

But it is not wise to direct everything from Washington. National planning should start at the bottom or, in other words, the problems of townships, counties and States, should be co-ordinated through large geographical regions and come to the Capital of the Nation for final co-ordination. Thus the Congress would receive a complete picture in which no local detail had been overlooked.

It is also well to remember that improvements of our national heritage frequently confer special benefits upon regions immediately affected, and a large measure of co-operation from State and local agencies in the undertaking and financing of important projects may fairly be asked for.

Any division of the United States into regions for the husbandry of its resources must possess some degree of flexibility. The area most suitable as a region for the carrying out of an integrated program designed to prevent floods is the basin including the watersheds of a pivotal river. But other problems dependent upon other combinations of natural economic and social factors, may require a somewhat different area to permit the most effective functional program.

Problems Are Varied.

For instance, the problem of the Great Plains area is a problem of deficient rainfall, relatively high winds, loose, friable soils, and unsuitable agricultural practices. The natural area for solution of the Great Plains drought problem is different from that for the solution of dynamic water problems presented by the rivers which traverse that area. The rational area for administration of a Great Plains rehabilitation program crosses the drainage areas of a number of parallel major tributaries of the Mississippi River. It should therefore be kept in mind that in establishing a region for one type of comprehensive program, parts or all of the same area may be included in a different region for another type of comprehensive program with the result of a Federal system, as it were, of programs and administrative areas for solution of basically different yet inter-related problems.

Neither the exact scope nor the most appropriate administrative mechanism for regional husbandry can at the start be projected upon any single blue print. But it is important that we set up without delay some regional machinery to acquaint us with our problem.

I think, however, that for the time being we might give consideration to the creation of seven regional authorities or agencies; one on the Atlantic seaboard; a second for the Great Lakes and Ohio valley; a third for the drainage basin of the Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers; a fourth embracing the drainage basins of the Missouri River and the Red River of the North; a fifth embracing the drainage basins of the Arkansas, Red, and Rio Grande Rivers; a sixth for the basins of the Colorado River and rivers flowing into the Pacific south of the California-Oregon line; and a seventh for the Columbia River Basin. And in addition I should leave undisturbed the Mississippi River Commission which is will equipped to handle the problems immediately attending the channel of that great river.

Apart from the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Columbia Valley Authority, and the Mississippi River Commission, the work of these regional bodies, at least in their early years, would consist chiefly in developing integrated plans to conserve and safeguard the prudent use of waters, water power, soils, forests and other resources of the areas entrusted to their charge.

Such regional bodies would also provide a useful mechanism through which consultation among the various governmental agencies working in the field could be effected for the development of integrated programs of related activities. Projected programs would be reported by the regional bodies annually to the Congress through the President after he has has had the projects checked and revised in light of national budgetary considerations and of national planning policies. When the national planning board is established, I should expect to use that agency to co-ordinate the development of regional planning to insure conformity to national policy, but not to give to the proposed national planning board any executive authority over the construction of public works or over management of completed works.

Projects authorized to be undertaken by the Congress could then be carried out in whole or in part by those departments of the Government best equipped for the purpose, or if desirable in any particular case by one of the regional bodies. There should be a close co-ordination of the work done by the various agencies of Government to prevent friction, overlapping and unnecessary administrative expense and to insure the integrated development of related activities.

Co-operation Urged.

There should be the closest co-operation also with the developing State and local agencies in this field, particularly the State, regional and local planning boards and the commissions on interstate co-operation which work through interstate compacts ratified by the Congress and through interstate administrative arrangements. And provision should be made for the effective administration of hydro-electric projects which have been or may be undertaken as a part of a multiple purpose watershed development. The water-power resources of the Nation must be protected from private monopoly and used for the benefit of the people.

This proposal is in the interest of economy and the prevention of overlapping or one-sided developments. It leaves the Congress wholly free to determine what shall be undertaken and provides the Congress with a complete picture not only of the needs of each one of the regions but of the relationship of each of the regions to the whole of the Nation.

If, for example, the Congress could have had before it at this session a complete picture of immediate and long-term needs I think its task in providing for flood prevention and drought emergencies would have been an easier one.

For nearly a year I have studied this great subject intensively and have discussed it with many of the members of the Senate and the House of Representatives. My recommendations in this message fall into the same category as my former recommendation relating to the reorganization of the executive branch of the Government. I hope therefore, that both of these important matters may have your attention at this session.

TVA Hails Bill To Force Bond For Injunction

Proposal of Norris Would Hinder Action Against Public Power.

By the Associated Press.

Tennessee Valley Authority officials welcomed yesterday a proposal by Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, to make it more difficult for private utilities to obtain injunctions against public power projects.

Norris seeks to check the issuance of injunctions by district courts against the TVA or similar proposed regional authorities.

His bill would require persons seeking such injunctions to post a bond large enough to compensate the authority affected, and the municipal or farm organizations concerned, for any resulting loss. Municipalities and farm co-operatives might be concerned because of contracts to use Federal power.

David E. Lilienthal, TVA power director, authorized the following comment:

"The introduction of this bill after such careful study and under such impressive sponsorship will hearten men and women throughout the country who believe in the TVA policies of water control, land conservation and power."

Other members of the TVA staff estimated the authority had lost $2,000,000 in possible revenue during the life of an injunction granted by Federal Judge Gore, of Tennessee, to 19 utilities. The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals recently dissolved it.

They added there at least 100 municipalities which have applied for TVA power but have been prevented from getting it, either through injunctions or the threat of injunctions.

New York, June 3 (AP).—Mary Nolan, one-time glamorous star of the "Follies" and the screen, was a patient today in the Brunswick Home, in Amityville, Long Island, where attendants said she was "a very sick girl."

The nature of her illness was not disclosed at the home, where Miss Nolan was sent yesterday by the Actors' Fund of America.

Robert Campbell, secretary of the fund, said Miss Nolan "was too proud to ask for aid."

Misfortune has followed the blonde actress ever since Frank Tinney, a musical comedy star, was accused 12 years ago of beating her so badly that she was taken to a hospital.

Sailor Jokes With Pal Before Suicide Leap

San Diego, Calif., June 3 (AP).—"Some fun, eh kid?" shouted Seaman Cecil Roy Jordan, 21, to a shipmate today as he plunged to his death from the U. S. S. Barry with a 50-pound anchor lashed to his leg.

Submerged for more than 20 minutes, his body was brought to the surface by a diver from the U. S. S. Whitney.

Bob Burns Says:

Uncle Unie's strongest characteristic was his laziness. He had the poorest farm in Crawford County because he never would work it. Finally when they found oil on his land and Uncle Unie come into a lot'ta money, the people thought, "Well, now at least he oughta spruce up a little bit and show some signs of life." But he didn't do it—he continued to sit around the house day after day.

Even when they moved to the city and Aunt Boo became a social climber, he wouldn't get out of the house. One day she told him that he just had to get a pet to take out on a leash like the other gentlemen did. She says, "It not only looks stylish but the the exercise will do you good." Uncle Unie says, "Well, when you go to town today, stop in the Pet Shop and pick me up a turtle!"

Faithful Servants.

In the ranks of Uncle Sam's employes here are 83 Indians, and that's more Indians than, at first blush, we ever suspected of inhabiting Washington.

The increase in their number here has come about in this manner. There were 11 on July 1, 1933, and this number jumped to 19 in 1934; then to 24 in 1935; to 68 by July 1, 1936, and 83 in May of the current year.

Everyone in the Indian Service remarks that the Indians make excellent employes, and point out the fact that the average American makes too much of a distinction between the Indian worker and the white worker. Actually, they explain, there is no difference at all.

The Indian dresses just as his white brother dresses—conducts his business affairs just as does the white man and behaves just as the white man behaves; in many instances, a little better.

By law, they have some preference in the Government service. They hold positions here of marked rsponsibility. More than half of the personnel in the mail room of the Indian Office are Indians, and many others hold jobs of average rank. About half of the number here are boys, the other half are girls. Nearly all of them have Civil Service status and most o' them are graduates of the Indian colleges in the West.

The representation of tribes on May 15 of this year was as follows:

Alaskan, 1; Arapaho-Sioux, 1; Blackfeet, 1; Caddo, 1; Cherokee, 10; Cherokee-Delaware, 1; Chickasaw, 5; Chippewa, 12; Choctaw, 6; Comanche, 1; Creek, 4; Flathead, 3; Kaw, 1; Kickapoo, 1; Kiowa, 2; Modoc, 1; Mohawk, 1; Onondaga, 1; Oneida, 3; Osage, 1; Ottawa, 1; Pawnee, 1; Potawatomi, 1; Pueblo, 1; Seneca, 10; Shawnee, 1; Sioux, 8; Stockbridge, 1, and Winnebago, 2.

The condition of the Civil Service apportionment at the close of business on Saturday, May 29, disclosed States in excess, as follows: District of Columbia, entitled, 162, received, 8,965; Maryland, entitled, 543, received, 1,847; Virginia, entitled, 807, received, 1,963; Iowa, entitled, 823, received, 891; Vermont, entitled, 120, received, 126; South Dakota, entitled, 231, received, 239; Nebraska, entitled, 459, received, 474; Utah, entitled, 169, received, 174; Washington, entitled, 521, received, 531; North Dakota, entitled, 227, received, 231; Missouri, entitled, 1,209, received, 1,222; Kansas, entitled, 627, received, 629; Massachusetts, entitled, 1,415, received, 1,418, and Minnesota, entitled, 854, received, 855.

That was a nice party which the speaking class of the Farm Credit Club gave the other night at the Hay-Adams House to mark the completion of the course. Nearly every member attended.

Mrs. Lucille E. MacMurray, placement officer of the personnel division of the Farm Credit Administration, was guest of honor and heartily commended the work of the class. "The enthusiasm shown by this class is in keeping with the new and widespread interest in public speaking and expression as a method of personality development," she said. "The Farm Credit Club is happy to have sponsored such a worthwhile educational project."

Paul McCrea, of the United States Chamber of Commerce and a member of the class, was master of ceremonies. Charles T. Akre, assistant to the trust officer of the Riggs National Bank, who conducted the class, was presented a bombay cooler in appreciation of his services.

Among those present were Mrs. May Aaronson, Eddie Aaronson, E. H. Anderson, May T. Bigelow, D. C. Candland, R. C. Dorsey, Margaret Flory, W. L. Hammer, Paul Hayward, W. G. Hoag, J. E. Horton, H. A. Lake, Louise M. Pressgrove, E. R. Scherich, R. Dale Snow, Sanford M. Stoddary, Mrs. Barry K. Thompson, M. H. Uelsmann, Mary L. Vincent, Helen C. Ward, Robert Willey, C. F. Latimer and L. I. Peak.

Commenting on their mass meeting to be held the night of June 10 in the Willard Hotel in protest of the Byrnes and Cannon economy proposals, spokesmen for the committee against false economy said of Senator McCarran, who will be the principal speaker: "Senator McCarran's record of activity on behalf of Federal employes makes him the logical speaker for the occasion. As the first to warn of the dangers in the Byrnes proposal, and as the sponsor of the bill bearing his name, which provides for minimum salary and automatic promotions, he has earned the respect and confidence of practically all Federal employes."

Southeastern Head Honored For Services

Auto Given to Dr. Bell in University's Rites of Graduation.

Dr. James A. Bell last night was presented an automobile in honor of his 15 years' service as director of education and president of Southeastern University.

The presentation was made at the annual banquet and dance of the graduating classes of the university, held in the National Press Club. Raymond G. Dunn, as chairman of a special committee, represented the students, faculty, alumni, administrative officers and educational committee of the university in making the presentation, which was arranged as a surprise.

Addresses were made by Thomas P. Gray, president of the senior law class, and by Richard E. Beale, president of the senior accountancy class. The list of honor students also was announced.

Miss Anna L. Price was awarded the gold key for attaining the highest average for the three years in the School of Accountancy. Other honor students in the same school were Earl C. Sharits, Harold W. Savage, David R. Young, Louis H. Sternberg, Emmett F. Ault, Tracy M. E. Houff, Rolland W. Mars, Ralph H. Holstrom, Elaine Carlson, Howard F. Ripley, Max Leiderman, Richard E. Beale, Irving Miller, Robert E. Curtin, Andy Middleton, James T. Malone, Richard H. Winkleman and Samuel F. Beardsley.

Raymond G. Dunne, local real estate man and a former president of the Northeast Business Men's Association, was awarded the gold key for attaining the highest average for the three years in the university's law school. Other law school honor students are W. J. Burns, Ray A. Ellis, D. J. Pinion, Sara A. Huloher, Roy K. Marquardt, E. M. Sanford, Sydney B. Smith, Alice Atkinson, James M. Strickland, A. Jack Riley and J. Robert Sherwood.

Woods Searched For Twin Girls, 6, In Fairfax County

Police and neighbors early today were searching the woods in Fairfax County for 6-year-old twin girls who were missing from their home since early in the afternoon.

The girls, Pauline and Maxine Howser, are daughters of a tenant farmer on the land of Lillian Millan, 3 miles west of Fairfax.

One is a brunette, the other a blonde, a lookout broadcast by Sheriff Eppa Kirby stated.

William J. F. Brown, an attorney who said he represented the girl, identified her as Miss Patricia Douglas, of Los Angeles. Brown said he brought the case to the district attorney's office.

The pair went out to pick strawberries in the afternoon, but police were not notified until dark. Neighbors said they had been seen playing on Lee Highway, about a mile and a half from the home, in the late afternoon.

Truck Driver, Pledged to Find Work for Jobless Man, Disappears at End of 1,147-Mile Ride; Two Children With Parents.

Tired, hot and dirty, without a cent in his pockets and not knowing a soul in Washington, James Price, of Fort Pierce, Fla., led his wife and two small children down Pennsylvania avenue, ready to start the 1,147-mile walk back to Fort Pierce.

At 5 o'clock yesterday morning, James, his wife, Marie, and two children, 4-year-old Pearl and 2-year-old Gene, had been let off a block from the Capitol. A truck driver, making the trip from Fort Pierce to Washington, had given them a ride for two days and nights. And James, who had done most of the driving, had not slept since Monday night.

The driver promised to be back in a few minutes, to help Price find the promised $20-a-week job. But when 11 o'clock came, and no truck driver, the family of four started off to look for help. Their last 5-cent piece had gone to buy milk for Pearl and Gene. James had been in Washington before several years ago, but didn't know anyone.

Wearily they visited first one, and then another welfare agency. But the family were not Washingtonians; and Mrs. Price, her eyes all but closed from fatigue, refused to accept help if it meant the family would be separated.

"We ain't never been apart yet. And we ain't going to be," she said with sodden determination.

"Don't Like the People."

So the family of four began their trip back to Fort Pierce. Mrs. Price refused to consider staying here any longer. "It's a pretty town, but I don't like the people," she said.

They trudged down Pennsylvania avenue, barefooted Gene walking across Fourteenth street with little attention to street cars and taxicabs. Here a passer-by presented Gene with a handful of candy, promptly appropriated by Pearl.

Finally James accepted an offer of lunch for his family at a downtown restaurant. But Marie refused to eat, or even enter the restaurant. She wanted to get back to Fort Pierce as soon as possible. Despite fatigue and lack of money, she was insistent upon starting the 1,147-mile trek immediately.

While he fed mashed potatoes and milk to his two youngsters, James Price revealed the story behind the strange trip. Two months ago, he said, he had a good job, driving a truck in Fort Pierce, hauling lumber and produce. The pay wasn't much—$10 a week—but it kept the family going.

Job Promised.

When he was laid off in April, he talked with other drivers about getting a new job. One of them, a gray-haired, blue-eyed man from Washington, known only as "Jim," promised him a good job up here, and said he would give the family of four a lift on his next trip North.

Monday night they left Fort Pierce, taking all they owned with them—their children, a suit case and a bag of clothes and $2. Two days and nights of solid driving—with Price doing most of it—and they were left on the Capitol grounds.

Teigan Pledges Backing to D.C. In Vote Drive

Farmer-Labor Legislator Calls Lack of Franchise an 'Outrage.'

The fact that District of Columbia residents are denied franchise was called "outrageous" last night by Representative Henry G. Teigan (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

After sympathizing with members of the Association of Nonclassified Federal Employes—who are pressing for enactment of the Ramspeck bill to bring emergency workers into the civil service through noncompetitive examinations—Teigan said that District residents were at a disadvantage because of their lack of representation.

"You have the power of protest, but you haven't the ballot, and that is outrageous. As far as I'm concerned, I'll vote to give you the franchise if it ever comes to issue," he told the association.

Representative Harold G. Mosier (Democrat), of Ohio, declared himself a firm believer in the civil service and was "happy to know that we have the Ramspeck bill that we can work on in your behalf." He promised to do his best to line up the Ohio delegation in its behalf.

Representative Luther Patrick (Democrat), Alabama, promised the employes his support and read from some of the poems he has written. The speakers were introduced by Harold P. Thorson.

Campaign Planned.

Plans for a drive of education on national representation for the District of Columbia also were made by the national representation committee of the Junior Board of Commerce at the Harrington Hotel.

It was agreed by the committee that individual members should be given time to prepare individually their own analysis of the national representation problem. This was proposed by Leo N. McGuire, chairman.

Those who attended in addition to McGuire were John S. Bleecker, jr., president of the junior board; John W. Johnson, A. Z. Foster Wood, David R. Isen, C. C. Richardson, Fred Linton and Robert Lee O'Brien.

Capital Slums Called Worst 'Of Any City'

Dr. Blackwelder Tells Club of Deplorable Conditions.

Kiwanians May Appoint Committee to Study Problem.

"Slums of the National Capital are the worst of any city in the world."

Speaking from facts obtained through personal investigation, Dr. Oscar Blackwelder made this harsh indictment at the luncheon meeting of the Washington Kiwanis Club at the Mayflower yesterday afternoon.

Having made a study of slum districts, not only in principal cities of the United States, but also abroad, Dr. Blackwelder said Washington's most distressing living spots were within shooting distance of the Capitol.

Dr. Blackwelder, in company with four other Kiwanis leaders, George Mangan, Lewis T. Breuninger, Mark Lansburgh and Risley Hunt, spent 3½ early morning hours last week on a tour of slums. The group was escorted by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and other high police officers.

Five Sleep in One Bed.

"We did not find these slum conditions in alleys," declared Dr. Blackwelder, but in houses on streets and avenues.

"When we visited one small room, insanitary and utterly filthy, we found five persons sleeping in a single bed, a mother, father and three children. In another tiny adjoining room four other children were huddled in one bed."

So impressed were the Kiwanians by the eye-witness report on slum conditions by their brother members, that they immediately adopted a resolution looking toward the creation of an advisory committee of the club charged with taking steps to correct the situation.

After Dr. Blackwelder had completed his talk, Maj. Brown rose and told his brother Kiwanians he indorsed every word the speaker uttered.

"There is no question," continued Maj. Brown, "but what anyone who makes personal investigation of the slum conditions will have their eyes opened. Those who were on the tour with my officers and myself, life-long residents of the District, were stupefied by what they saw."

Health Officers Concur.

District Health Officer Dr. George C. Ruhland and Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger were guests of the club who evidenced their approval of the remarks made by Dr. Blackwelder.

Dr. Blackwelder quoted statistics showing that the death rate from tuberculosis, diphtheria and typhoid in Washington far exceeded, and sometimes doubled, the rate in seven principal American cities.

Showing that the slum problem is a direct challenge to District residents, Mr. Blackwelder told of meeting on the tour, in one of the slum rooms, a colored man who had worked in a barber shop he had patronized. He suggested families have their domestics submit to a blood test, inasmuch as one who had cared for the children of a family for 15 years was later found to be in the advanced stages of syphilis.

Armed with flashlights, the investigating party roused many of the slum occupants and interrogated them between 11 p. m. and 2:30 a. m.

Many on Relief.

They found many of the slum inmates were on relief. In one instance a "middleman" is renting a house for $75, and parceling out rooms and room space at such rates as to net him $360 per month.

In one section Dr. Blackwelder said slum conditions were maintained directly across the street from a new high school.

Following is the resolution adopted designed to help halt slum conditions:

"Resolved, That we have listened to the presentation by one of our members of the slum conditions of Washington with deep concern. That our club membership requests our board of directors to consider the advisability of naming a committee to make a special study of the problem, especially as it concerns disease, crime and public relief.

tion of Associate Prof. Marvin T. Herrick, whose two-year term expires at the end of the current academic year.

After giving consideration to the report of its special committee, the board unanimously reaffirmed its action of March 11, when it was decided not to renew the contract.

Construction of both the Lisner and the other building will be started in the fall. The library building will replace Lisner Hall, which was the gift of Lisner to the university more than 30 years ago, and which has been in constant use since. It will take its place between the biological science building and the social science hall, completing the group on the G street side of the university quadrangle.

Plans for the hall of government are being developed at this time.

President Marvin said of the gifts: "At a period which many years ago was a difficult one for the university, Mr. Lisner came forward to its aid. It is altogether fine that again, in this time of expanding university needs, his name should be placed over the portals of that building which is the heart of the university.

Other prizes accepted included the Charles C. Swisher prize in medieval history, and the Phi Sigma Kappa prize in public speaking.

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, was elected chairman of the board of trustees, to fill the place which has been vacant since the death of John Bell Larner. Arthur Peter was re-elected vice chairman and Harry C. Davis secretary of the board.

The board elected one new member—Charles S. Baker, Washington attorney and retiring president of the General Alumni Association. Senator Bennett Champ Clark and Chief Justice Alfred Adams Wheat were re-elected as alumni trustees, following their nomination by vote of the alumni. Also re-elected to the board were Capt. John H. Cowles, Charles C. Glover, jr., Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong and Merle Thorpe.

The board also approved the creation of a radio workshop and

Housing Unit Near Abattoir Due for Action

Zoning Body to Consider N. Y. Firm's Petition on Monday.

The District Zoning Commission is expected to meet in executive session Monday to act upon a petition presented yesterday by the National Homes Corporation of New York to construct a $1,000,000 housing development in Benning, D. C.

The New York concern asked the commission to rezone a 65-acre tract in Benning from its present commercial restriction to residential. The proposed low-cost housing unit is within 300 yards of the controversial Adolf Gobel abattoir site.

Myron Davy, counsel for the National Homes Corporation, said the housing tract was bought last May with expectations the Gobel plant would be banned.

Alfred D. Calvert, of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, which already has gone on record against the proposed abattoir, asked the Zoning Commission to postpone its decision until Congress had disposed of the slaughterhouse question.

school, following study of a report on this matter prepared by Prof. Willard H. Yeager of the department of public speaking, and Prof. Douglas Bement of the English department. An advisory council for this project is to be formed at once.

Appointments for next year approved by the board included those of Elizabeth Berkner, instructor in in physical education for women; James Holmes Defandorf, instructor in pharmacy; Robert Custis Grubbs, instructor in physiology; Lawrence Lee Jarvie, assistant professor of education; Zigmond M. Lebenshon, instructor in neurology; Luther H. Snyder, instructor in pathology, and Ross M. Taylor, instructor in English.

Civic Leader To Ask 5-Ct. Trolley Fare

Clayton, Federation Head, Assails Transit Plea for Boost.

Stiff Battle Is Expected at Public Hearings on June 14.

Requests for a 5-cent street car fare in Washington will be made by William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee, Federation of Citizens Associations, when public hearings are held June 14 on transit company proposals to increase token rates, it was learned last night.

Clayton described as "pretty nervy" the Capital Transit Co.'s recent application to boost token fares from 4 to 30 cents to 4 for 35 cents.

"I intend to ask for a 5-cent fare—even if it is just a test proposition," said Clayton. "When we had the $1 pass, each person rode for 3½ or 4 cents. And now, with the $1.25 pass, it is almost the same. I see no reason why the transit company can't operate with a general 5-cent fare."

Strikes at Equipment.

Clayton also struck at the transit company's present equipment and estimated that at least 200 cars should be replaced.

"Many street cars now operating in the District should be on the junk heap," Clayton declared.

Before Washington's rail transportation facilities merged several years ago, residents were receiving "fair" service, asserted Clayton.

"But now," he added, "the service is inefficient and inadequate. The merger, according to predictions, was to give us the best street railway system in the country. Now it is one of the worst."

Wage Boost Cited.

Led by the Federation of Citizens' Associations, a determined battle over the increased token proposal is expected at the scheduled hearings. The amended fare petition was received by the Public Utilities Commission coincident with plans to hold meetings on the transit company's original request for an increase in token fares to three for 25 cents.

Supporting their demands for a higher fare, transit company officials cited a $288,000 wage increase to employes during the past year. This was due, they said, to an increase of 3 cents an hour granted one-man car operators and 2 cents an hour granted to operators of two-man cars.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Jane Bryan and Dame May Whitty Worth Watching In New Performances on Local Screens This Week

Actresses Years Apart in Age Contribute Helpful Portrayals to Pictures on the Earle and Capitol Screens; Schedule-Makers Still at Work; Rialto Remains Open Extra Day; Amusement Notes.

WHILE it never is the policy of this column to review pictures or plays minutely until they have been accorded public presentation in Washington, there are two performances coming up today on local screens that seem to warrant a bit of advance ballyhoo. Both are feminine and they are contributed to the cinema by actresses who are years apart in age.

BELL.

When you see "Kid Galahad"—as everybody probably will—on the screen at the Earle, you will encounter, perhaps for the first time, a young actress by the name of Jane Bryan, who does an exceptionally promising piece of work as the ingenue in the film play. In announcing casts for forthcoming Warner productions days ago, we expressed a total ignorance of the identity of this young woman, who will be seen more and more as time goes on. Now we know.

As Marie, kid sister of Nick Donati, played by Edward G. Robinson in "Galahad," Miss Bryan turns in a performance that stamps her as a comer among the younger actresses of the screen. She has beauty, poise and a nice sense of timing and can weep most effectively which, after all, is one of the prime assets of any up-and-coming young actress who may have it in the back of her mind someday to become a great emotional star.

I do not mean to forecast from this distance that Miss Bryan necessarily will become a great emotional actress, but she does a fine job in fast company. In this picture they have tossed her in almost on equal terms with Robinson, Bette Davis and that handsome newcomer to the lenses, Wayne Morris, and she does about as well as any of them. Here is a young woman who will be worth watching—she is now, as a matter of fact.

The other outstanding distaff characterization gracing the week that opens today is provided by that venerable English actress, Dame May Whitty, who appears as Mrs. Bramson with Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Night Must Fall," on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Here is a superb bit of character portrayal that does much to lend fiber and suspense to the unusual melodrama in which Montgomery finds himself cast.

Dame Whitty played the same role on the London stage throughout the long run of the Emlyn Williams play from which the film is adapted and, therefore, knew her way about in the part before the lights were set or the cameras adjusted. That does not at all detract from the superlatively excellent portrayal she brings to the screen.

The only thing I wonder about in contemplating this picture is that Dame Whitty, for most of its length, is trundled about in a wheel-chair, but when she wishes to get up and walk, she does so with utmost ease and grace. It may have been that all of her ailments were mental. One doesn't walk on his mind.

But the point is that here are two finely rounded performances by two actresses at opposite ends of the age scale that deserve to be seen and enjoyed. Don't say I didn't tell you.

★ ★ ★ ★

The Earle Theater's schedule makers are still on the buzz, if you know what I mean. With five presentations of "Kid Galahad" and Benny Goodman and His Orchestra scheduled for today, the lads have outdone themselves for tomorrow. On Saturday, the Earle will open its doors at 9:15 a. m., in order to present six unreelings of "Kid Galahad" and get Swingster Goodman on the stage five times. The first screening of the picture will begin at 9:30 and Goodman and his associates will come on for the first time at 11:15. So now you know.

★ ★ ★ ★

"The Empire's Hour of Glory," a two-reel summary of the coronation of King George VI, will be shown at the Little Theater for the week beginning on Sunday. This compilation of newsreels shots comprises perhaps the most complete recital of all the events of the coronation that have been shown locally.

At the same time, the Rialto Theater, under the same management, announces that in view of the probable influx of out-of-town tourists, its current double-feature bill of "Abraham Lincoln" and "Call of the Wild," will be continued through Sunday. Following the final showings on Sunday night, the house will be dark for a week for the installation of air-conditioning equipment.

"The Empire's Hour of Glory," in all appropriateness, will be shown as a companion feature with the picturization of Noel Coward's "Cavalcade."

★ ★ ★ ★

The "personal card" season also is open. On the same mail arrive invitations to see Benny Meroff crowned "king of jibe music," at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday night, and another engraved business summoning us to a motion picture illustrated lecture by John M. Holzworth, author, explorer and naturalist, at Wardman Park the same night. Mr. Holzworth will speak on the topics of "Alaska, Land of the Midnight Sun" and "The River of No Return." He must mean the Styx.

★ ★ ★ ★

Progress is being made rapidly on the construction of the new Newton Theater, being erected on the corner of Twelfth and Newton streets northeast, for operation by Louis Bernheimer. This structure is expected to add appreciably to Brookland's impressiveness as a business center.

The Newton will be the fourth house under Bernheimer operation, the three already functioning being the Sylvan, Jesse and Palm. It will have a seating capacity of about 1,200 and will be equipped with all modern devices for patron comfort. The present expectation is that the house will be ready for public dedication early in July.

★ ★ ★ ★

It might be observed in connection with his appearance on the screen at RKO-Keith's this week with Ann Sothern in "There Goes My Girl," that Gene Raymond is the young fellow who is to marry Jeanette MacDonald in the most effulgent wedding ceremony of the Hollywood year. Nelson Eddy is to sing at the wedding and many of Miss MacDonald's earlier leading men are to be ushers and altogether it is expected that there will be much pushing and hauling.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

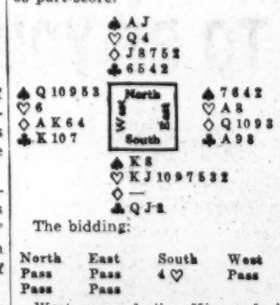
Preemptive Bids.

An opening bid of four of a suit is preemptive in the Culbertson System, even when possession of a part-score makes that a bid for more than game. In the hand below, South would have bid two hearts had he wanted to explore slam possibilities. With the hand he held, his bid was a good choice. West and East were effectively shut out, although they could have made four spades unless North gave his partner a diamond-ruff, and even in that case a loss of 100 or even 200 points would have been better than loss of a game.

North, dealer.

East-West vulnerable.

North-South not vulnerable and 60 part-score.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the King of diamonds and South ruffed. Declarer now considered his resources and discovered that the loss of a heart trick was inevitable. His only chance to make the game consisted in limiting the club loss to two tricks. But this could be done only by two leads from the dummy, except in the rather unlikely contingency that East held both missing honors in clubs. With two entries needed in dummy, declarer discovered that only the Ace of spades was sure, and, therefore, went after the Queen of hearts.

East, however, was alive to the situation and saved the Ace of hearts to kill the Queen. Put back in his hand with a diamond ruff, South looked around for further means of entering the dummy twice. The fact that East had showed up with the Ace of hearts was very strong evidence that he did not have both the Ace and King of clubs—since he had passed originally.

After a moment's hesitation, declarer saw that dummy might provide two entries in spades if West had the Queen. Accordingly he led a low spade and West foolishly played low. Dummy's Jack won—a successful, but ordinarily unnecessary, finesse. Now declarer had the two necessary entries for club leads and succeeded in making one of his clubs for his contract.

West should have realized that the play of the Queen of spades was vital on the first spade lead. South obviously had no spades which he wished to ruff in dummy since he had tackled trumps before spades. That could mean only that South did not have the King or that he had only one small card with the King. In either event the play of the Queen could lose nothing, and, as it turned out, would have killed one of the entries to dummy.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, June 3.—What Greta Garbo is to MGM, Marion Davies, Katharine Hepburn, and Carole Lombard are respectively to Warners, RKO and Paramount. Warren William flicks one drop of perfume on his mustache each morning. Maybe it's Bob Burns that has started him to writing poetry. Sadly in need of good pictures to bolster fading prestige: Marlene Dietrich. Despite the swanky modernness of her home, Joan Bennett keeps an old rocking chair and a pair of soft slippers in her private "comfort room."

MARION DAVIES.

Telephone Joe E. Brown's home and the comedian will answer the call with: "This is Joe E. Brown talking, and who are you?" For tricky mustaches, Ronald Colman's. Wonder if Edna Best knew best in not granting Herbert Marshall a divorce? Lupe Velez modestly explains she pays no more than $15 for her daytime dresses—but what about the supplementary diamond bracelets? Edward Everett Horton hesitates that way off-screen, too.

Most self-conscious girl in town: Lady Ashley in Mary Pickford's presence. When Shirley Temple needs outlet for disgust, she shouts, "Aw, shoot!" Just try to converse with Francis Lederer without winding up in a discussion of world peace, just try. Claire Trevor's bedroom has more mirrors than Mae West's, plus something nicer to reflect in them.

Hollywoodism: Where people hold their heads so high in the clouds, they can't keep their feet on the ground. Candidate for skin like satin: Virginia Bruce.

I have heard of few ribs funnier than Bing Crosby's at Bob Burns' expense. Seems that Bob subscribes to his home town (Van Buren, Ark.) paper, and on the editorial page therein, he and Crosby read a pro and con discussion as to whether the comedian's fun-pokes were damaging the town's good reputation. Imbued with a gag ida, Crosby managed to have a letter mailed from Van Buren to Burns. It stated that a committee of six was headed for Hollywood to discuss the problem.

Then, one day Bing's secretary telephoned Burns on the set, informed him she was one of the committee and demanded, "When may we meet you?" Bob arranged to greet them in front of the studio at 2 o'clock that afternoon. From 2 to 4, he paced nervously on the front sidewalk, awaiting the appearance of the home towners. Of course, they never showed up. But Bing and the gang did. One by one, throughout Bob's vigil and until at last he realized he was being kidded, they sauntered past and casually said, "Hi there, Bob. Waiting for somebody to ask for your autograph?"

At the preview of "The Road Back," Andy Devine had to leave the theater for a few minutes. It was during the making of this picture, you may recall that Devine's friend, George Daley, was killed in an accidental explosion. The night of the accident, Daley (playing a French soldier) was in a trench facing Andy (supposedly a German). After a first terrific bombardment, Devine, having the time of his life, poked his head over the top of his trench and yelled across "no man's land." "Do you give up, George?" This time I'm going to get you." The signal blew for the re-take of the scene—and two minutes later came the blast that left Daley stretched lifeless on the ground.

Wife of McAdoo's Son Gets Decree

Riverside, Calif., June 3 (AP).—A final divorce decree was granted today to Mrs. Molly Tackaberry McAdoo from William Gibbs McAdoo, jr., son of the California Senator.

Mrs. McAdoo won an interlocutory judgment here May 12 of last year, charging failure to provide. The decree was not contested. In the hearing last year Superior Judge O. K. Morton granted custody of the two minor children to Mrs. McAdoo.

Gonzaga High School To Award Scholarships

Examination for four full scholarships in English and arithmetic will be conducted at 9 a. m. tomorrow at Gonzaga High School, 27 I street northwest.

Besides the full scholarships, the competitive tests will result in the awarding of 12 half-scholarships, it was announced yesterday. Graduates of grammar schools, both parochial and public, are eligible for the examinations.

Winners will be announced Sunday at a reception for parents of the eighth-grade boys.

A Press Agent Begins Expose Of His Tricks

Publicist for Great Stars Reveals Secret Toll of His Job.

By John Peere Miles.

Hollywood, June 3 (U.P.).—When a newspaperman becomes a press agent in Hollywood he leaves the world of common sense behind. From then on he lives in a perfumed fog, a bewildered innocent who stores his dreams in pill boxes against the next headache that comes along.

Like a fuse that's been drenched under years of futility he yearns to blow up and smack illusions, but he ends his days rather harmlessly, with a coat of fur on his tongue and a bellyache that has defied anatomy by traveling to his head.

But taking smacks at Hollywood is as wasteful of time as shadow-boxing with gin specters. The film city can take it, and how! It has a chin as absorbing as gelatin and it thrives on sneers, jeers and cheers. This job of attacking is best done by visiting Englishmen, old vaudeville hams, one-shot writers and, of course, all disappointed actors.

Futility of Ego.

But a press agent who analyzes Hollywood knows the futility of smashing through its dense wall of ego. He knows that Hollywood is nothing more than an orange tree surrounded by unemployed actors waiting for windfalls. It is the only city in the world where you can feel superior and get a thunderous echo in response.

Here the parade of life passes in tinsel every two minutes of the day—a fantastic, at times ludicrous, display of emotional fundamentals draped in intense seriousness.

No ex-newspaperman has a right to cherish illusions where fermented emotions cost a dollar for ten and where the heart, in its strictest dictionary sense, is only the cardiac organ used as a pumping station, but apart from this recognizable fault of Hollywood's, there are certain things which are very queer.

There is no set way in which a press agent may win the friendship of motion picture players. We may break his back for them and, for his reward, pay his own hospitalization. There are exceptions, of course, but this rule holds true: The more the press agents work for the advancement of stars, the more they think the agents are going to hurt them. And the more good notices wangled for them the more vicious is this resentment of intrusion into their success.

Stars Resent Agent.

The average star appears to resent the feeling that a press agent is responsible for success. This attitude seems to spell glamour—the twist in the human mechanism that makes Hollywood what it is.

With his tongue doing Immelman turns in his cheek—a shameless bit of sacrilege—the average press agent enters merrily into the game. He figures a newcomer to the screen is nothing more to him than a commodity which he must sell the best way that he can. If she is freckled, then freckles must be established as a vogue. When Marlene Dietrich first came to town she was unimpressive and decidedly plump.

Someone discovered, only Heaven knows how, that she had good-looking legs and Marlene became "Legs" Dietrich—an inspired piece of ballyhoo which became the foundation of this star's career. Pola Negri was made to chase Rudolph Valentino and Charlie Chaplin all over the map. And have you heard about Katharine Hepburn, Greta Garbo, Clara Bow and, of course, Simone Simon?

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, June 3.

FORTUNE: A director who returned from Hollywood this week confided his new plans to Everett Sloane—who portrays the theatrical agent in "Boy Meets Girl" . . . "I'm leaving for Berlin next week," the director stated. "I signed a seven-year contract with UFA Films there" . . . "In order to sign with UFA for seven years," Sloane replied, "you first have to break a mirror!"

• • • •

WEALTH: Fannie Brice, who is in New York preparing for her Hollywood assignment, was discussing her income tax payments. "It's terrible when they hit you that way with one big clip," she lamented . . . "Oh, but Fannie," E. Duryea Dowling pointed out, "with those income taxes from people like you, it helps keep WPA going, it helps keep the unemployed going, and helps keep the country going." "Yeah," Miss Brice agreed," but it stops Me!"

• • • •

TRUTH: In Saturday's Home Journal Leonard Hall in discussing snobbery in night clubs, wrote "A Broadway columnist recently said in print that 22 suits have been filed against the Stork Club, one of Gotham's most popular super-saloons, because the plaintiffs had been refused admittance to the joint by the viscount masquerading as Lord High Guardian of the Inner Portal. The management denied this to me with some heat" . . . Mr. Hall may recognize heat when he faces it, but he didn't recognize the real management of the Stork Club. For confirmation of that story—which appeared here—he should have gone, as I did, to Sherman Billingsley, who owns the Stork Club.

• • • •

DILEMMA: Phyllis Perlman, the press agent, is in a troubled state these days. Miss Perlman is press-agenting Alfred de Liagre's show, "Yes, My Darling Daughter." That show will be presented in London, and Miss Perlman's job is to publicize that event in the London papers . . . On June 2 "Lovers' Meeting," a rival show produced by Theron Bamberger, opened in London . . . In private life Phyllis Perlman is Mrs. Theron Bamberger.

• • • •

PLIGHT: Saul Grauman, whose vaudeville routine is known throughout Chicago and the Midwest, for many years has been yearning for a break in New York. Two weeks ago that break came, and Grauman came to Manhattan, in preparation for his engagement at Loew's State. "Now," his agent assured him, "your troubles are all over" . . . But Grauman's troubles aren't over. Ten days ago a drunk entered his room and shouted: "My girl's here. What'd you do with her?" Grauman finally placated him, summoned the landlord—who revealed that the young lady had occupied that room until six months before Grauman's arrival here . . . Ten minutes later the drunk returned with a cop, screaming: "This guy's got a gun." The cop searched the room and found a gun—which is used in Grauman's vaudeville act. And so, in felony court, Saul Grauman will appear, charged with violation of the Sullivan law.

TRIUMPH: Saturday night, at the last performance of "Sea Legs," the audience continued to applaud during the finale. The applause seemed to be directed at Walter Greaza—who stopped to take four bows. The audience arose from their seats and continued applauding—while the puzzled but pleased Greaza took another bow. He soon discovered the reason. Roscoe Ates had given him a hot-foot.

PRIDE: The marquee at the Norwalk Movie Theater this week displays this billing: "Norwalk's Own—Horace McMahon in 'They Gave Him a Gun'—with Spencer Tracy and Franchot Tone" . . . McMahon has six speaking lines in the picture.

• • • •

WARNING: Milton Berle went to the race track Saturday but made no bets. "I'm just betting in my mind," he explained to Goodman Ace . . . "Well, be careful," Ace warned. "I knew a guy once who went to the track and made these mind bets. In the first four races he lost his bets. After the fifth race he lost his mind!"

• • • •

SUCCESS: Don Budge, top-ranking U. S. tennis star, marched into the Onyx Club at 2 a. m., accompanied by a fair companion. Budge, who had just won the fourth successive victory in the North American zone series in the Davis Cup matches, settled back in his chair. "Now that these matches are over," he told a newspaper man, "I can break training" . . . A few minutes later the waiter served his order—two bottles of Coca-Cola.

• • • •

ENTERPRISE: Joe Bigelow was signed by Sam Goldwyn recently and was assigned to write the gags for the new "Goldwyn Follies" . . . Bigelow did such an excellent job that he was assigned to assist in the writing of "Stella Dallas!"

• • • •

AMBITION: Orson Welles is directing the forthcoming WPA opera, "The Cradle Will Rock." The opera was written by Marc Blitzstein, who sat with Welles during the rehearsals . . . "In this scene," Welles suggested, "let's cut out all the music. We'll just have the prostitute walk slowly toward the light and see how effective it is" . . . The composer watched, and realized the excellent effect resulting from the elimination of the music he wrote for that bit. He stared, fascinated . . . "Gee," he sighed, when the scene was over, "I wish I had written that!"

$2,000 Verdict Given In Bus Tragedy Suit

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., June 3.—A Frederick County jury tonight awarded Dr. I. M. Zimmerman, Williamsport, Md., physician, $2,000 damages against Howard R. Poe, Hagerstown, for the death of his daughter, Margaret Eva Zimmerman, Williamsport High School student, who lost her life in a bus-train crash at the Rockville grade crossing in April, 1935.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, co-defendant in the suit, was absolved of blame.

Poe was owner of the school bus in which 16 children were killed while returning home from College Park, Md. The jury deliberated about an hour. Dr. Zimmerman sought $25,000.

Girl Friend Held Cause Of Boy's Burning School

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 3. Pleading guilty to a share in burning the Locust Grove schoolhouse near here last February and taking a parole penalty, Howard Rockwell, 16, took the stand as a State witness here yesterday against Kenneth White, indicted in the same offense, and swore that White influenced him to act.

Testimony was introduced indicating one motive in the burning was that White desired to have the school, which he attended, burned so he might get a transfer to another school attended by a girl friend.

2 Hatchet Slayers Get 29-30 Years

Jersey City, N. J., June 3 (A.P.).—Seventeen-year-old Gladys MacKnight and her former sweetheart, Donald Wightman, 19, made no show of emotion today as Judge Thomas F. Meaney sentenced them to from 29 to 30 years at hard labor in State Prinson for the hatchet murder of the girl's mother.

Thirty years was the maximum the laws allowed under their conviction of second-degree murder.

As sentence was imposed, Gladys preserved the calm she has shown since her arrest on the night of the murder and uttered no word. Also calm, the youth half-smiled at his saddened parents.

Wayne Morris Displays Form Of Real Champ

Hero of Current Film Is Held to Be Promising Material for Ring.

Where, oh where are the spindly legged, anemic looking, thin chested but pretty movie heroes who, in days gone by, used to portray heavyweight prize fighters?

With one powder-puff flick of an overstuffed boxing mitt, they used to floor the great brawny bit players whose cauliflower ears and flat noses were eloquent testimonials of past ring activities. Never by any chance were they—the heroes—to be actually hit by the pilloy-cushions the real fighters were wielding.

This thought sprang up as a result of a writer's curiosity about "Kid Galahad," the prize-ring drama which comes to the Earle Theater today, and a certain young actor, Wayne Morris, who was chosen by Warner Brothers to play the title role.

Mallets on Kegs.

One day while the picture was being made, there issued from Stage 9 at the studio some sounds like the thumping of oaken kegs with wooden mallets, a stamping of feet and a background of grunts and sobbing breath.

At last, overcome by curiosity, the writer invaded the place, and found a boxing ring.

In the ring were three men. Two wore headguards. The other seemed to be both referee and coach, and in his battle-scarred face were familiar conformations. It was Mushy Callahan, ex-welterweight champ, now professional referee and trainer.

"Hi!" greeted Mushy. He jerked a thumb over his shoulder and indicated the two fighters indiscriminately: "What do you think of my boy there? Pretty good, ain't he?"

"Which boy?"

"Which" echoed Mushy. "Why, the good one, of course—the boy in black tights! The other's just a local sparring partner. But this boy—well, mister, I would take him out to the Olympic Club or the American Legion Stadium tomorrow night, and match him against any professional heavyweight in the preliminaries.

"Who Is He?"

"Who is he?" inquired the writer. By this time, he thought he knew, but still it didn't seem quite credible that this big fellow who was catching the other again and again with a long left and at times whipping over a swell-looking right cross—no!

"Wayne Morris is his name," Mushy declared, adding with a note of disgust in his voice, "you know—the boy they're makin' an actor of! I've been training him for 18 days now for his fights in this 'Galahad' picture. Too bad they don't let us make a scrapper out of him."

And as was said in the beginning, the writer looked at the 190-pound kid who had just staggered his 200-pound opponent with a right—and thought of those powderpuff movie athletes of days past!

$8,100 Rum Fee Yield For Frederick County

Frederick, Md., June 3 (A.P.).—Fees from liquor licenses yielded Frederick County $8,100 for the year ending May 31, as compared with $8,220 for the previous year. Of the total income last year, Frederick received $2,203. The county commissioners received $5,402.

83% Inaccuracy Revealed in Scales

Of 343 wagon and truck scales tested recently by the Bureau of Standards, in a survey of Southern States, 83 per cent were found to be inaccurate, Ralph W. Smith told the National Conference on Weights and Measures yesterday. The average percentage error was 1.39.

Smith said the bureau offers cooperation to States in securing suitable equipment to detect such errors. To demonstrate the bureau's method and equipment, officials tested a 40,000-pound truck scale before the 150 delegates to the conference.

Smith's talk followed an explanation of scale design by Kenneth C. Allen of the Hobart Manufacturing Co. Yesterday afternoon the delegates toured the bureau laboratories. Secretary of Commerce Roper's address, scheduled for yesterday, will be given at 10:30 a. m. today instead.

Eclipse to Be Seen At 6-Mile Height

New York, June 3 (A.P.).—The first man who may be able to see, and photograph, a shadow traveling 4,000 miles an hour will be Capt. A. W. Stevens, U. S. A., aviator, during the total eclipse of June 8 in Peru.

Capt. Stevens plans to see the eclipse from a height of 30,000 feet, 6 miles. For him, when this shadow, 153 miles wide, rolls in from the Pacific Ocean toward the coast of Peru, there will be an unusual opportunity.

The sun at that moment will be low, 8 degrees above the horizon. Its reflection, and resilient path over the water should be brilliant. For this reason it may be possible to see clearly the edge of the advancing shadow and to catch its circular shape in photographs.

Premier Completes Japanese Cabinet

Tokyo, June 3 (A.P.).—Prince Fumimaro Konoye today completed formation of a cabinet to replace the army-supported government of Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, who resigned Monday under party pressure.

The prince gave the foreign portfolio to former Premier Koki Hirota and appointed Shenji Yoshino minister of commerce and industry. Okinobu Kaya, vice minister of finance, was named finance minister.

Some of the selections were attacked by the press, particularly the appointment of Eiichi Baba as home minister. Fear that he may enforce controlled economy caused one to seven yen losses in some stocks.

Forum to Celebrate Repeal of Red Rider

A program in celebration of the repeal of the red rider will conclude the 1936-37 season of the Capital City Forum tonight. The feature of the evening will be a presentation of the Forum's three-act satire, "Hurrah for the ——, White and Blue."

Representative Byron Scott, of California, also will speak. The forum will meet at 1502 Fourteenth street northwest.

This highly intellectual-looking young fellow is Jack Marshall, vocalist with Benny Meroff's orchestra, opening on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater today with something new in rhythms, known as "jibe music"—whatever that may be.

'Informed Opinion' In Politics Asked

Indianapolis, June 3 (A.P.).—Mrs. Charles W. Tillett, jr., of Charlotte, N. C., advocated building of "an informed public opinion" in politics in an address before several hundred delegates attending the Great Lakes Regional Conference of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee here tonight.

Mrs. Samuel M. Ralston, Indiana member of the national committee, presided at luncheon at noon, at which Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, of Washington, D. C., director of the women's division of the national committee, spoke.

Mrs. McAllister said Democratic women demand equality with men in the administration of party affairs.

A telegram of greetings from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was read.

D.C. Colored Man Held in Richmond After Long Plunge

Richmond, Va., June 3 (A.P.).—A Washington colored man awaited a police court rule today on what is to be done with a man who wilfully jumped from the 100-foot Lee Bridge into the James River.

The colored man, Oscar Young, 28, leaped from the bridge yesterday afternoon near a spot where two boys were swimming. Apparently stunned by the impact, he floundered in the water. The two boys, Louis Quick, 13, and John Kalenza, 18, found a rope on the bank nearby, swam out and pulled the man ashore.

Young, little the worse for his plunge, was taken to First Police Precinct while police debated what to do about it.

$100,000 Blaze Razes Coast Pier

Seattle, June 3 (A.P.).—A spectacular fire of undetermined origin wrecked Connecticut street pier here late today, causing damage estimated at $100,000 and injuring four firemen. Fanned by a strong north wind, the flames threatened a large part of the Seattle waterfront until brought under control by firemen, Coast Guardsmen and sailors of the Navy tug Modoc.

British, German Ships Collide in Fog Bank

Philadelphia, June 3 (A.P.).—The Maritime Exchange reported that the British steamer Manchester Producer and the German steamer Chemnitz were in collision off the Delaware Capes today and both were slightly damaged.

The British ship, bound from Philadelphia for Liverpool via Baltimore, was anchored awaiting the lifting of fog. The Chemnitz, New Orleans for Philadelphia, continued her journey.

DuPonts Get Publicity Man To Give Out Nuptial Data

Mr. H. F. Utoff Retained to Supply Information on Approaching Wedding of Their Daughter to Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

A full-fledged publicity man to take care of all press releases and to answer all inquiries regarding a wedding is something new under the sun—but so is the marriage of a Democratic President's son to the daughter of an "economic royalist."

That's probably why nobody seems more than passably surprised that the services of H. F. Utoff, Philadelphia publicity man, have been retained by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene E. duPont until after the wedding of their daughter, Miss Ethel duPont, to Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.

Since the engagement was announced last fall, the duPont home on Owl's Nest road, Greenville, Del., has been barraged with telephone calls and written inquiries regarding details of the wedding. When the telephone rang once too often recently, the duPonts decided to do something about it. This week, Mr. Utoff set up offices in the huge building of E. I. duPont De Nemours Co., in Wilmington, and went into action.

From now until June 30, when the ceremony is performed in Christ Church, Christianna Hundred, he will act as contact man for all journalists, releasing news of the wedding as it is given to him by the family. His job also will consist of warding off photographers, merchants, florists and curious individuals who have harrassed the family for the past few months.

Functioning under the title of "Assistant to Mr. Eugene duPont," Mr. Utoff will relieve the family and the duPont servants of the burden that threatened to beset them right up to the wedding day.

Taylor, the slim, sleek English butler in the duPont home, is particularly thankful that Mr. Utoff has taken charge. Day in and day out for weeks on end his broad "a's" have sounded forth over the telephone, "Sorry, Madam, but Miss duPont cannot talk to you."

"Sorry, but may I take a message?"

"Sorry, but the family is talking to no one."

For 15 years Taylor has carried out duPont orders, and when he was instructed to keep all intruders from the family during the wedding preparations, he made up his mind to do it. But, according to reports from Greenville, it hasn't been easy. Indeed, dignified Taylor was overheard to remark recently, "I never saw anything like it in my life."

Mr. Utoff is the third Philadelphian whose services have been obtained by the duPonts for the wedding. Mrs. E. T. McMullin, of Philadelphia, is acting as social secretary, arranging plans for the ceremony proper and the receptions that will follow it. Dr. C. M. Courboin, Belgian-born naturalized American organist, formerly employed by Rodman Wanamaker, in Philadelphia, has been engaged to play the wedding music.

Spanish Ambassador Will Visit Home

The Spanish Ambassador, Senor Dr. Don Fernando de los Rios, will leave Wednesday, June 9, for Spain, where he will spend two or three weeks. Miss Hughes Married Here To Mr. Wheeler

Rev. Johnson Officiates; The Couple Leaves for Trip to New England.

Wedding bells rang yesterday afternoon for Miss Dora Lyndon Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Thomas Hughes, of Chevy Chase, and Mr. Richard Smith Wheeler, son of Mrs. Herbert M. Wheeler, of Jackson, Mich.

The ceremony took place at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, with the Rev. Gove Griffith Johnson officiating.

Mrs. Richard Lee Canary, the bride's sister, served as matron of honor, and little Mary Sue Powell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Edward Powell, of Cleveland, Ohio, and a cousin of the bride, was flower girl. Mr. Edmund Goodrich Wheeler, of Washington, was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Dr. Lester Miles Lucas, of West Falls Church, and Mr. Albert William Boehringer, of Washington.

The bride wore a white satin gown made on princess lines with a short train and a tulle veil which fell from a cap trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of roses, lilies of the valley and gardenias. The matron of honor wore a frock of turquoise lace made with puffed sleeves and a full skirt. She carried pink roses. The flower girl was attired in a dress of pink silk embroidered with rosebuds.

Out-of-town guests who attended the wedding and the reception that followed were Mrs. Richard Lee Canary, of Providence, R. I.; Miss Edith Powell, of Cleveland; Mrs. Herbert M. Wheeler and Mrs. A. H. Smith, of Jackson; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rea Kimbell, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Yeandell, and Mrs. W. Wellford Mason, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Roger Eastman, of Bronxville, N. Y.; President and Mrs. Henry Irvin Stahr, of Hood College, Frederick, Md.; Dr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Apple, Miss Miriam Apple, Miss Emily Apple, Miss Ruth V. Pope, Miss Ruth E. Perry, Miss Carolyn M. Loomis, Miss Dorothy M. Anderson, Miss Ruth Clayton, Miss Winnie T. Boteler, Mrs. Edgar H. McBride, Mrs. Eric Lundgren, Miss Ellen Jervey and Dr. and Mrs. David G. Everhart, jr., all of Frederick.

The bride attended Hood College, from which she was graduated in 1929. Later she returned as secretary to the president of the college, a position in which she served until a few weeks ago, Mr. Wheeler was graduated from the University of Michigan and is associated with the National Emergency Council in Washington. Following the wedding the couple left for a trip to New England, where they will spend some time in Scituate, Mass.

Mrs. Albert Stabler, jr., chairman of the junior auxiliary of the hospital, is organizing the members of the committee which will sell soft drinks and cigarets at the benefit.

After the matches many will remain at Brook John's Barn for dinner.

Marion Marks Becomes Bride

S. T. DeJ. Lancasters on Wedding Journey Through North.

All Souls Memorial Church was the scene of the wedding last evening at 7:30 o'clock of Miss Marion Marks, daughter of Mrs. Russell Almeron Marks and the late Mr. Marks, to Mr. Samuel Theron DeJarnette Lancaster, jr., son of Mrs. Samuel Theron DeJarnette Lancaster and the late Mr. Lancaster. The Rev. H. H. D. Sterrett officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Kilbourne Marks, of New York, wore a gown of embroidered organdy and a large white picture hat. She carried a shower bouquet of white gladioli, snapdragons and babies breath.

Miss Margery Marks served as her sister's maid of honor and only attendant, wearing a frock of pink mousseline de soie trimmed with blue. Her large pink picture hat was trimmed with this color and she carried blue snapdragons and pink peonies. Mr. William P. Lancaster, of Spartanburg, S. C., brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

After the ceremony a reception for the bridal party and immediate families was held at the home of Mrs. B. A. Powell in Chevy Chase, Md. Mr. and Mrs. Lancaster left later in the evening for a wedding trip to Northern cities, after which they will reside in Washington.

Nancy Archibald To Honor Author

John Holzworth Will Be Feted Before Lecture.

Miss Nancy Archibald will entertain at a small dinner tonight in the Colonial room of the Wardman Park Hotel in honor of Mr. John Holzworth, explorer, naturalist and author, who will deliver a lecture on "Alaska" later in the Wardman Theater.

Among Miss Archibald's guests will be Mr. Preston MacGoodwin, former United States envoy to Venezuela, and Mrs. MacGoodwin, Miss Maxine Davis, novelist, and Mr. Carl Lomen, of Alaska.

An unusual dish to be served at the dinner is called "grizzly bear scramble." It is made of goose eggs and minced Italian salami cooked in bear grease. Mr. Holzworth—so the story goes—invented this concoction when he was stranded with no other supplies in the sub-arctic regions of Alberta, Canada.

Goucher Head Will Entertain Chicago Dean

Robertsons Plan Luncheon on Sunday to Honor Dr. Shailer Mathews.

The President of Goucher College, Baltimore, Md., and Mrs. David Allan Robertson will give a luncheon Sunday, in honor of Dr. Shailer Mathews, dean emeritus of the divinity school of the University of Chicago. Dr. Mathews will deliver the baccalaureate sermon that morning in Catherine Hooper Hall.

The annual meeting of the auxiliary to the Goucher College Infirmary will be held on Monday afternoon at Mrs. Robertson's residence. Mrs. John Tucker, the president of the board, will preside. Reports will be made and tea will be served.

Dr. and Mrs. Robertson will give a reception in Goucher Hall on Monday evening, June 7, for the graduating class and their families. The trustees, faculty and alumnae of Goucher College are also included.

On Tuesday, June 8, Dr. and Mrs. Robertson will entertain the graduates at luncheon immediately following commencement. The commencement speaker, Sir Willmott Lewis, and the commencement chaplain, Dr. John Gardner, and Mrs. Gardner and the college trustees will be present at the luncheon.

Miss Gatewood Becomes Bride

Only members of the immediate families and close friends attended the wedding yesterday morning at St. Matthew's Church of Miss Louise Gatewood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bracken Gatewood, of Danville, Va., to Mr. John Joseph Lawless, of St. Paul, Minn. The Rev. Edward Roach performed the ceremony, which was followed by a breakfast at the Ambassador Hotel.

The bride wore a white tailored suit with blue accessories and a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Gurnie Fuqua, her sister, served as matron of honor, and wore a yellow tailored suit with talisman roses and lilies of the valley. Dr. Harold W. Wentworth, of Morgantown, W. Va., was best man.

After a wedding trip to New England and Canada, Dr. and Mrs. Lawless will spend the summer in Chicago. They will go to Morgantown to reside in the fall.

Mrs. Lawless is a graduate of Cobb Memorial School and the school of nurses, Emergency Hospital. She has been a member of the graduate staff since her graduation there.

Dr. Lawless is a graduate of the University of Minnesota. He has taught at Georgetown University, and is now on the faculty at the University of West Virginia.

To Go to Eastern Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., have returned to their apartment at the Mayflower after a brief stay at Sea Island, Ga. They will leave in about 10 days to visit Mrs. Robert's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walker, at their home, Webley, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

Mrs. George Barnett To Open Country Home in 10 Days

Mrs. George Barnett plans to go to her country home, Wakefield Manor, in Virginia, in about ten days, and will spend several weeks there. She has not yet made definite plans for the summer. Mrs. Barnett is a second cousin of the Duchess of Windsor.

She will spend this week-end at Wakefield Manor overseeing the opening of her home for the summer season, and next week plans to go by plane to New York for a few days.

Woman's Party Entertains For W. C. T. U. Delegates

Costumes of Many Lands Are Seen at Garden Fete at Alva Belmont House; Gay Color Lent to Scene; Music Given.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

COSTUMES OF MANY LANDS contributed gay color to the garden party given yesterday afternoon at Alva Belmont House by the National Woman's Party for officers and foreign delegates of the world W. C. T. U. convention. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, vice chairman of the National Council of the Woman's Party, headed the committee for the fete and had receiving with her Miss Alice Paul, also of the council, who leaves soon for Europe; Dr. Ella A. Boole, world president of the W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, of Chicago, vice president; Mrs. Evelyn Strang and Miss Agnes E. Slack, of London; Mrs. W. T. G. Brown, of Canada; Miss Margaret C. Munns and Lady Aurea Macleod, of London.

Guests in the receiving line, being of this country and Great Britain, wore flowered chiffons or other frocks to be expected at a garden party. Mrs. J. R. Chitambar, from India, however, was swathed in a gold sari, from head to foot. This is her first visit to Washington, but she has attended world conventions of the W. C. T. U. elsewhere and was a delegate to the National Council of Women in London, and the All-India Women's Social and Educational Conference.

Wear Native Dress.

Mrs. Mary B. Egbert, from Guatemala, wore the dress of the San Juan Sacatapequez Indian women—warm both in material and color—brilliant red, yellow and blue. Mrs. Edward Gauntlett, of Japan, wore her native kimono, and little Mrs. K. K. Lee, of Korea, also wore a dress characteristic of her country.

Mrs. Milda Kempel, of Latvia—a singer, by the way, who was on the program of the world convention when it was held in Stockholm—wore a bolero blouse of robin's egg blue with a full skirt of darker shade, striped in gold, and a band, embroidered in colored beads, around her fair hair. Mrs. Helmi Maelo, editor of "Eesti Naine" (The Estonian Woman) had on a striking peasant costume, a high, red hat, matching her heavy, gathered skirt, striped in black, and the red embroidery on her black blouse with starched white collar.

The Scotch delegates were identified by little plaid ribbons and bits of heather attached to their badges. Among them were Mrs. Ellen Barton, who has attended 14 world conventions; Mrs. Jean Russell and Mrs. Devina Wallace, world superintendent of temperance teaching in the Sunday school. The two delegates from Ireland were there, both with green shamrocks on their badges. They were Mrs. Moffat Clow and Mrs. Nina Gordon, of Belfast, world superintendent of the antigambling activities and founder of the Ulster Union.

Hawaiians Wear Leis.

Pink and white silk leis were worn by Mrs. Alice P. Broughton, territorial president from Hawaii, and Mrs. Lieut. Col. Lela Bell, of the Salvation Army, who is president of the Honolulu Union.

From Haiti was Miss Madeline Sylvain, a member of the Inter-American Commission of Women, of which Miss Doris Stevens, of this city, is chairman. Miss Sylvain has just completed graduate work at Bryn Mawr under an A. A. U. W. fellowship for Latin-American students. She is president of the Women's League for Social Action and one of the leading young feminists of her country. Mrs. W. J. Linton, of New Brunswick, was another guest.

Among those assisting at the party were Mrs. Louis Ludlow, Mrs. U. S. Guyer, Mrs. Lloyd Thurston, Mrs. Claude A. Fuller, Mrs. James A. Meeks and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, all from the Congressional group who served; Mrs. Karl W. Greene, hospitality chairman for the Woman's Party headquarters, Mrs. Martha Souder, Miss Anita Pollitzer, Dr. Izora Scott, Mrs. Laura Berrien and Miss Ethel H. Reed, who was in charge of the musical program. The music included songs by Flora McGill Keefer, contralto; Katherine Warren, soprano; violin selections by Grace Powell and piano numbers by Lyman McCrary.

"MADAME CHAIRMAN" . . .

By Suzanne.

YESTERDAY was a red-letter day for Phi Pi Epsilon, foreign service sorority of George Washington University—Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, its most distinguished member, was its guest of honor at a luncheon, at the University Women's Club.

Mrs. Rohde, former Minister to Denmark, was initiated into membership just before she left for Europe to assume her official duties as United States envoy. Yesterday she spoke after the luncheon, telling of some of her experiences. She remarked, incidentally—and much to the gratification of her young sorority sisters—that there was no phase of the work assigned to heads of missions which a woman was not competent to handle.

She deplored the lack of representative news of this country in the foreign press and the printing of stories of crime and foolish stunts such as frog racing and pole-sitting. She tried to acquaint the Danish people with things really going on in this country in cultural fields and organized a club of more than 80 American women in Copenhagen, who are continuing the work of presenting a balanced picture of American life.

The luncheon was arranged by Miss Frances Crawford, past president of the chapter; Miss Isabella Counselman, newly elected president; Miss Elizabeth Mickey, treasurer, and Mrs. John Donaldson, national vice president and faculty adviser.

MRS. ROBERTA CAMPBELL LAWSON, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is—nominally, at least—in Washington for the month of June. Actually, she will be in an out, for there are many demands on her time when she comes back to headquarters. Just now she is in New York, where she attended a banquet last night at the Hotel Pennsylvania, marking the close of an essay contest conducted by Advertising Age. She will hold conferences today and return to the Capital tomorrow morning.

Her schedule for the past few weeks has been a busy one. After the council meeting at her home city, Tulsa, Okla., she attended the Iowa State Federation convention in Souix City. From there she went to California to attend the State convention in San Diego. On her way she spent several days in Pasadena with Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, a past president of the General Federation, who now represents the clubs in the public relations department of the motion picture industry.

One of the parties arranged for here there was a luncheon at the Metro-Goldwin-Meyer studio, where she shared honors with the Minister of The Netherlands and Mme. van Haersma de With and their daughter, Mlle. Nora de With, who were on their way back from Europe. Miss Velle Winner, director of publicity for the federation and editor of the Club Woman, G. F. W. C., was another Washingtonian present, having gone to Pasadena to visit her mother, Mrs. Lorinda O. Winner, after the Tulsa meeting.

After the San Diego convention, Mrs. Lawson went to French Lick, Ind., for the meeting of the Indiana State Federation; to her home in Tulsa for a few days, and then came to Washington in time for the luncheon of the District federation, which she attended as a guests of honor Tuesday.

THERE'S TO BE a poetry broadcast tomorrow over WJSV at 9 o'clock. The League of American Pen Women have part of the Civic Forum program and Inez Sheldon Tyler will speak on "The City of Washington as an Inspiration for Poetry."

* * * *

MRS. BERNICE FLEMING HOLLAND'S garden out in Alexandria, will be open tomorrow for a garden party for the benefit of the Women's Auxiliary of Alexandria Hospital. Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis will be there in the role of fortune teller and a fashion show is to be staged from 4:30 to 5:30.

Goodwill Group To Hold Tea Today

Trustees Are to Honor Col. W. O. Tufts.

Mrs. Karl Fenning is chairman of the committee arranging for the tea being given by the board of trustees of the Goodwill Industries of Washington in honor of Col. William O. Tufts, president, in the Administration Building, 1218 New Hampshire avenue, this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. Following the tea and reception, guests will be taken on a tour of inspection of the newly completed plant by Mr. W. Harold Snape, director.

The party this afternoon is a two-fold celebration. Col. Tufts was recently re-elected president of the board of trustees for a third term, and members of the board planned the tea in his honor, also as a tribute to those who participated in the recent campaign of the industries to raise $65,000—a campaign which exceeded its quota by approximately $14,000.

Members of the board of trustees are Mrs. Fenning and Col. A. R. Brindley, vice presidents; James C. Dufin, jr., treasurer; Mrs. Elizabeth W. Murray, secretary; Mrs. Stanley C. Sears and Ernest H. Daniel.

Mrs. Pouch Honored.

Mrs. William H. Pouch, president of the National Society, Children of the American Revolution, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Thaddeus M. Jones, national treasurer of the society. Other guests were members of the national board of management.

Visiting Representative.

Mrs. Ella O'Gorman Stanton, sister of former Senator James O'Gorman, of New York, is visiting Representative and Mrs. Edward W. Curley, of that State, in their apartment at the Roosevelt.

Mr., Mrs. B. Fritz Smith Entertain at Shoreham

Mr. and Mrs. B. Fritz Smith entertained at dinner on the Shoreham Terrace Wednesday evening in honor of Mrs. Owen Morrell, of Indianapolis, Ind.

Guest were Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox, Lieut. and Mrs. Basil Toutorsky, Mr. and Mrs. Kingman Brewster, Capt. Fernando Chiaparelli, Mr. Bowie McCeney.

U. were entertained yesterday.

Weather Changes Plans to Hold Glee Club Concert Out of Doors

Elizabeth Somers Group Presents Program in Barker Hall of Y. W. C. A. When Rain Thwarts Recital in Residence Court.

THE weather changed the plans for an out-of-doors concert by the Elizabeth Somers Glee Club of the Y. W. C. A. last night. The program was presented in Barker Hall before a large audience, instead of in the court of Strong residence.

The club, a chorus of 36 voices, under the direction of Miss Mary Burnett and, with Miss Edith L. Dawson as accompanist, gave several groups of selections, including nature songs, love songs and airs from the operas. These were interspersed with two groups of numbers by the Bernheimer string trio, which assisted.

The guests were received at Strong residence by Miss Irene Dixon, director of the residence; Miss Gertrude Ennis, of the business staff of the Y. W. C. A.; Miss Gladys Drake, president of the glee club, and Miss Margaret Hesterberg, chairman of the concert committee. Refreshments were served there after the concert, with Miss Elsa Peterson, chairman of the Strong residence committee, and Miss Mabel Cook, Girl Reserve executive, presiding at the tea table.

Ushers for the evening were the Misses Nancy Bracher, Alice Alderman, Eleanor Ferguson and Gladyce Gordon.

The entertainment was to have inaugurated the use of the court at Strong residence which has not been the scene of any such fete since the building was opened last fall. The girls were in summer evening dresses and all arrangements had been made for a picturesque program in the garden setting, when rain interfered.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

She Married Man From "the Other Side of the Tracks" and Is Blissfully Happy, Correspondent Submits.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As I was looking through some old newspapers in search of hints for a spring and summer wardrobe I happened to glance at some columns of yours. There before my bewildered eyes I saw a statement that made my head reel. You had told someone that two persons of entirely different background would not be able to achieve a successful married life. In order to prove how mistaken that statement is I am now going to tell of one such marriage that worked. Also you said in one of your columns that there is no such thing as a story book love—one that really works. That statement, too, I wish to disprove.

* * * *

I have been married for four blissfully happy years to a man who comes, literally, from the other side of the tracks socially and environmentally. When we were married my parents objected strenuously, saying that I would never be able to live either with him as a person or on his salary. His mother objected nearly as much, because she feared my parents would make it impossible for us to get along. But my husband and I have continuously lived in complete harmony, and both his mother and my parents are admiring whatever it is that has made us so successful.

* * * *

I love him as something without which I could not live. He is as necessary to me as anything which makes life possible. I feel that he loves me the same for he has made many sacrifices to make me happy. He has often told me that this feeling of love and never-failing companionship is just as necessary to him as to me. In a few months we shall have a child and I believe the child who is born of this flaming fire of love can be nothing but happy. It can know nothing but peace and contentment under the protection and guidance of the man I love and trust more than life itself.

* * * *

In completing this story of my life from the time of our marriage I wish to say that life has not been always smooth in the financial realm, but through all of that we never once became weary of each other, nor did we make life miserable through useless quarrelling. If this isn't true bliss upon earth, I should like to know what is. With all due respect to you and your advice, I am,

MRS. BLISSFULLY HAPPY.

Encouraging Report.

DEAR MRS. B. H.: First, let me say that your letter comes as a veritable shaft of sunlight into a department customarily flooded with pen portraits of a gloomier side of life. It is wonderfully encouraging to be provided with positive proof that true bliss does exist on earth and that it is within the scope of human achievement.

* * * *

Next, let me say, without knowing from which articles you have extracted isolated statements to challenge, that I have never, so far as I can recall, gone on record as saying that any human goal whatever is absolutely impossible of achievement. I do believe, however, that as a general rule, marriages contracted by persons from similar backgrounds have the greatest chance of succeeding; and human experience bears out this belief. That there are startling exceptions to general rules, no one would deny. But I deny in entirety ever having said there is no such thing as story book love which really works.

* * * *

As a matter of fact, no longer ago than April 21, of this year, I wrote here: "When and if two self-respecting, intelligent, spiritually generous persons meet and discover the existence of a mutual affinity of being, it is natural and inevitable that they should enter almost at once into the seemingly miraculous experience of a shared love which grows . . . with continued association. This form of devotion exists here and there and it may be that you and your beloved are fortunate enough to have found it. If so, you can well afford to live above . . . petty rules . . ."

* * * *

Advice for 'Perplexed.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A few years ago I was in much the same situation as "Perplexed," whose letter of May 30 told of being faced with the alternatives of leaving home or giving up her beau. I should like to afford her the benefit of my experience. My mother forbade my fiance and me to see each other, on the ground that we were having illicit relations—a preposterous, unfounded accusation, although we were unable to persuade my mother so. After two months' separation, during which we neither saw nor heard from each other, we ended the deadlock by getting married—although my fiance was not in a position to support a wife.

* * * *

I have never regretted our marriage and am glad indeed that we have been together while improving our financial status, but it was hard work to make ends meet. Knowing this, I would advise "Perplexed" not to marry until her husband can support her. Yet I realize how intolerably galling her present situation is; how impossible to remain at home and be happy. Her mother and family are exercising a most despicable form of tyranny; a tyranny that in its very insidiousness is the harder to overthrow.

* * * *

Since she has a job, my advice to her is to establish herself in a room elsewhere. This would have more than one benefit. It would enable her to become emotionally independent of her family before marriage, lessening the strain of emotional readjustment afterward. Indeed, I have not yet completely thrown off my mother's domination, though I have succeeded to the extent that she no longer suspects her power. I have robbed her of the sadistic pleasure of knowing she can upset me.

* * * *

Her family undoubtedly will resent her attempts to throw off its hold and may, if she departs, be more antagonistic than before, at least for a time. And if she marries now, would, in all probability, never like her husband. By waiting until he is able to support a wife, and accustoming the family to her separate independence, she might be paving the way toward a better peace. But this is on the lap of the gods. But whatever she does, let her carefully consider the end results and abide by her mind's decision, not her emotions'. Once she has decided, she must not allow herself to be bullied into changing. Sincerely, ONCE PERPLEXED.

* * * *

DEAR O. P.: It is kind of you to afford "Perplexed" the benefit of your similar experience. I feel sure it will help her in making a sound decision. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

CLAIRE TILDEN.

BEHOLD—a new Claire Tilden treat!—Just the bright 'n' breezy frock you've been seeking to wear all spring and summer, and a frock that's equally at home on tennis courts or serving tea! It's a shirtwaister, of course, and one so easy to make that you'll have it finished before you know it! Pattern 316 boasts all those "classic" touches for which shirtwaist frocks are famous: action back, notched collar, buttoned front, and tailored pocket. But this version has an eye-catching trick all its own, as witness the way yoke, sleeves and bodice panel are cut in one. Detailed sewing guide accompanies this pattern.

Pattern 316 is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 36-inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (preferably coins) for this pattern. Write clearly size, name, address and style number.

Royalist Fashions Revived in France

Garlands of Flowers, Hoop Skirts in Vogue Again.

By the Associated Press.

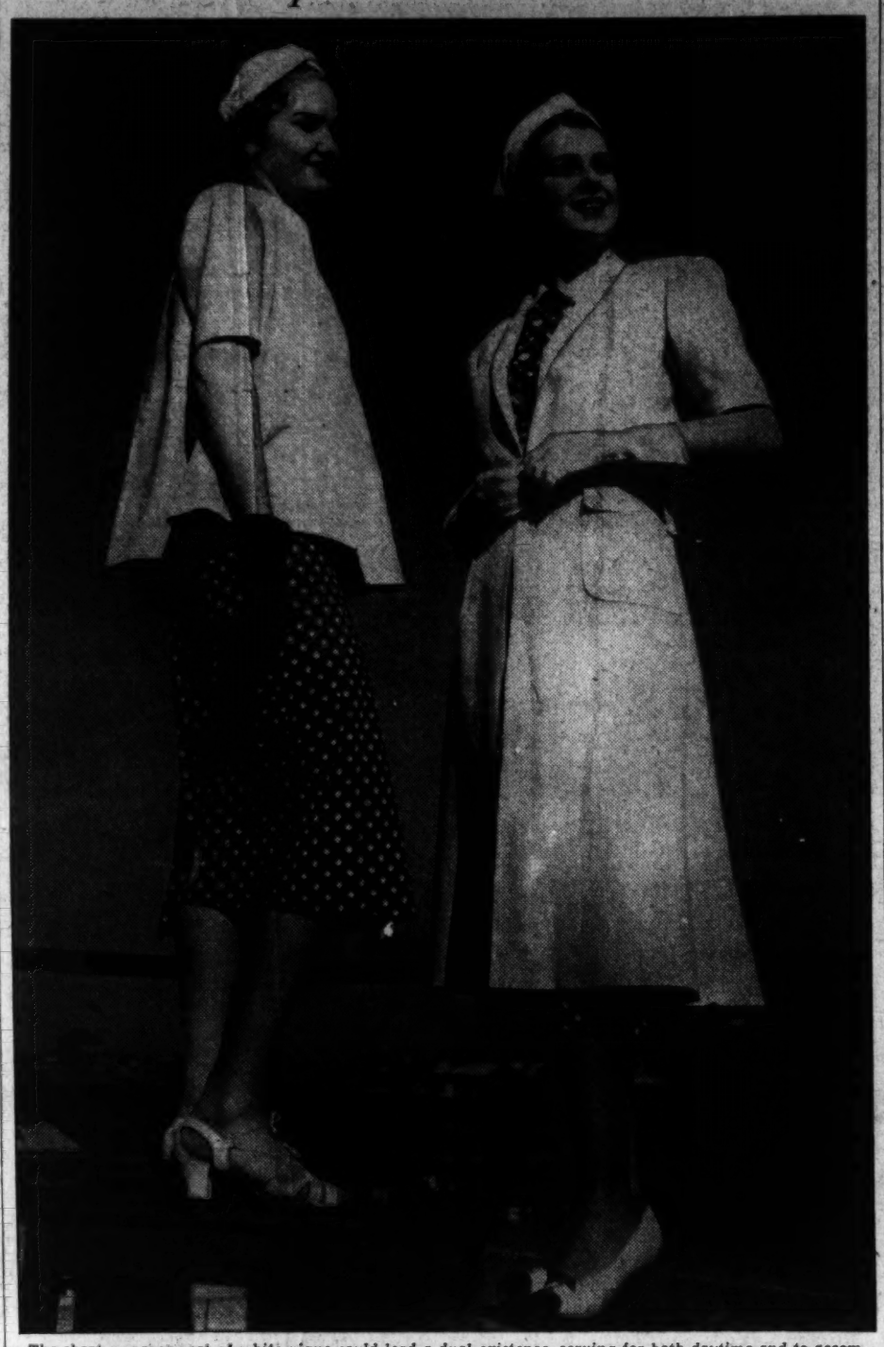
Paris. — Louis-Philippe and his epoch of a century ago—replete with lace wrist-ruffles, gold-headed canes and lavish embroideries—cast a spell over today's French fashions.

In a coronation year this romantic throw-back spurs Paris designers to new successes. Festoons of lace, garlands of flowers and ribbons in lovers' knots trim the full skirts of the sheerest of frocks—frocks of shirred tulle, crisp organdie, tiered lace and chiffon. And hoop skirts and crinolines support these splendors.

Hats, too, reflect the influence of that far-away era. Panama and bakou sailors are trimmed in tiny lace edgings and tulle flutings, velvet bands and flowers and fruits of all descriptions.

Stones the size of filberts and the colors of crown jewels stud the shoulders of cocktail jackets in white faille or black satin. They also border the short, flared skirts of cocktail dresses. And rhinestones polka-dot pastel-colored evening crepes.

White Pique Coats in New Versions



The short swagger coat of white pique could lead a dual existence, serving for both daytime and to accompany cotton evening gowns. The slim, fitted white pique coat with slightly flaring back would add chic to any cotton or silk daytime frock.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Deficient Diet.

"AN ANIMAL swallows its food; a man eats it, but only a man of intellect knows how to dine," said Brillat-Savarin, the famous epicure and author of "The Physiology of Taste."

As man has become more civilized, his food habits have changed and not always for the better. The original native foods of different people have often been suggested as causes of their national characteristics. "Experimental evidence," says Dr. Lewis R. Wolberg, "is abundant to show that a stock can definitely be improved by betterment of diet."

Such people as those who live in Lower Bengal and Madras live on a very deficient diet, mostly of rice and maize. The diet is poor in protein and deficient in minerals. All sorts of deficiency diseases, such as sore tongue, diarrhea, eye disease, paralysis, leprosy and dropsy are common.

The fighting races of India, such as the Pathans, Punjabis and Sikhs, are strong and well developed physically, brave and warlike. Their diets are well balanced and contain all the essential food substances. Meat, milk, dairy products, eggs, vegetables and fruit are eaten in well balanced proportions.

The best developed, most vigorous and long-lived of the Indian races are said to be the people of Hunza, who live on a very rational diet—fruit, especially apricots and mulberries, milk and vegetables. Meat is a luxury eaten only on special occasions.

In 22 years' residence among them, a certain doctor found that the following diseases are rare or unknown; appendicitis, ulcer of the stomach, acute gall-bladder disease, gall-stones, acute rheumatism, cancer and heart disease. Whether this is due to diet or not is a debatable question.

In a survey of a number of American school children, it was found that those who are in a deficient economic state are definitely more subject to malnutrition than the others. C. E. Palmer studied 5,000 families during the depression, and found that the average weights had fallen and that illness had increased tremendously in children of the depression poor.

Questions From Readers.

J. A.: "Will you please tell me what vegetables contain iodine?"

Answer: In communities where the soil is rich in iodine, nearly all vegetables contain iodine. Those food substances which are likely to contain the most iodine are seafoods—for instance, Alaska salmon contains 324 parts as compared to rye, which contains 3.5 parts. Goat's milk contains 400 parts. Oats and carrots are good sources of iodine.

Editor's Note: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of The Washington Post. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

White Cotton Coats Are Placed Among 'Musts' for the Season

Important Summer Accessory Can Be Worn at All Hours; New Treatment Increases Garment's Durability.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

WHITE COTTON coats are a "must" in every well-planned summer wardrobe. They add smartness to the casual cotton or silk frock and transform an office dress into something suitable for dinner either in town or in the country. This is also a season when almost every frock, regardless of its informality, has its accompanying coat or jacket. This accessory is necessary to promote swank for street wear.

For the dark frocks so popular this summer a white cotton topping gives the added summer air; the same applies to the print with dark background. The newest white cotton coats, however, are not just afterthoughts. They are well-designed and well-made, planned to be a perfect complement to the most pretentious summer dress.

Variety in Styling.

If you are ensemble-minded, undoubtedly you will want to own a "wardrobe" of white cotton coats in a variety of stylings and lengths, to wear with differently designed frocks. This summer offers a wonderful opportunity for an extensive coat array, as the variety in styles and fabrics is almost endless.

White pique, the conventional piques, the clokys and the waffle weaves are all on the fashion scene in numerous interpretations. Simple styles to top simple cotton frocks, and subtle stylings to accompany more formal costumes of silk crepes, satins and taffetas, appear in piques of varying texture and pattern. White linens and novelty weaves are also important as summer coat material. They, of course, are to wear with the spectator sports type of frock.

New Cottons, Washable.

All of this summer's white cotton coat materials are really washable and sanforized shrunk, so that they will be fresh and smart throughout the season. The majority are wrinkle resistant as well—a feature which adds much to their desirability. Chemical treatment gives the white cottons a new pristine whiteness. They are brilliantly white, not ivory or cream-colored.

Short white cotton coats are as appropriate for evening as for daytime. The same coat leads a dual life, topping the popular cotton evening gowns and those of silk crepe (not chiffons.)

And, as a final item in favor of this summer's white coats, we note that they are ageless, being worn by debutante daughter and matron with the same chic nonchalance.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IF YOUR IDEA of a screen is something to knock over, it's time we took you in hand and introduced you, not only to some of the very clever and decorative screens available, but to the screen as an asset in smooth living.

Spring refurnishings usually leave a residue of things that can't be cured so must be endured . . . corners that are necessary to the functionalism of the house, but not to its decoration. A screen solves all such problems with a single gesture—quite a swish gesture at that. Kitchen, nursery, powder room, study, sewing room or even clothes closet can lurk behind a screen in a room that looks as if it hadn't a care in the world.

Another reason for considering yourself as a potential screen user, whether or not you had thought of it before, is the fact that a screen will balance most any decorative difficulty you may be facing. If one side of the wall needs more height, more color, more pattern, more contrast, a screen will be a simple, successful answer. Even more space, or the effect of it, can be achieved with a mirror screen. Or an extra "wall" can be made with a screen set out in the floor with a little settee, a dressing table or a table before it.

Mirror screens are much more interesting than they used to be. Mirror panels are now often likely to be set in wide decorative frames. A perfectly lovely example of these seen recently shows the frames for the mirrored panels decoratively outlined with a classic key in gold on a light off-white ground. And fantastic motifs painted in tropical colors on mirrors give verve to many screens.

Beachwear in Black.

New York (AP).—A five-piece ensemble for summer beachwear is recommended for surf devotees. In the ensemble are a full-length fitted coat, a jacket, a halter, slacks and shorts. One New York store suggests black silk linen as the fabric, since it is especially effective on glaring sands.

Men's Duties As Members of Bridal Party

Best Man Has the Greatest Responsibility at Ceremony.

By Margaret Wallace.

THE DUTIES of the men members of a bridal party are often overlooked. However the bridegroom, father of the bride, best man and ushers all have many responsibilities to remember.

While the bride or her family makes all the arrangements for the wedding, the bridegroom has his share of things to look after, one of these being the wedding trip. Of course it is courteous for him to consult the bride on this subject and find out her wishes.

The bridegroom, too, must buy the wedding ring. There was a time when the bride never saw the magic golden circle until it was placed on her finger during the ceremony. In this era, however, many brides have decided ideas on wedding rings and there are such a wide variety of rings that the wise young man will take his fiancee with him to make this purchase or will have several varieties sent to her for her approval.

Fee for Cleric.

This is also true of the bridegroom's gift to the bride, especially if it is an article of jewelry. Unless he can be very sure of the bride's taste, the young man will try to discover which gift his bride would prefer.

Many bridegrooms are puzzled in regard to the clergyman's fee. It is the bridegroom's duty to pay it and may be from $10 up. The best man is designated to hand this to the minister carefully inclosed in an envelope.

The bride usually likes to select her own bridal bouquet and those of the bridesmaids but the groom is expected to pay for them. He is also expected to send flowers to his own mother and the mother of the bride and to order and pay for his own boutonniere and those of the best man and ushers. He should also provide gifts for the best man and ushers. It is not an invariable rule but a very frequent custom for the bridegroom to provide ties and gloves for the men in the wedding party. This is in the hope of obtaining uniformity but this object may also be attained by sending a detailed list to each man.

The bride's father also has his duties. These include meeting wedding expenses, with the exception of the fee to the clergyman. He should pay for the church decorations, transportation of the wedding party, the wedding breakfast and reception. Unless the bridegroom provides them, the father of the bride pays for the bridemaids' bouquets.

Father Is Escort.

He escorts his daughter down the aisle with her hand on his right arm. He remains standing with the wedding party until he has given his daughter in marriage. After that, he steps back to his place in the front pew reserved for the bride's family.

The best man must see that the bridegroom gets to the church on time. He takes charge of the wedding ring, placing it carefully in his waistcoat pocket until it is time for the groom to put it on the finger of the bride.

He should take charge of the luggage of the bride and groom. It is his duty to see that the bridegroom's traveling clothes are taken to the bride's house that he may change from morning clothes for the wedding journey.

Since the bridegroom wears a suitable hat, and gloves and carries a cane when he arrives at the church, it is the duty of the best man to take charge of them and to have them ready for the bridegroom when he leaves the church after the ceremony.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 3.

ONE of my favorite girls has come and been and gone. Anna May Wong shed her Oriental beauty on the town from the stage of our sole remaining vaudeville theater and then went back West to the movie marts.

ALICE HUGHES.

Anna's a fascinating creature, with the finest natural dignity and poise I've ever seen in a human being. When she's in New York she can often be found dining at Lum Fong's the finest Chinese eating place I know, on the northern fringe of our Chinatown.

She's still full of tales of her first visit to China, for Anna was born in Los Angeles, and studied her native language when she decided to make the trip to Shanghai for a look-see at the land of her fathers. Due to her long stay in London, where she is terrifically popular in the theater and in society, she normally speaks with a definite British tang.

But the most fun, at present, is looking at Anna May's collection of classic Chinese clothes. She brought back no less than 50 dresses, made of the loveliest brocades and heavy silks you can imagine—all made in the straight, classic Chinese style, which I consider one of the most beautiful garments in existence. She never wears anything else, and she is wise for the dress displays her slender figure to perfection. A grand little woman, this Anna May Wong—at home in all the capitals of the Old World. I wish you could meet her! And see those gorgeous clothes!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Our blonde Honey Johnson continues to be the leader among our younger glamor girls, all peaches and cream. There was a horrid rumor that we were to lose the child to a London banker, but that story now seems to be thoroughly scotched, and Honey will continue to upset the equilibrium of many a local blade . . . I hear that Vicki Baum, who clicked so resoundingly a few years ago with her "Grand Hotel," has worked up a new lecture to take on tour. The title of Vicki's new harangue is "Don't Be Afraid"—of what, I haven't been able to learn, so far.

* * * *

Several of us suffered slight fits of sun-stroke while beholding Mrs. Jack Warner, wife of the movie tycoon, lunching at the ritzy Colony. Mrs. W. was wearing what looked the world's champion diamond, positively the top blazer of the year. She looked very pretty in a navy-and-red checked suit, topped off with Schiaparelli's new blue velvet beret. . . .

Scrambled Eggs, Cooked Deftly, Appeal to Summer Appetites

Especially Good for Picnic Breakfasts and Midnight Suppers; Preparation of This American Dish Is Both an Art and a Science.

By Rebekah Blake.

CAN you scramble eggs the way they should be scrambled? A chain of eating places in the South is better known for its scrambled eggs than any other food item served. In fact, the chain has been accepted as "the home of those scrambled eggs." This organization has further specialized to the extent that it does not serve eggs in any other form.

According to the manager of this restaurant chain, early-morning appetites—between midnight and 3 o'clock in the morning—have remained true to scrambled eggs.

It seems there is nothing so satisfying to the American palate as an attractive service of freshly scrambled eggs. But back of all of this is meticulous care to assure a perfect product. Good ingredients measured accurately each time, satisfactory mixing, and extreme care in the cooking are necessary according to these managers for successful results. Instead of thinking that any cook can scramble eggs, these men operate on the theory that a yellow-gold mass—fluffy, tender, light and moist appearing, but certainly not dull, greasy, flattened and watery—will be assured if a definite recipe for this simple dish is carefully followed.

Homemakers will be interested in the recipe used by one of these eating places for one order: Break two eggs into a bowl; pour in an ounce of 20 per cent cream (this would be 2 tablespoons of good coffee cream) and one-eighth teaspoon salt. Combine with a few strokes, using a fork or a wire whip. Meanwhile place a scant ½-ounce of butter (scant tablespoon) into a bright, smooth skillet to melt. When it has melted to cover the bottom of the skillet, pour the eggs in. Keep the flame low so that the eggs cook slowly up through without scorching. Do not stir until the bottom is fairly well set. Then turn gently over with cooking spoon or spatula. At this point the air in the egg cells expand and the eggs will be light, delicate and fluffy. Remove the eggs to a warm service plate as soon as they do not flow.

Here are a few precautions to be followed in scrambling eggs:

Be sure to measure all ingredients, especially the butter—too much makes them heavy and greasy. Regulate the heat under the skillet before you start to cook the eggs. Do not beat the eggs or your will beat air into them and further stirring in the cooking will leave them flat by forcing the air out. The lighter the touch, the lighter your eggs will be.

If you are spry enough to get out in the park on Sunday morning for an outdoor breakfast, scrambled eggs will be your main dish for aside from the customary habit of eggs for breakfast, they are easier prepared when scrambled.

Since you are cooking your eggs in butter, you won't need sausage drippings so let each guest roast his own sausages over the fire as he would hot-dogs.

Don't count on toast for it won't brown right and stay hot under the circumstances. This is an appropriate and easy menu for a picnic breakfast.

MACARONI RAREBIT WITH SARDINES

Cook 1-3 package or 5 ounces macaroni in 2 quarts boiling water with 1 tablespoon salt. When tender drain, rinse and cut in ½-inch pieces. Melt 1 tablespoon butter, add 1 teaspoon cornstarch and ¾ cup top milk or thin cream. Stir until sauce boils and cook 2 minutes. Add ½ pound soft cheese forced through food chopper and stir until cheese melts. Place over hot water, add macaroni and 6 sardines free from skin and bone. Season with 1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce, ¼ teaspoon chives cut fine or a few drops onion juice, ½ teaspoon mustard and a few grains cayenne and serve as soon as the macaroni is hot.

Scalloped Tomatoes Easily Prepared

There are as many pet ways to make scalloped tomatoes as there are cooks to prepare them. Each method makes an excellent dish, because tomatoes lend themselves to most flavors and seem never to be discouraged by the strange and odd things done to them.

Usually the dish of scalloped tomotoes is part of the main course, but this time the recipe is prepared to be the main dish for luncheon or supper. It combines the food value and flavors of several different foods and is easy to prepare.

Scalloped Tomatoes.

1 No. 2½ can of tomatoes
1 small onion
6 strips bacon
6 hard cooked eggs
1½ cups cooked rice or bread crumbs
Salt and pepper

Cut the bacon into pieces and fry until crisp, remove the bacon and fry the onion, which has been chopped, until it is light yellow, but not brown. Add the tomatoes and bacon and season the mixture with salt and pepper. In a buttered cassarole arrange a layer of rice, sliced hard-cooked eggs and tomatoes, and repeat until all are used. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about half an hour, or long enough to heat the mixture thoroughly.

Many Filling in Tasty Salads.

A variety of "fillings" may be used in a substantial tomato salad. Cut firm, ripe tomatoes of moderate size into three crossway slices. Spread each slice with well-seasoned cream cheese, ham relish, olive and nut filling, sardine mixture or even well-seasoned potato salad. Replace the slices to make the tomato whole again. Top it with salad dressing.

If you have difficulty spreading hard butter on breakfast toast, place the butter in a small granite teapot and put near a hot burner. Then the butter will melt by the time your toast is ready.

Wilson Tender Made Ham—Boneless in Tins, Unmatched in Flavor, Tenderness, Convenience and Economy

● This is a new form of the original Wilson Bone-In Tender Made Ham, famous as "the ham you cut with a fork." It's the same ham with all rich natural juices retained by the amazing Wilson Secret Process. This ham trimmed—boned—and cooked to perfection in its own savory juices is now brought to you sealed in flavor-saving tins. Servable from end to end—boneless, this all American product cuts costly cooking shrinkage to the minimum. It's ideal for slicing—buffet suppers and appetizers. All ready to eat or to prepare according to your favorite recipes by simply heating.

When you buy Tender Made Ham and other Wilson products, you are not only buying finer food but you are definitely aiding the far-flung industries of America. Purchasing American Products aids more than just Railroads, Packers and Farmers, for directly or indirectly there is hardly an industry in the nation that will not be benefited thereby. You owe it to your own welfare as well as American Industry to support with your patronage only truly American Products.

Hayden Seeks Life for PWA In Relief Bill

Amendment Would Give 2-Year Extension, Cash Securities.

A place for PWA in the 1938 relief program, now largely limited to WPA projects, was demanded in the Senate yesterday, as Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins went before a Senate subcommittee in defense of his $1,500,000,000 bill.

The measure carires no provisions for Harold Ickes' PWA. Although pledges of limited public works operations were given by the President, a $300,000,000 PWA earmarking was defeated in the House.

Yesterday in the Senate, Senator Carl Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona, introduced an amendment to the relief bill to extend the life of PWA for two years.

The Hayden amendment would authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to cash PWA revolving-fund securities (estimated by Hayden at $290,000,000), but would provide no new PWA funds. It would abolish the provision that Federal grants equal 115 per cent of the amount spent for relief labor, and restore the old system of 45 per cent Federal grants. Ickes would have full control over PWA projects, and President Roosevelt would not be required to aprpove them.

School Work Backed.

eMantime, the Senate adopted a concurrent resolution by Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, calling on the President and Ickes to go forward with PWA grants designed to eliminate "hazardous" conditions in 1,178 schoolhouses.

Schwellenbach said PWA has sufficient funds to go ahead with the school projects on the old 45 per cent grant basis, if present "relief labor plus 15 per cent" grant provisions are removed.

The Washington Senator said only 35 of the 1,178 projects have been able to comply with present restrictions. A suggestion by Senator McAdoo (Democrat), of California, that hospital projects be included, was not accepted by Schwellenbach.

The President already has assured the House PWA bloc, through Majority Leader Rayburn, that so-called "hazardous" schoolhouses will be replaced on the 45 per cent basis, insofar as communities are unable to do the work. He also has promised to modify his executive order now tying up PWA funds for local bond election projects. A bill to extend PWA two years also is pending in the House.

Closely questioned by members of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee, Hopkins testified yesterday that only $1,312,000,000 of the proposed $1,500,000,000 relief fund would be available to WPA. He said Resettlement would get about $100,000,000; the National Youth Administration about $75,000,000, and minor allotments would go to other departments.

The Works Progress administrator said only if the full $1,500,000,000 is appropriated will he be able to employ an average of 1,640,000 relief workers in the next fiscal year. He will have to slash rolls from 2,200,000 to do this, he said.

Hopkins' Statement Assailed.

Hopkins said that "if conditions continue to improve" he would not need to come back to Congress for deficiency funds. Senator Steiwer (Republican), of Oregon, observed dryly that he seemed to "remember Hopkins made the same statement last year."

Hopkins will return to be questioned today on House amendments to the relief bill. Today's examination also may turn on the proposal of Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to cut $500,000,000 from the relief bill, and require States and subdivisions to put up 40 per cent of the cost of projects, where able to do so. A majority of the sub-committee is said to favor the Byrnes plan.

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, will lead a Senate attempt to break up the "lump sum" appropriation into specifically earmarked sums.

Club Honors F. J. Rice.

Fred J. Rice was presented with a past president's certificate at yesterday's meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club. The presentation was made by James E. Colliflower at the luncheon meeting at the Carlton. Colliflower also presided as "Dr. Quiz" in a contest for which A. Hamilton Wilson and Maurice Colbert won first and second prizes, respectively.

Its Moat Made Into Swimming Pool

Austere Henderson Castle, scene of ultra-exclusive parties by society's mightiest, now houses 16 paying guests (or members) and is the "Castle H Tennis and Swimming Club."

Fomer Stronghold of Society, Henderson Castle Now Is Club

Those Who Once Vainly Sought Entry to Exclusive Mansion Can Play Tennis or Swim or Even Live There.

Henderson Castle, once the citadel of blue blood, will soon resound to blue notes.

A former Texas salesman, assisted by a University of Alabama graduate of 1932, is converting the formidable stone mansion at Meridian Heights into the Castle H Tennis and Swimming Club, which is to be gay and youthful without being boisterous or unbecoming.

Bert L. Williams, the Texan who has rented the estate, and John H. Tasker, who is selling club memberships and performing other chores, were busy yesterday conditioning the historic buildings and grounds for their new uses.

For several weeks they have been overhauling the tennis court and sfimming poll, papering and painting the mansion's spacious interior, installing electrical fixtures and doing the thousand and one other things necessary to transfuse life and warmth into the palace of the late Mary Foote Henderson.

Already the transformed castle has 16 tenants, whose room rent entitles them to sights—the gold room, grand ballroom, state dining room, etc.—once reserved for the elite.

The outdoor pool has been painted and is in use daily. And the tennis court has been rejuvenated to such a degree that, in the words of George E. Edelin, executor of the Henderson estate and who rented the property to Williams:

"It's good enough for Vines or Tilden."

When winter comes, dances and banquets are planned for the ballroom. All facilities will be made available to approved groups for rental purposes, Tasker said.

Persons who chewed their nails in dismay when they failed to receive a Henderson, invitation to an ultra-exclusive reception or garden party, now may fill up on the sights they missed. For hammering, painting and papering have not materially altered the general appearance of Washington's second most famous residence.

It's still Henderson Castle—but with a hey nonny nonny.

Adm. Jehu Chase's Rites at Arlington

Funeral services for Admiral Jehu V. Chase, U. S. N., retired, former commander in chief of the United States fleet, will be held this morning at 10 o'clock in Arlington National Cemetery. Admiral Chase, who retired from the Navy in 1933 after 47 years of service, died on May 24 at Coronado, Calif. He had served in the Navy's highest position afloat, and had been chairman of the Navy General Board.

Lieut. Comdr. Joseph H. Brooks, Chaplain Corps, U. S. N., will officiate at the services. Honorary pallbearers will be Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations; Rear Admiral Charles B. McVay, retired; Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, Rear Admiral Alfred W. Johnson, Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews and Capt. John R. Edie, retired.

A military escort, composed of the Navy Band, one company of bluejackets and two companies of Marines, will take part in the ceremonies. Rear Admiral Ralston S. Holmes, director of Naval Intelligence, will be in command of the escort.

Michigan House Passes State Labor Board Bill

Lansing, Mich., June 3 (AP).—The House of the Michigan Legislature passed, 63 to 31, and sent to the Senate a bill, approved by Gov. Frank Murphy, to establish a State labor relations board and give the Governor power to seize and operate strike-threatened plants.

House members attached an amendment to prohibit State or municipal government employes and persons whose work involves public safety from striking.

319 Graduates Get Diplomas At Annapolis

White House Note Marks Colorful Exercises at Naval Academy.

Annapolis, Md., June 3 (AP).—Cheered by the congratulations of President Roosevelt, 319 graduates of the Naval Academy headed for their homes today shortly after they had received their diplomas from Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

Two hundred and sixty-three of the graduates, commissioned ensigns in the line of the Navy, and 26 who donned the uniform of second lieutenants in the Marine Corps, will report for duty with their ships or regiments after a month's leave. Twenty-nine reverted to civil life, while the commissioning of another in the Navy is dependent upon another physical examination.

Admiral Andrews, who delivered the graduation address, read a letter in which the President saluted "the future leaders of the United States Navy."

President's Note.

"On this graduation day the Naval Academy places on the graduates its final seal of approval in token of their fitness to bear a responsible part in their country's service," the President wrote. "In peace or in war, in civil life or in the naval service, I hope every graduate of the class of 1937 will uphold in his life and his work the highest ideals and the loftiest traditions of the Navy."

The short and impressive graduation exercises in the huge blue and gold decorated academy armory were attended by 6,700 undergraduates, parents, friends and sweethearts of the new officers. Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce; Gov. Harry W. Nice, and Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, were among the high ranking naval officers grouped on the rostrum.

Colorful Gathering.

The graduates in white uniforms, faced the rostrum, surrounded by the gay throngs of friends, the women in bright summer attire. The blue-uniformed undergraduates flanked the assemblage.

A roar of applause, interspersed with bursts of cheering began when Midshipman Jack Arthur Obermeyer, New York City, honor man, received his diploma, and continued until all had been distributed.

A scramble in which girls, boys and some adults participated occurred when the graduates, after cheering for "those we leave behind us" tossed their white midshipmen caps and hastened from the armory. Soon mothers and sweethearts were attaching the black shoulder markers, with the single gold stripe of an ensign on white-clad shoulders.

Funeral Is Today For John J. Ward

Last rites for John J. Ward, 78, president of the Embassy Dairy, who died Wednesday in Georgetown Hospital, will be held this morning at 9 o'clock in Sacred Heart Church, after brief services at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. L. Koepnick, 1618 Webster street. Burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery will follow.

For many years Ward was in the dairy business in Chicago.

Five years ago he came here to purchase the Embassy Dairy. He was a native of Schenectady, N. Y. He was active in several Catholic organizations in Chicago.

Besides his daughter, Ward, who lived at 1629 Columbia road, is survived by his widow, Mrs. Nona Ward; a son, James J. Ward, secretary of the Embassy Dairy, and a brother, James Ward, of Chicago. He also leaves nine grandchildren.

Mystery Story Starts Sunday

A man haunted by the memory of a crooked business deal and the fear that his victim would get revenge tells his thrilling story in "The Farewell Murder," starting serially Sunday in The Post.

In addition The Sunday Post brings you the final chapter of "Girl Hunt."

Both were written by the popular Dashiell Hammett, author of "The Thin Man" and many other hit stories.

Dr. Townsend, Tariff Expert, Dies in N. Y.

Rites Today in Woodside for Veteran U. S. Scientist.

Dr. Charles O. Townsend, retired Federal Tariff Commission expert and one of the outstanding plant pathologists in the country, died of pneumonia Wednesday at his home in Woodside, N. Y., it was learned here yesterday. He was 74 years old.

Dr. Townsend retired in 1934 after a career that had embraced 30 years of Government service and an 11-year period as college professor. During the nine years before his retirement he was chief of the Tariff Commission's sugar division.

Born in Washtenaw County, Mich., Dr. Townsend was educated at the Michigan State Normal School, the University of Michigan, and the University of Leipsig, Germany.

Teaching Career.

He received his Ph. D. degree from the last institution in 1897, after having specialized in botany and plant physiology.

He was professor of natural science at Annapolis from 1888 to 1891 and taught the same subject at Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., from 1891 to 1895. He later taught at Barnard College in New York City and then became professor of botany at the University of Maryland. At the same time he served as Maryland State plant pathologist.

From 1901 to 1933 Dr. Townsend conducted sugar beet research for the Department of Agriculture. He also worked for a time as consulting agriculturist with the United States Sugar & Land Co. at Garden City, Kan.

Sugar Beet Study.

Dr. Townsend was the author of several bulletins on the diseases and production of sugar beets and other plants.

Surviving Dr. Townsend are his wife, the former Mary Louise Taylor, of Ann Arbor, Mich.; a daughter, Mrs. George Monroe White, of Woodside, N. Y.; and a brother, Gilmer Townsend, of Saline, Mich.

He was a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and a member of the Botanical Society of Washington, the Cosmos Club and the American Society of Agronomy.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon in Woodside.

Railroad Heads Confer With Unions Over Pay

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—Representatives of the Nation's railroads and 14 "nonoperating" brotherhoods conferred today on the union workers' demand for a 20 per cent increase in pay.

The negotiations, affecting 766,000 employes, were conducted behind closed doors at the Union Station. Spokesmen indicated the sessions would continue until the participants reached a decision.

Mrs. Baukhage Is Dead at 75 In Washington

Wife of Department of Agriculture Scientist to Be Buried Tomorrow.

Mrs. F. R. Baukhage, 75, wife of F. R. Baukhage, a scientist on the staff of the Department of Agriculture, died at her home, 1725 Seventeenth street northwest, yesterday.

Her ancestors were among the first settlers of Dunstable County, Conn., and she was born in New York during the Civil War. Her father, Maj. Oscar Fitz-Allen Blood, lost his life with the Federal forces at Folly Island, S. C.

Widely known as an author, Mrs. Baukhage wrote short stories for many children's and religious magazines under the name of Alice Dakin. Some years ago her column, "The Good Old Days," was a feature of The Washington Post.

Mrs. Baukhage was a graduate of one of America's oldest women's colleges, Ingham University, at Le Roy, N. Y. As a bride she went with her husband into the Northwest in the '90's.

At the turn of the century she was active in club and literary work in Buffalo, N. Y., and later she continued this work in Danville, Ill., where her husband was comptroller of the Hegler Zinc Co.

In 1925 she came to Washington. She was a member of the Elizabeth Jackson Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution here.

Surviving are her husband and a son, Hilmar Baukhage, of the United States News and commentator on the National Farm and Home Hour.

Public Enthusiastic Over Flavor of Unique Virgin Islands' Rum

Lee Francis, broker, New York: "I think this new rum's got something. It's smooth enough to take straight although I like it in a Daiquiri. It's good stuff."

M. H. Moore, Credit Manager, Washington: "I've never been much of a hand for rum but I must say this makes a swell drink. Maybe I'll drink it instead of whiskey, I don't know."

THE STORY BEHIND THE RUM
Soon after the U. S. bought the Virgin Islands in 1917, prohibition cut off the Islands' income from their 200-year-old art of making fine rum. Low point was 1930. Destitution was widespread. Something had to be done. It was. The Federal emergency relief organization stepped in to put the Islands on a self-supporting basis, formed the Virgin Islands Company. Idea was to stop the need for growing Federal subsidies and give work instead of charity. Private capital was invited to set up a large scale distillery—was invited for 3 years—wasn't interested. Out of necessity, a distillery was bought, started operations in 1934. The idle of the Islands were called off relief rolls onto payrolls at honest work. The rum they've been making is called Government House, as fine a rum as distilling science can produce.

N. Y. Commission Suspends Jim Braddock for Failure to Meet Max Schmeling

DEAN CASE DEADLOCKED, HURLER REFUSES TO SIGN PLEDGE

$1,000 Fine Also Slapped On Champ

Suspension of Fighter He Meets Threatened by New York Group.

Shirley Povich's column on page 23 covers last night's Schmeling-Braddock "phantom fight."

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock was fined $1,000 and suspended indefinitely by the New York State Athletic Commission today for failing to keep his heavyweight championship engagement with Max Schmeling here tonight.

Braddock's manager, Joe Gould, drew a similar suspension and fine.

About all the disappointed Schmeling got for his five trips across the ocean, a wasted training grind and an expenditure of something like $25,000, was a nice, large eight ball.

In announcing the decision in the famous "phantom fight case," Chairman John J. Phelan said he also was advising boxing commissions in States with which New York is affiliated, that any boxer who meets Braddock before the champ defends his title against Schmeling will be suspended.

This was a direct shot at the scheduled June 22 Chicago battle between Braddock and the brown bombing Joe Louis, of Detroit, for which both men are now in training.

Schmeling Dissatisfied.

In Chicago, however, Joe Triner, chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, said that the suspension of Braddock would not be recognized and that it would not interfere with the bout in Comiskey Park.

A burned-up Schmeling, flanked by an equally burned-up trainer and manager, dashed from the commission offices, looking for the nearest court.

Although they first refused to make a statement until "we have seen our attorneys," Schmeling and Manager Joe Jacobs later shot off plenty of steam in their hotel.

"It was a rotten decision," Schmeling said. "They have made a joke of the heavyweight title. A suspension means nothing. Bah! Now they will advertise the Chicago fight as a championship show."

Schmeling, who says he was personally assured by Chairman Phelan that the commission would "protect" him, thinks Braddock's title should have been vacated.

"I would not claim it," he said. "But they should name me the leading contender and then run a tournament to decide who will fight me."

"Don't worry, Max," counseled Trainer Max Machon. "After Joe Louis smacks Braddock on the jaw and becomes champion they'll be sending for you."

Schmeling was so upset he seized a newspaper picture of a somewhat chubby champion enjoying a shower bath and hurled it to the floor exclaiming:

"That's how your champion looks. I've spent almost $30,000 hunting him and look what I get."

Except to say that the decision automatically cancels tonight's scheduled bout, Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden, would not comment.

"I'm awaiting the decision of the Federal courts in Philadelphia on our application for an order restraining Braddock from fighting Louis," he said. "When that is handed down I will have plenty to say, win or lose."

The commission ordered the $5,000 check posted by Braddock as a forfeit be divided between Schmeling and the Garden.

Schmeling, who plans to remain here indefinitely, went on the air tonight to tell his side of the story over a Nation-wide hook-up. Persons close to the "Schlager" said the script was full of blasts at the New York Commission and boxing in this country in general.

Prior to the actual reading of the decision, everything went off as per schedule. Schmeling was officially weighed in at 196, 3 pounds more than he scaled when he knocked out Louis last summer.

While Max posed for the photographers and news reel men, the eight boxers scheduled to fight in tonight's preliminaries were duly weighed.

Schmeling was examined by two physicians and found physically fit.

The weather man finally got into the picture when it began raining at 12:57 p. m.

"We probably would have postponed the show because of the weather even if Braddock had appeared," announced Kilpatrick.

Over at Madison Square Garden, Matchmaker James J. Johnston was photographed behind a desk loaded with unsold phantom bout tickets.

"Here we are," he said. "All dressed up and no place to go."

The Garden's big bowl on Long Island City, "dark" to fights for two years, continued so tonight.

DESHONG TAMES TIGER HITTERS AS NATS WIN, 5-4

Hogan's Single Scores Al Simmons; Wild Wade Forces a Run.

By Shirley Povich.

Detroit, June 3.—James Brooklyn DeShong, a red-thatched gamester of the pitching mound, today called upon the stout ticker that beats beneath the letters of his Washington uniform and with a series of pitching heroics, delivered the Nats from defeat.

He also delivered unto them a pulse-throbbing 5-to-4 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

He did it with a display of raw courage and a fierce will to win out there on the mound. But there is also evidence that he had something on the ball.

But before it is related how the Nats won the game with an eighth-inning surge that wiped out the Tigers' 4-to-3 lead, it must be told how DeShong saved the game for 'em—in that eighth, and again in the ninth.

He was pitching not only with his back to the wall in the eighth, but he was pitching with his back to baselines full of Tigers. For the Tigers had three men on and none out when DeShong bent himself to the task of protecting that slender, one-run lead.

It wasn't his fault that Gerald Walker, the first Tiger to face him in that eighth, got on base. Walker's was a cheap hit—a half-topped roller toward third base that none could field. But with Greenberg at bat, DeShong's luck turned. A hit that will probably go down as the longest single on record traveled off Greensberg's bat to the centerfield fence 409 feet away, but the unpredictable Walker, thinking Ben Chapman would make the catch, failed to leave first base until Greenberg practically ran up his back. Then Walker made second on a hit which should have put him across the plate.

Filled Bases by Walk.

But DeShong had little to enthuse about, nevertheless, with none as yet out, and his situation was blacker when he walked Leon Goslin to fill the bases and put the tying run on third, the potential winning run on second.

Then the fidgety DeShong—fidgety in his eagerness to resume the battle, not in nervousness—began truly to perform. With great care he pitched to Marvin Owen until he forced that fellow to lift a short fly to Ben Chapman—so short that all runners were forced to hold their bases.

Next, DeShong gave his attention to young George Tebbetts, the rookie whose home run had beaten the Nats the day before. With Tebbetts he didn't dally. He struck Tebbetts out.

Ninth—and More Trouble.

But out there facing him now was Charley Gehringer, summoned off the bench to take the role of a pinch hitter. The dangerous Gehringer loomed even more dangerous when he worked the count to three balls and one strike. One more errant pitch, and DeShong would force the tying run across. But the red-head was right down the middle with his next offering for strike two. And then—well, Gehringer lifted a meek pop to Cecil Travis for the third out and DeShong and the Nats were out of the woods.

But came the ninth and more trouble. Because Babe Herman,

Inverness Best Ball Play Paced by 63's

Shute-Little, Hines-Mangrum Pace Four-Day Tourney, Jimmy Hines and Sam Snead Each Scores Six Birdies.

By the Associated Press.

Toledo, Ohio, June 3.—Old man par—he's 71—took a terrific beating today as 16 of the country's outstanding professionals crashed through with 45 birdies in the opening 18-hole matches of the third annual Inverness round robin best ball tourney.

Jimmy Hines, the Metropolitan champion, and Sam Snead, the West Virginian who never took a lesson, led the onslaught, each turning in a half-dozen of the sub-par holes. Denny Shute, P. G. A. champion, although hampered by a lame back, counted five, as did Henry Picard, the elongated lad from Hershey, Pa.

Gene Sarazen, the cow-fancier former open champion, was the lone entrant in the star-studded field who failed to get under even figures on any hole, but his partner, Olin Dutra, 1934 open champ, crashed through with four.

Dutra and Sarazen topped the standing in the race for the $1,000 first prize of the $4,600 pot of gold, defeating Tommy Armour, the former open champion, and long-driving Jimmy Thomson, by a three-hole margin.

Under the Inverness system of scoring, the team which is "up" at the end of 18 holes gets a plus rating of the number of holes it is ahead, while the losers get a minus rating of the same figure. Each of the pairs meets each other twosome, the tourney closing Sunday and the money is split according to the total standing. The last-placers get $200, and the others graduate up to the $1,000 first prize.

Results of today's first-round matches, with the best ball scores:

Dutra-Sarazen (67) defeated Armour-Thomson (70), 3 up. Ray Mangrum-Jimmy Hines (63) defeated Horton Smith-Harry Cooper (65), 2 up. Henry Picard-Johnny Revolta (65) defeated Paul Runyan-Ky Laffoon (66), 1 up. Denny Shute-Lawson Little (63) defeated Ralph Guldhal-Sam Snead (64), 1 up.

That made the standing: Dutra-Sarazen, plus 3; Mangrum-Hines, plus 2; Picard-Revolta, plus 1; Shute-Little, plus 1; Runyan-Laffoon, minus 1; Guldhal-Snead, minus 1; Smith-Cooper, minus 2; Armour-Thomson, minus 3.

The 63's turned in by Mangrum-Hines and Shute-Little were within a stroke of the 62 with which Shute and Vic Ghezzi won the $100 prize for the best-ball count a year ago.

Friday morning's schedule is:

Shute-Little vs. Smith-Cooper, Runyan-Laffoon vs. Armour-Thomson; Picard-Revolta vs. Dutra-Sarazen, and Guldhal-Snead vs. Mangrum-mines. The afternoon slate: Smith-Cooper vs. Guldhal-Snead, Dutra-Sarazen vs. Runyan-Laffoon, Shute-Little vs. Mangrum-Hines, Picard-Revolta vs. Armour-Thomson.

Armour and Thomson were the lone pair to skid over par on a hole, each needing five strokes to negotiate the 380-yard eleventh. Guldhal and Snead, the winter circuit sensations, turned in the second best round of the day, but finished 1 down to the red-hot Shute and Little. Had Guldhal and Snead met Armour and Thomson instead, they would have finished the day 6 up, instead of 1 down.

Talk Too 'Torrid' Max Off Radio

By the United Press.

New York, June 3. — Max Schmeling's scheduled broadcast over the National Broadcasting Co., blue network at 8 o'clock tonight was canceled when studio officials deemed his remarks about the boxing commission too torrid. The studio wrote a substitute script, but Schmeling refused to broadcast it, claiming it did not give the proper picture.

Schmeling was incensed because the commission had merely suspended and fined Champion James J. Braddock instead of vacating his title. Maxie figured that if the title were vacated he would have been given the chance to fight another challenger or tournament winner for the crown.

F. C. A. Victor.

The Farm Credit Administration tennis team defeated the Procurement, 5 to 0, yesterday on the Monument courts. Lewis and Sweeney and Allen and Foster paced the winners in doubles.

High Awards To Guckeyson And Gormley

Johnny Wins Watch; Bill a Ring as Leading Terp Athletes.

College Park, Md., June 3.—John Gormley, of Chevy Chase and Bill Guckeyson, of Bethesda, Md., received the highest athletic honors at the University of Maryland when letters and other awards were presented at assembly on the campus lawn this afternoon.

Gormley, football and boxing star, received the Silvester award, a gold watch given by the class of 1908, for the man who typifies the best college athletics, while Guckeyson, grid celebrity and four-letter athlete, received the Linhardt ring, for the Maryland man outstanding for the year in athletics.

Guckeyson, at the senior class banquet Tuesday night, had received the H. C. Byrd citizenship award, also a gold watch, for the man student who had made the greatest contribution to the university during his college career.

An impressive feature of the ceremony today was the giving of a letter to his son, Eddie, by Walter Johnson, who presented the baseball awards.

Lewis Kayoes Olin, Keeps Title

St. Louis, June 3 (AP).—John Henry Lewis, Phoenix Negro, successfully defended his light-heavyweight crown here tonight by gaining a technical knockout over Bob Olin, of New York, midway in the eighth round of their scheduled 15-round fight.

The knockout followed a series of a half-dozen hard rights to Olin's jaw. Olin went down for the count of seven, struggled to his feet, dazed by the bombardment of leather to his head. Lewis rushed in for the kill and crashed another hard right to Olin's jaw and Referee Walter Heisner stopped the fight.

Lewis weighed 174; Olin, 174¾.

Schmeling Has Big 'Wait' Advantage

Dizzy Off Pay Roll During Suspension

Eccentric Pitcher Will Appeal Case to Landis and Sue Frick and League for $250,000; Makes Blanket Denial of Statements.

A Wirephoto of Dizzy Dean entering President Frick's office for the conference yesterday appears on Page 24.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, June 3.—For point-blank refusal to sign a modified "explanation" and "loyalty" pledge, much less an apology for alleged statements derogatory to the National League's chief executive and umpires, Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean remained tonight under indefinite suspension, without pay.

The deadlock between the star right-handed pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals and Ford Christopher Frick, president of the National League, who banished Dean yesterday "for conduct detrimental to the best interests of baseball," remained unbroken after a heated two-hour conference, attended also by Frank Frisch, manager, and Clarence Lloyd, secretary, of the St. Louis club.

Automatically off the Cardinal pay roll, for the duration of his banishment, Dean now faces the alternatives of:

(1) Changing his mind and signing a formal disavowal of his alleged "popoffs" or

(2) Appealing to Commissioner Landis for a hearing, after a ten-day interval. Frick made it clear that the next move was up to Dizzy.

Thrusting aside the peace-making overtures of friends, Dean climaxed the day's developments by declaring he would appeal his case to Landis and added: "If that doesn't get me anywhere, I'll sue Frick and the National League for plenty—at least $250,000—for depriving me of my job."

Although Dean made a blanket denial, verbally, that he delivered any statements reflecting upon the honesty or integrity of league officials, for publication or otherwise, he steadfastly refused to affix his signature to any form of refutation.

Not even when urged to do so by Secretary Lloyd, on behalf of President Sam Breadon, of the St. Louis club, would Dean consent to sign a fourth and final compromise statement from which the word "apology" was eliminated, in a last-minute conciliatory move by Frick.

Threatens to Jump.

Glancing out from Frick's office, on the nineteenth floor of the R. C. A. Building in Rockefeller Center, Dean said:

"I'll jump out this window before I sign anything. I've got nothing to apologize for. My conscience is clear."

Shorn of references to many of the statements Dean is accused of making, on or off the ball field, the final draft submitted by Frick for Dizzy's signature dealt with two items. One concerned incidents connected with the calling of a balk on Dean, by Umpire George Barr, in the game that Dizzy lost to the Giants May 18, at St. Louis. The other covered the publication by the Belleville (Ill.) Daily Advocate of a story quoting Dean as saying Frick and Barr were the "two biggest crooks" in baseball.

The foundation thus was firmly laid for an endurance contest, the outcome of which had baseball men speculating tonight over a wide range. Most observers doubted Dean would appeal to Landis, who was informed of the situation by Frick, but there was no telling to what lengths the voluble and stubborn right-hander would carry his one-man "sit down" strike.

The attitude of the Cardinals, in supporting Frick, appeared to preclude any occasion for a league meeting to debate the issues involved. Breadon, the St. Louis president, is a league director.

Dean, although he figures to lose approximately $160 per day in salary for each day he is under suspension, based upon his estimated $25,000 stipend for a 154-game season, seemed the least perturbed of any concerned.

No small angle to the situation was the handicap facing the Cardinals, now on an Eastern trip and having troubles aplenty, apart from the indefinite loss of their pitching ace.

There is no secret that most of those associated with the St. Louis club, ever since Dean's holdout "popping off" last winter, have felt the famous pitcher was riding for a fall. He has had run-ins with his teammates, as well as the club officials and newspapermen. Now, from Frick's viewpoint, the question of league authority or prestige is at stake, apart from the issue of what Dizzy did or did not say to the fathers' and sons' dinner of the Presbyterian Church in Belleville, Ill.

Ingram Elected Navy Nine Head

Annapolis, Md., June 3 (AP).—William Thomas Ingram 2d, Culyer, Ind., winner of the Navy Athletic Association sword for personal excellence in athletics, today was elected captain of the Naval Academy baseball team in 1938.

Ingram, third of his family to win the sword, plays at right field. He was awarded the sword at a regimental dress parade yesterday.

J. A. Boyd, Gainesville, Ga., was elected manager of the baseball team. J. S. Dalton, Overbrook, Pa., was elected captain of the track team, with R. B. Nelson, Minden, La., manager. Frank D. Case, jr., Evanston, Ill., will captain the Navy lacrosse team. H. I. Mandel, Brooklyn, N. Y., was elected manager.

Lady Buck Wins Third For Double

Alahad Trails in Feature, Betty B Is Its Third, Lady Dunlin Wins.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 3.—Teddies Squaw, a little filly with four flying hoofs, hugged the rail at this track today to win the Berkeley Purse, a test of five furlongs that served feature purposes. The daughter of Teddy, capably ridden by Jockey L. Machado, held some sort of advantage throughout the running and finished a length ahead of Alahad, the favorite in charge of Sammy Palumbo. Beauty B. never close enough to be a serious factor, completed the money bracket.

The winning filly, owned by Mrs. K. N. Gilpin, of Boyce, Va., and trained by C. M. Feltner, of Berryville, Va., had a scattered backing and paid a $10 mutuel while running the route in 1:01 2-5, rather ordinary time.

In contrast to the previous days of the meeting, a cool breeze came over the mountain and was enjoyed by the crowd of 4,000 witnessing the sport. Those in the gathering who played numbers three and three in the daily double collected at the rate of $22 for each $2 investment. The winning combination of Truthfully and Lady Buck was the favorite on the "possible pay-off" board.

Lady Dunlin, with Jockey L. Machado riding for the first time, made no mistakes in the day's opener, sprinting into a good lead at the breaking and holding an advantage to the end. She defeated Black Ribbon, the favorite by three lengths. Aufoin was third in the field of seven. Lady Dunlin was well backed at a $7.80 mutuel and made the good time of 1:21 4-5 over a fast but slightly dull course.

Many a daily double was wrecked in the second race when Truthfully, ridden by Jockey G. Terhune, easily defeated a field of eight over the 4½-furlong route. The filly scampered to the wire with plenty of daylight to spare over Adriatic, with Gee Sharp, a long shot, third. Lilteen and Mazyniata, heavily played, were nowhere in particular. The winner paid $12.20.

The favorite players got a break in the third event when Lady Buck, at $4.20, had little trouble downing Ada Wan and Sitting Pretty. The main part of the race was between the first two.

Sammy Palumbo gave one of his copyrighted rides to win with Topsie H. in the fifth race. While Peggy Can and Stand By ran each other off their hoofs, Palumbo was content to steady along. Entering the stretch, he found racing room on the inside, drove through and outlasted Peggy Can to win by a neck. Stand By lasted to take third money. Topsie H. won her second straight and paid $7.40.

Hurdy Gurdy, at a $7.60 mutuel, hugged the rail all the way to win the sixth race by four lengths from Pile Driver, a $50.60 place horse. Spear managed to salvage third money in the field of eight. Herbie Lauch gave the winner a good ride and was fortunate in escaping crowding that marked the run to the first turn.

Form players came into their own when Flageolet, owned by H. C. Stanton and ridden by Jocked R. Root, won the seventh race, one mile and a sixteenth. W. R. Kirkpatrick's Jimmy D was second, and Rosemarie B. third. The winner paid $5.80 for each $2 mutuel and was favorite in the betting.

Charts of Yesterday's Charles Town Races—By Walter Haight

THURSDAY, JUNE 3, 1937.
WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 2:30. Off at 2:30½. Winner, Mrs. H. E. Jenkins' ch. m. (5), by Dunlin—Philosophy. Trained by P. C. Randolph. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:21 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
LADY DUNLIN	(Machado)	106	2	2	1½	1½	1½½	1¹	$2.90

SUBDALE	(Palumbo)	111	6	7	7	5½½	7	7	36.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY DUNLIN, $7.80, $4.00, $2.80; BLACK RIBBON, $3.00, $2.40; AUFOIN, $4.80.

LADY DUNLIN, under improved handling, sprinted to the front at once, was steadied along and easily held sway over BLACK RIBBON. The latter followed the winner from the start, but could not seriously threaten. AUFOIN showed a good even effort. REIGH TETRARCH was taken up sharply when in close quarters and was not prominent.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:59½. Off at 3:02. Winner, L. K. Crist's b. f. (4), by Bucellas—Truthfulness. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:50 2-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight

BIG DIPPER	(Garrett)	107	1	7	7²	7²	7²	20.70
MAEDERE	(Wisner)	115	4	8	8	8	8	86.20

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRUTHFULLY, $12.20, $5.20, $4.60; ADRIATIC, $5.40, $4.20; GEE SHARP, $6.80.

TRUTHFULLY, hustled into command in the opening furlong, was taken out to a good lead and easily held ADRIATIC safe. The latter was hard ridden throughout, but was no match for the winner. GEE SHARP showed a good effort and closed gamely under punishment. MAZYNIATA had no excuses. LILTEEN could not threaten at any stage. The others were outrun.

THIRD RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:29. Off at 3:32. Winner, Mrs. J. H. Elliott's ch. m. (6), by Buck—Lady Fanshawe. Trained by W. Mein. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:50 3-5.

SURRY	(Sherry)	112	5	1	2ⁿ	4½½	8	6.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY BUCK, $4.20, $2.80, $2.40; ADA WAN, $3.80, $3.40; SITTING PRETTY, $6.80.

LADY BUCK, sent into contention at once, gained sharply when placed to a drive, disposed of ADA WAN and drew out easily at the end. ADA WAN opened a lead at the start and continued willingly. SITTING PRETTY, outrun to the stretch, closed with a belated rush. KYOTO closed willingly from a slow beginning. MISS TOUCAN raced wide and tired. IDLE SUSAN had late speed. HAPPY LOPE stopped suddenly while lugging in the stretch run. SURRY tired.

DAILY DOBULE PAID $22.00.

FOURTH RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $500. The Berkeley. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates for all but Ferlin. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:59. Off at 4:00. Winner, Mrs. K. N. Gilpin's b. f. (3), by Teddy—Nantokah. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:00 2-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight
TEDDY'S SQUAW	(Machado)	109	5	1	1ⁿᵏ	1³	1¹	$4.00
ALAHAD	(Palumbo)	111	1	3	2¹	2³	2³	1.60

JUSTA TOWN	(Fowler)	114	2	2	4¹½	4¹½	5⁴	31.80
FERLIN	(Root)	106	3	6	6	6	6	3.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEDDY'S SQUAW, $10.00, $3.80, $2.60; ALAHAD, $3.20, $2.40; BEAUTY B., $2.60.

TEDDY'S SQUAW, nicely handled, broke on top, came over on rail to save ground and drew out under light punishment midway of the stretch. ALAHAD went up on the outside of the winner soon after start, challenged repeatedly, but weakened. BEAUTY B. could not threaten while racing evenly. JUSTA TOWN had brief early speed. FERLIN was unprepared for the break.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:27. Off at 4:29. Winner, A. D. Jones' b. m. (8), by Chilhowee—Teenie. Trained by T. Lewis. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:17 4-5.

BOYS GIRL	(Kirk)	106	7	3	3	3	6	8	199.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOPSIE H., $7.40, $3.80, $2.60; PEGGY CAN, $3.00, $2.60; STAND BY, $3.60.

TOPSIE H., under steadying restraint while within striking distance of the leaders, came through on the inside at the final bend and under a strong hand ride disposed of PEGGY CAN. The latter was hard used racing in front with STAND BY and weakened in the closing sixteenth. STAND BY was tiring at the end due to hustling tactics during the early racing. COLORIST closed with a belated rush. ENVIOUS could not threaten. The others were outrun.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:56. Off at 4:58½. Winner, A. S. Hewitt's ch. m. (5), by Strolling Player—Miss Belle. Trained by P. C. Randolph. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:21 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HURDY GURDY, $7.60, $4.20, $3.40; PILE DRIVER, $50.60. $19.00; SPEAR, $3.60.

HURDY GURDY, lucky to escape crowding going to the first turn, took command under hustling tactics, was steadied along thereafter to win easily. PILE DRIVER, a forward factor throughout, closed gamely. SPEAR was in tight quarters going to the first turn and closed willingly. GOLD STREAK showed a good effort while racing on the outside. TULEYRIES LAD was blocked when attempting to make move at far turn and weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:26½. Off at 5:26½. Winner, H. C. Stanton's b. m. (9), by Sun Flax—Latonia. Trained by W. B. Hallar. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:50 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAGEOLET, $5.80, $3.00, $2.40; JIMMY D., $3.60, $3.00; ROSEMARIE B., $4.60.

FLAGEOLET, saving ground while close to the pacemakers, rallied when placed to a drive on the outside of JIMMY D. and wore down the latter in the stretch. JIMMY D., rushed to the front and steadied along while saving ground, fought it out willingly under punishment. ROSEMARIE B. passed tired horses in the stretch. CANTIE went forwardly, but weakened badly in final sixteenth. TINTYPE moved up menacingly entering the stretch, but tired. JORDAN ROSE had good speed for a half.

WITH BILL BENNINGS

DEAR AL:

Here's a letter from a Benningite: "As a daily reader of your column, though I must confess that I usually pick my own horses, I want to call your attention to an unusual incident that happened at the Charles Town race track yesterday. With a party of friends, my wife and I were visiting the track when, very early in the afternoon, she was overcome by the intense heat while standing in the terrific jam around the judges' stand. Before I could do anything about the situation, one of the officials rushed out of the stand with ice water and after inviting me to lift her over the fence to him, provided a place of comfort for her in the inclosure of the judges' stand for the remainder of the afternoon and thus enabled our party to continue the afternoon's outing. This was such an unusual courtesy and in addition to my own very deep appreciation, brought forth so many kind remarks from bystanders that I should feel at a loss were I not permitted to tell somebody about the incident. We go to the Charles Town track quite frequently and will probably continue to go more frequently in the future if for no other reason than knowing that there is one damn good sport (and probably many more) among the "powers that be" there. I almost forgot to mention that she held a winning ticket on Topsie H. in her hand at the time of her illness which I am inclined to blame for all the trouble.

P. S. I would prefer that no mention be made of my name in connection with the incident. My only desire is to say a kind word for the management of the track about which you have written so many kind words." Thanks for writing my Column. BILL.

First race—Crushed Ice demonstrated real speed last out and will win many a purse hereabouts. Deserves the call. White Sweets, with Palumbo to do the riding, appears second best. Boulder Dam for the show.

Second race—Shaggy Ann is suited by this abbreviated sprint route and should benefit from the No. 1 post position. Needs only the right ride. Tuleyries Star and Stand By seem to have an edge on the other positions.

Third race—Scold turned in a nice effort last out and may be ready to beat a field of this sort. Schley Goree may be the best of the juveniles in this barn and is dangerous. Two Aces ran out the other day. Will be a threat if kept on the course.

Fourth race—Halloo, a paddock tip last out and in trouble on that occasion, is first on the also eligible list and will be hard to beat if in action. Crossing Over and Bonnie Dhu to account for the place and show.

Fifth race—Zippy had little chance with the break last out and if away winging a win would not surprise me. Easter Herald is suited by the route and looms as the one to beat. Tody West, if in shape, would have much to say about this purse distribution.

Sixth race—Never Idol made a nice move last out and one that indicates that a winning effort is not far away. Precious King is in rare form and is dangerous. Red Label has a little class and may belong closer to the top.

Seventh race—Lady Gurzil, one that I had been saving for a long price, showed herself up the other day while in the hands of a poor rider. If the saddle assignment goes to Lauch, I'm going to string along. Miss Catalan likes this track and is getting back in good shape. Madge's Fellow for the show end.

Best bet—Shaggy Ann.

Harder Beats Yanks, White Sox Rout Boston; Fette Blanks Pirates

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Detroit, June 3.—Despite the fact that challenger Max Schmeling was stood up on his date with Champion Jimmy Braddock at Madison Square Garden bowl this evening, the Nation's fans shall not be without a description of the battle that was to take place.

I am covering the fight.

POVICH.

You know the background. Schmeling had been training for weeks at his Speculator, N. Y., camp for the bout that he knew Braddock had no intention of fighting because the champion was too busy training for his more profitable battle with Joe Louis in Chicago later in the month.

But the Garden promoters in order to fulfill their part of the contract and fortify their position in the suit to be brought against Braddock, has been blandly attempting to sell tickets to the "phantom fight" for months.

* * * *

And as you doubtless know, too, the farce was carried by the Garden and Schmeling to the extent of even having Schmeling come down from the mountains yesterday with his retinue to weigh in formally at the Boxing Commission offices for the battle that everybody knew would not take place.

* * * *

* * * *

Ringside, Madison Square Bowl, June 3.—In the huge crowd that did not attend the Schmeling-Braddock fight for the heavyweight championship which did not take place tonight, there were no cheers, strangely, for former Mayor Jimmy Walker, who did not make his way to a ringside seat behind a police escort which did not accompany him.

* * * *

Postmaster General Farley, who used the office of the New York Boxing Commission as a springboard to national political fame, did not create a stir, either, among the crowd which was not there when he did not put in his appearance with his usual party of guests.

As usual, the boxing commission was keeping a secret the identity of the referee it had chosen for the championship bout until just before the fighters were scheduled to enter the ring. Ringside wiseacres had it, though, that the referee would be either Cliff Bolton or the phantom of the oprea.

The challenger was the first to enter the ring, promptly at 9:05 p. m. Max Schmeling, bronzed to a nut brown and wearing his favorite gray-faded bathrobe, climbed jauntily between the ropes and acknowledged the terrific silence with the customary bows.

And then it was revealed that the referee was neither Cliff Bolton nor the phantom of the opera but Charley Ross, who had been ransomed at great cost to the Garden just to maintain the motif of the farce.

"Now what I want is a good, clean fight," said Referee Ross as he summoned Schmeling to the center of the ring after glancing at Braddock's empty corner and merely shrugging his shoulders. "I want it good, clean and fast and keep the punches up. You know the rules. Now come out fighting."

Round 1—Schmeling was out of his corner at the bell dancing lightly and flicking a light left in the direction where he though Braddock's chin would be if Braddock were in the ring with him. Two more light lefts he flung in the direction of the champion and then, gaining confidence, he swung a hard right. It missed Braddock's chin by approximately 1,100 miles, or whatever the distance to Chicago might be. He was sparring at the bell.

Round 2—Hardly puffing, Schmeling advanced boldly toward Braddock's corner, missed with two lefts and then, out of force of habit, retreated and covered up, with his arms and elbows shielding his face and head. Discovering he was unhurt, Max danced away, laughing, and shuffled toward Braddock's corner once more, this time a sneer of contempt written on his face. Obviously confident of his ability to slug it out with whoever he was fighting, Schmeling did not press the battle but contended himself with shadow boxing. The bell found him in a clinch with himself.

* * * *

* * * *

Stunned for a moment, he backed away. Then the alert Schmeling's mind began to function through fog. Grabbing at his groin with both hands, he slowly sagged to the floor, groveling there and raising a pair of pleading eyes to the referee.

* * * *

FLASH!—Schmeling claims foul.

FLASH!—Foul disallowed. Ring post wins by knockout.

"We wuz robbed," was the only comment of Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 3.—The Indians pulled up to three games off the American League lead today by whipping the pace-setting New York Yankees, 6 to 2, behind Mel Harder's effective pitching

Although touched for 11 hits, three of them by Lou Gehrig, Harder held the Yanks scoreless through the first six innings to chalk up his third victory against two defeats.

Lefty Gomez started for the Yanks but gave way to Blubber Malone in the eighth inning, after being lifted for a pinch-hitter. The erratic southpaw gave up three runs in his seven-inning tour of duty, and Malone allowed the Indians the other three, in the eighth.

In addition to losing the ball game, which evened the current series, the Yanks lost the services of their slugging right-fielder, Twinkletoes George Selkirk. He pulled up with a charley-horse in the second inning and will be out of the line-up for a week Myril Hoag took over his assignment.

The Indians started the scoring in the third by getting to Gomez for two runs on Harder's single, Lyn Lary's two bagger, Bruce Campbell's grounder and Hal Trosky's double against the rightfield wall. In the sixth, Pytlak's single and Hughe's double added another run, and in the eighth, the Indians wound up their scoring on Trosky's walk, Bad News Hale's single, a pass to Pytlak, and singles by Sullivan and Harder.

Pirates Beaten, 6-0, by Bees

Boston, June 3 (AP).—Rookie Lou Fette, the Boston Bees' 30-year-old righthander, stretched his personal winning streak to four straight today as he handed the Pittsburgh Pirates their first shutout of the year, 6 to 0.

Between Fette, who muffled the league leaders with seven hits, and Wally Berger, who clouted two homers, driving in four runs, the Pirates never had a chance after the Bees posted a four-run lead in the first inning.

BASEBALL'S BIG SIX!

Lyn Lary, of the Indians, and Beau Bell, of the Browns, climbed into a second-place tie in the American League batting race yesterday, while Brooklyn's Buddy Hassett shot into third place in the National League. Bell and Hassett were idle and Lary got only one hit in four chances, but the three profited by the batting collapse of Pittsburgh's Paul Waner, and Joe Cronin, of the Red Sox, both of whom went hitless in four times up, to fall out of the hitting "Big Six."

Entries Close For State Golf Tournaments

Chevy Chase Women Golfers to Receive First Team Trophy Today.

Entries for the Maryland State women's tournament, starting next Tuesday at Five Farms, Baltimore, will close tomorrow morning with Mrs. T. E. Schulderberg, of the host club. A $2 fee must accompany each entry.

Entries for the State men's tourney, starting with a qualifying round next Wednesday at Manor, will close with Emmet Gary, secretary of the association, or Al Treder at the Manor Club, Monday noon. The entrance fee for the latter event is $3.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, winner in '35 and '36, will defend her title in the ladies' event, while Spencer Overton, the bespectacled Mound City golfer, will attempt to retain his crown. Both events run through next Saturday.

The State lady golfers will play a postponed handicap tournament this morning at Hillendale. Cards may be obtained on the tee.

Chevy Chase, victor in the play among the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association first teams, draws a bye at Chevy Chase, but the members of the team will appear to receive the trophy from Mrs. R. W. Payne, president of the association. Congressional meets Manor and Columbia plays Indian Spring in other matches to decide second and third places.

Yankee Triumphs In 'Cup' Trials

Newport, R. I., June 3 (AP).—Gerard Lambert's 7-year-old Yankee, defeated yesterday by Harold S. Vanderbilt's Ranger, came back today to win the second of the preliminary trial races to decide which of three yachts will represent the U. S. in defense of the America's Cup.

Yankee won from Chandler Hovey's Rainbow, the boat that beat her three years ago by one minute for the honor of defending the cup.

Finishing the 27.7 miles in 3:15.03, Yankeee's victory margin was 5 minutes and 27 seconds.

Raleigh Is Booking.

The Raleigh Haberdasher baseball team is open for a game this Sunday with a strong senior ball club. Interested parties will call Ray Heeley at National 9540.

South Bend, Ind., June 3 (AP).—Odds here today were in favor of a hardy crew of 29 young athletes from West Catholic High School of Philadelphia to retain the championship of the Notre Dame National Catholic interscholastic track and field meet this week-end.

The field will be the largest in history of the event. Entries already have been received from 285 individual stars representing 19 schools. Last minute entries were expected.

Schools entered, with the number of individuals, follow: Aquinas, Lacrosse, Wis., 6; Cathedral Latin, Cleveland, Ohio, 7; Delasalle, Chicago, 8; Elder, Cincinnati, Ohio, 6; Fenwick, Oak Park, Ill., 15; Joliet (Ill.) Catholic, 16; Leo, Chicago, 22; Mount Carmel, Chicago, 15; Northeast, Philadelphia, 12; Pio Nona, St. Francis, Wis., 27; St. Ambrose, Davenport, Iowa, 13; St. Mary's of Anderson, Ind., 5; St. Mel, Chicago, 22; St. Patrick's Iowa City, Iowa, 6; West Catholic of Philadelphia, 29; DePaul, Chicago, 24; Loyola, Chicago, 12; St. Ignatius, Chicago, 29, and St. Rita, Chicago, 11.

Cochrane Better, Relapse Feared

New York, June 3 (AP).—Dr. Emmet Walsh today said Mickey Cochrane, Detroit baseball manager, was making steady improvement but insisted the "danger wasn't altogether over yet."

"As far as can be seen, all is well and Cochrane is making rapid progress," said Dr. Walsh, "but he isn't definitely out of the danger zone. We are on guard against complications."

However, Dr. Walsh paid Cochrane only one visit today and didn't appear a bit worried. Mrs. Cochrane was at the bedside all day, knitting and chatting with her husband.

Grey Gold Wins.

Detroit, June 3.—Grey Gold, E. W. Duffy's Kentucky Derby starter, closed fast on the outside to win by a head from Good Catch, Dixiana entry, in the $800 St. Clair Shores feature of the Detroit Fairgrounds racing program today.

Tony Latona, Shore Enter Semifinals

Ritzenberg, Moorhead Bow in Quarter-Final Round, Welsh Plays.

Favored players advanced as the City of Washington tennis tournament progressed at the Edgemoor Club yesterday.

Tony Latona, seeded No. 3, and Frank Shore, who was declared the fourth-best player in the competition, went into the semifinals. Latona progressed by defeating Allie Ritzenberg, one of the locally famous group of tennising brothers, 11—9 and 7—5.

Shore was carried to three sets by Tom Moorhead, whom he finally bested, 6—0, 0—6, 11—9. Today at 3 o'clock, Barney Welsh, seeded No. 1, will draw Latona as a semifinal opponent. Shore will face Dooley Mitchell, seeded No. 2, at 5 o'clock.

The team of Barney Welsh and Tony Latona will oppose Dooley Mitchell and Bill Howard in the finals of the doubles competition. They will play for the championship next Sunday.

Welsh and Latona progressed to the finals yesterday by defeating Stan McCaskey and Stan Robinson, 6—4, 6—2. Mitchell and Howard went into the championship play by downing Harry Heffner and David Johnson, 6—2, 6—3.

Keep fit for Breath-Taking Moments

The Metallic Nose Knows

Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten different brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was at least 25% easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

Tests show that VINTAGE TOBACCO is at least 25% easier on your breath than all other 5¢ cigars tested . . .

STALE TOBACCO BREATH has put many an intimate moment on the spot. Why risk offending? Smoke a Vintage cigar and see how fresh and clean your breath is just 30 minutes later.

New scientific discoveries have shown that White Owl's Vintage tobacco is very low in the substances that cause unpleasant tobacco breath. Tests with a delicate osmoscope prove that this tobacco leaves less odor.

White Owl is a better cigar because it always has a Vintage-tobacco filler. Nature—not factory processing—made this tobacco exceptionally mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast crop-inspection system—the only known organization of its kind—to locate Vintage tobacco. Even in Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—and buy only tobacco of the quality of the top three for White Owls.

Get White Owls next time you buy cigars. You'll get a milder, smoother smoke—and cheers from the ladies.

Fishing Reports From Bay Front Discouraging; Upper Potomac Good

'Blues' Are Biting At Ocean City, Md.

Capt. Jarman Reports Good Bluefish Catch Down at Ocean City; Few Mackerel Reported Caught Off Barnegat, N. J.; Other Fishing News.

Post Tide Tables Will Be Found on Page 22.

By Bill Ackerman.

Phone calls to various sections along the bay front failed to give, up to late Wednesday evening, enough hope to recommend giving them a try. The one bright spot is up the Potomac, and, based on the large strings of rock brought in to Joe Fletcher's on Wednesday, is probably the best bet for the next few days.

Averaging 1 to 2 pounds and 15 to 20 to the angler, with here and there one that pushed the 4-pound mark real close. Bloodworms are the bait, with the greatest amount of fun coming from the light bait-casting rods. For hooks—have you ever tried the short-shanked Faultless, in sizes from 2-0 to 4-0?

ACKERMAN

Bluefish are still biting good at Ocean City, Md., according to Capt. J. D. Jarman, and are running heavier in weight—from 4 to 10 pounds. His letter also contains the news that the channel bass have started in to run the breakers at Fox Hill Levels, some miles south of Ocean City. Porgies and sea bass are biting good, but then that is to be expected of these fish, and for many weeks to come.

Boats fishing offshore at Barnegat, N. J., have also been getting some bluefish of fair size and a few mackerel. Inside, the big weakfish are running good; many weighing 8 pounds and better.

Returns from this past week's fishing are surprising, to say the least. The majority of anglers had little to report, yet here and there were to be found some fair catches.

Although Ernest Lee and his party aboard the Lee, which included his son, John; Al and Charles Rouse, and the brothers Fitzgerald, John and Maurich, fished from Herring Bay down to the point and around to Smiths Creek and then back, the sum total was seven small hardheads.

Yet at Solomons, after Capt. Dick Lore had advised against going out, Aubrey Harris and his party caught 25 nice ones in no time. Another foursome, fishing the oyster beds above Broomes, had a like catch Angelo Cammino's party, fishing at Kenwood, got a few nice hardheads and nine rock, the largest of which scaled 12 pounds. Quite a few 4 and 5 pound rock hit around Rock Point.

Don Carpenter for some weeks, with a 16-inch rainbow, has been eyeing the cup that Cottie Willard offers each year for the largest trout caught in Fishing Creek. Last Sunday, an angler by the name of Litzelman tied him with a 16-inch brown. Don better return to home pastures and leave those "furrin" streams alone, or before he knows anything about it, someone will have his cup and all the glory that goes with it.

West Virginia is doing a grand job in the building of camps in her national park areas for the use of fishermen and other lovers of the outdoors. At least 62 will be ready by July 1 and possibly more. From fishing shacks and one-room cabins comfortable for three or four persons, to four and five room cabins accommodating a dozen, they will have hot and cold showers, electric lights and other modern conveniences. The finishing touches and the smoothing out of the rough spots, left by he cabin builders, has just about been completed on 12 in Cacapon State Park, 23 at Watoga, 15 at Lost River and 12 at Babcock.

The ground around each cabin is being restored to natural appearance under the direction of landscape architects, walks are being completed, interiors being stained and rubbed down to bring out the natural grain of the wood. CCC boys are finishing the sturdy square-posted beech and maple beds in the favored Colonial styles of today that leaves all of the dignity of the pioneer's picturesque handiwork. Dressers, cupboards and similar articles will be in red oak and chestnut, with some wild cherry here and there.

Knives, forks, spoons, linen, blankets, pots and pans; in fact, everything that anyone would need will be supplied on a "check in and check out basis," with the renter held responsible.

Hunt Defeats Bryan Grant In Three Sets

By the United Press.

Atlanta, Ga., June 3.—Joel Hunt, youthful Los Angeles net ace, defeated Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant in straight sets today in the Atlanta Atom's last exhibition tennis match before leaving for Germany with the U. S. Davis Cup team.

Hunt, ranked No. 1 nationally, gave everything he had and was on the verge of exhaustion as he defeated the Davis Cup team member, 6—4, 6—4.

Grant agreed to a return match after the slender Californian had extended him to the utmost last April in the Atlanta Invitation Tennis Tourney. Bitsy, finding Hunt at match point in that meeting while he still was two sets from victory, had to unleash his full power to salvage the match.

Playing a driving game, Hunt forced Grant to the baseline today with blistering shots and kept the Atlantan on the defensive from the outset. He passed Bitsy frequently when the Davis Cup star changed to the net. After driving him to the baseline, he trickled short shots over the net, defying even the remarkable retriving skill of the little Atlantan.

Driving from the first service, Hunt ran out three games in the first set, before Grant could begin service for his first points. Bitsy then took three straight games but Hunt took three of the next four for a 6—4 set victory.

Still driving, he ran the count to 5—2 in the final set, before Grant pulled up to 5—4 with consecutive games. But Hunt, fathering his strength for the final points, drove through for match point and victory.

Grant, who defeated Jack Crawford and John Bromwich, of Australia in Davis Cup matches last week-end, planned to leave Atlanta tomorrow for New York where he sails Wednesday with the Davis Cup team to meet Germany in the interzone finals.

Nats Win 'Thriller' Over Detroit by 5-4

the reformed National Leaguer, sent in to pinch hit for the Tigers, drove a two-bagger past Joe Kuhel and again the Tigers had the tying run on base with none out and the heavy end of the batting order due at the plate.

But Pete Fox, a pinch runner for Herman, may still be out there on second base with that tying run as we go to press. Because DeShong got Jo-Jo White, Bill Rogell and Gerald Walker out so easily that they might have been three guys named Joe. They couldn't even budge Fox to third.

With a concerted rush, the Nats dashed in from their positions in the field to gleefully pound De Shong on the back in congratulation as he made his way to the dressing room.

Matters were pretty black for the Nats, too, in that seventh inning, when the Tigers were sporting a 4-3 lead. They brightened, though, when Al Simmons coaxd a walk out of Wild Jake Wade, and Joe Kuhel, meaning to sacrifice, laid down a bunt so perfect that he beat it out for a hit to put Simmons on second. But the Nats' hopes sagged when Cecil Travis could only fly out to centerfield.

That was where Shanty Hogan came in. The big catcher who has been staging a private comeback of his own at bat lately, had what it took to get that tying run home—a line-drive single to leftfield that scored Simmons.

That tied the score at 4-4, but with two out Vic Sorrell entered the game and walked Ben Chapman to fill the bases and then he walked Buddy Lewis right afterward and Kuhel sauntered home from third with the run that put the Nats ahead, 5-4.

This Wade was inviting the Nats to go ahead and win the ball game all day, but didn't get around to it until the eighth.

The Nats did get a run out of three walks, and Al Simmons' infield single in the first inning, but one swipe off Greenberg's bat—a home-run clout into the teeth of a young gale blowing from left field, put the Tigers ahead 2 to 1 in the fourth. Gerald Walker was on base at the time.

The Nats reared right back in the fifth to tie matters at 2 to 2 when Chapman coaxed the errant Wade out of another base on balls and scored on singles by the two Buddies—Lewis and Myer.

Patty Berg, Marion Miley Win In Trans-Mississippi Tourney

San Antonio, Tex., June 3.—Four Texans escorted the defending champion and three other top-ranking contenders into the quarter-finals of the women's trans-Mississippi golf tourney today after two fiery "sudden deaths" rounds.

Golf that matched the day's 100-degree temperature made two youngsters, Miss Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., titleholder the past two years, and freckled Patty Berg, Minneapolis, Curtis Cup star, standouts after the day's firing had ceased.

Almost nonchalantly Miss Miley disposed of Mrs. A. E. Brown, San Antonio, in the morning, 7 and 5, and Miss Helen Hofmann, Utah State champion, 5 and 4, in the afternoon.

One over par golf gave her an easy win over Mrs. Brown, while perfect figures in the afternoon bewildered Miss Hoffmann, one of women's golf's longest hitters.

Miley moved into the quarter-finals opposite Mrs. Lucille Robinson Mann, Milwaukee, who played flawlessly. The former Western champion and Curtis Cup star was only two over women's par in 5 and 4 victories over Miss Kay Pearson, Houston, and Miss Edna Saenger, Shreveport, La.

Miss Berg breezed around the first nine in the morning in 38, 2 under women's par, to go 8-up on Mrs. F. P. Dodge, Port Arthur, Tex., and closed the match with a par 3 at the tenth.

Her game was back at women's par in the afternoon when she won 4 and 3, over Miss Hilda Urbantke, Austin.

Tomorrow the dynamic youngster meets a veteran, Mrs. Don Chandler, of Dallas, who disposed of Miss Shirley Ann Johnson, 4 and 2.

One of tomorrow's outstanding matches will bring together—Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, and titian-haired Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, 18-year-old school girl who has bagged the Texas title the past two years.

Miss Jameson eliminated Miss Phyllis Buchanan, Denver, former title holder, 2 and 1, in the day's best battle.

Miss Buchanan previously had defeated stocky Goldie Bateson, Wisconsin State champion, 3 and 2.

Mrs. Hill, four times winner of the title, advanced by defeating Mrs. H. D. Sterrett, Hutchinson, Kans., 2 and 1, after a stiff fight.

Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, Fort Worth, Curtis Cup player, defeated Mrs. Patti Newbold, of Wichita, former Kansas champion, 2 and 1, to win her way opposite Mrs. E. R. Hury, of San Antonio. Mrs. Hury, tagged the "dark horse," coasted all the way in a 5 and 4 decision over Betty Botterill, Salt Lake City veteran.

Jack Campbell Starts 100th Mayfair Week

Joan English Singing in King Cole Room at Claridge.

By Chanticleer

They'll be celebrating at the Mayfair today—all day—and with plenty of the old zippereeno, as we college boys put it. It's the beginning of Jack Campbell's 100th week at this popular 'drop-in-ery" and don't think for one minute that 100 weeks in any spot isn't a long time.

Campbell has to be a top-notcher in his line to last a year and a half in a smart night spot. In fact, if you want to make something of it, that year and a half is a long time even in a third-rate dive. The principle is the same: you've got to be good to stay.

* * * *

A very pretty little thing named Joan English has come to the King Cole Room at the Claridge Hotel to sing equally pretty ditties for the customers assembled for cocktails. She's to be here for a short time only due to a coming engagement at Long Island's Jones Beach.

The new band at Jimmy Crandall's spot, Brinkley's is holding the crowds and to quote mine host: "The people are coming earlier and staying later than ever before!" All the boys in this band sing.

* * * *

According to my spy at the Lotus, the little ladies forming the background for the floor show are tops in beauty and talent. The piece de resistance is Al Norton's creation, "Dancing Cocktails." Featuring the bill are Vincent and Norma, dance stylists; Blanche Ray, extra high kicking specialist, and the Lonette Sisters, in "Story in Song and Dance." Louise Lonnette adds an acrobatic stunt.

Boulevard Farms announces a new change in policy, effective today. They're to have floor shows Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights With no advance in prices. Amateur Night, formerly held Friday night, will be held Wednesday night.

* * * *

Marion Wilkins, the Sherman, Tex., dancer is back at the Shoreham Terrace with her partner, Jack Walters, and practically any night is Texas night out there. They feature a sensational Astaire-Rogers number—the finale of the new picture, "Shall We Dance." Bonzo, a dog act, is an attraction at the newly opened Terrace, too.

Decoration Day at the Madrillon proved beyond a doubt that everyone does not leave the old town on a holiday. Johnny Shaw and his orchestra played to capacity.

* * * *

The great granddaddy of all the "daddy long legs" you ever saw is on view at La Paree this week. With his femme partner he indulges in various and sundry dance turns of the comedy type. It's really wonderful to see how those long arms and legs get all over the La Paree's floor. For eye appeal, there's a couple of rhythm dancers who know their business.

The Cork and Bottle laughs at those elaborate signs announcing "this room is air conditioned." The Cork and Bottle has no air conditioning—except what nature provides. You see, this new cocktailery in the Commodore has natural ventilation from four sides. Every little breeze, etc.

* * * *

Gene Erwin and his band are on hand at the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room. The maestro takes an active part with this aggregation, plays the fiddle. A very unusual fiddle it is, too, made from pieces of other fiddles.

Maestro

JIMMIE SANTMEYER leads the orchestra at the Wardman Park Hotel's air-cooled Metronome Room and pleases everyone.

Songstress

MISS JOAN ENGLISH, pretty songbird, who is delighting patrons of the King Cole Room at the Hotel Claridge with her ditties.

Marion Miley Wins.

San Antonio, Tex., June 3 (AP).—Marion Miley played par golf in terrific heat today to win her second-round match in the women's trans-Mississippi golf tournament from Helen Hofmann, Utah champion, 5 and 4.

U. S. May Save World, Women Graduates Hear

Marjorie Webster Class Addressed by National Law Dean.

Foreseeing the possibility of war in Europe Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of National University Law School, told graduates of the Marjorie Webster Schools last night that America may act in this impending crisis "to save the remnants of Western civilization."

Dr. Pergler, a former member of the Czechoslovakian Parliament, and a member of its diplomatic corps, spoke on the present world political situation in a commencement address in the school auditorium.

"Whether rightly or not," he said, "many speak of the twilight of Western civilization. And it is true that the past 20 years have witnessed the destruction of many values, not only material, but, perhaps more important, moral and spiritual. We can not close our eyes to the fact that another holocaust may destroy European civilization for a long time.

"It may then become the destiny of America to lead not only materially, but in civilization as well, to save from the past what is worth saving and to carry forward the torch of improvement, moral, economic and political."

Women have their part to play in this course, the dean pointed out. "They aid now in formulating the collective will of the Nation, and that collective will in many respects is nothing but the aggregate of the individual wills."

The processional was sung by Phyllis Ann Clapp, and the Rev. Dr. William L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, delivered the invocation.

Morgan Partner Has Appendicitis

New York, June 3 (AP).—George Whitney, one of the principal Morgan banking firm partners, underwent an operation today for appendicitis.

Attendants at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, where the operation was performed, said later the 51-year-old banker's condition was "good." His business associates said there was no cause for alarm.

Whitney was stricken after word reached here that J. P. Morgan, senior partner of the firm, who became ill in London recently, was again confined to his bed in mid-Atlantic on the liner Queen Mary. He will arrive here Monday.

On the Air Today

When publicity is released from the local Columbia staff it reads something like this: "Mysterious" McDonald, prestidigitator extraordinary and sports commentator summa cum laude, has annexed three more half hours a week for the dissemination of the latest in facts and figures concerning the great American game—baseball, not poker—and items of interest in other lines of sporting endeavor. On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, from 11 to 11:30 p. m., he is to be heard over WJSV, discussing the day's events in the realm of the Marquis of Queensbury and Judge K. M. Landis. That's the story, too.

The brand new addition to the WJSV announcing staff is Shelton Young. Shelton is a graduate of the University of Richmond and prior to joining with Columbia he was a regular announcer with WBAL in Baltimore. Now, if the Washington Baseball Team can sign young Jacobs, also of the Richmond University, Washington will be much obliged to the Old Dominion.

* * * *

If Arthur Godfrey, who has cruised the seven seas in the United States Naval service was free to live anywhere in the world, he'd choose his farm in Virginia, peaceful and quiet, and near Washington.

* * * *

Loretta Young, who began her screen career by accidentally answering a movie director's call intended for her sister, will be interviewed by Elza Schallert tonight at 9:45 o'clock, WMAL.

* * * *

The fiftieth anniversary of the debut of Joe Werber and Lew Fields on the American stage will be celebrated tonight during the "Hollywood Hotel" broadcast at 8 o'clock, WJSV. Only at one time in their entire career have they been separated, from 1904 to 1912. Tributes will be paid to them by Al Jolson and George Jessel. Holding the star spot on this program will be Bette Davis and Edward G. Robinson, who will present scenes from their recent film, "Kid Galahad."

* * * *

"Wintergreen for President," "On the Trail," "The March and Procession of Bacchus" and the "Carioca" are on the program with Deems Taylor tonight, WMAL—8:30 . . . Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, will discuss "The Government and Labor Relations" via WJSV at 9:45 tonight . . . The Cities Service Orchestra, conducted by Rosario Bourdon, presents Lucille Manners, soprano; Ross Graham, barytone, and the Revellers, WMAL, 7 p. m.

AAA Tells Public How to Test Its Daily Egg Supply

By the Associated Press.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration advised the public yesterday how to make sure the seventenths of an egg it eats per capita daily hasn't been around too much.

Requisite equipment is a square of wire net, with holes about big enough to put a pencil through.

The directions say to break the egg and place the meat gently on the net.

"If the yolk stands up round like a ball, if the white is clear and holds firmly around the yolk," the AAA said, "then it is an excellent egg."

If the white is thin and slithers through, the AAA continued, it is not so good.

It left to the imagination the case of the egg that goes through, yolk and all.

Taxing of Church Businesses Urged

The Takoma Park Town Council was urged to levy taxes against commercial properties operated by religious organizations in a resolution adopted last night by the Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park at a meeting in the Takoma firehouse.

The resolution was adopted despite the opposition of several members, including Ben G. Winkinson, jr. The resolution points out that there is in operation in the town a group of businesses, including a mill and woodworking shop, public garages and service stations, bakeries, printing office, grocery stores and a drug store, in connection with "certain hospitals and educational institutions" which are not necessary for the respective uses of the said respective institution within the meaning of the existing law."

The resolution also urges that town policement be transferred to the county police force to avoid double taxation for police protection and that the mayor and council return the town offices to the town firehouse, thus saving the taxpayers the money expended for rental of the present town offices.

Steel Strikes Cut Production To Year's Low

Operations Drop to 77.5% Compared With 85% in Previous Week.

New York, June 3.—"As a result of strikes that have wholly or partially shut down plants of three major steel companies, the ingot production rate has declined to 77½ per cent, compared with a revised figure of 85 per cent for last week," Iron Age says in its weekly summary today. The review adds:

"This is the lowest rate at which the steel industry as a whole has operated this year. The Youngstown district, where average operations are down to 45 per cent from 84 per cent before the strike, is the hardest hit; the Cleveland-Lorain district has declined from 80 per cent to 55 per cent, and the Chicago area is down from 86 per cent to 63 per cent. Other districts are unaffected by strikes, but there have been a few minor declines owing to ordinary business factors.

"There has been some diversion of orders from companies affected by strikes to those that are not, but the amount of this so far has not been large. For example, a Chicago company whose plants are operating has had the largest volume of business in seven weeks. If the strikes are prolonged, as appears to be likely, a further tendency toward the placing of business with plants that can take such business for reasonably early shipment undoubtedly will develop. However, some companies with large backlogs will be able to take only a moderate amount of additional tonnage, as they are giving first consideration to their own regular customers.

Stocks Are Ample.

"Meanwhile, many consumers are drawing upon their stocks, which fortunately are ample in many cases for some weeks, and jobbers' stocks also are plentiful. The companies against which strikes have been declared have received assurances of sympathetic support from many customers, who will await resumption of full production if it is possible for them to do so.

"The adamant stand taken by the Republic, Inland and Youngstown Sheet & Tube companies against the signing of an agreement with the Steel Workers Organizing committee indicates a finish fight against the demand of the union, for which there is no legal excuse under the Wagner Labor act. The strategy of the S. W. O. C. is obviously to force a consent election, as was done in the Jones & Laughlin case, but which has been refused in this instance. The legal recourse of the union is an appeal to the National Labor Relations Board to order an election, which consumes time for an investigation."

Gold Stock Passes 12-Billion Mark

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported last evening that its holdings of Government securities had remained unchanged during the week ended June 2. It was the second consecutive week that the board stayed out of the Federal security market, leaving total holdings of Government issues unchanged at $2,526,000,000.

During April and part of May, the board acquired almost $100,000,000 in Federal securities to steady the market.

The board reported estimated member bank excess reserves at $86,000,000 on June ", a decrease of $80,000,000 for the week. This drop in banks' supply of lendable money resulted largely from an outflow of funds into circulation. Money in circulation increased $88,000,000 for the week to $6,487,000,000, or $534,000,000 over the same week last year.

Gold stocks, increasing $50,000,000 for the week, established a new record high at $12,027,000,000 or $1,618,000,000 over the same week last year.

Celotex Corp. Net Trebles in First Half

New York, June 3.—Net income of the Celotex Corporation for the six months ended April 30, 1937, the first half of the company's fiscal year, was only about $20,000 short of equalizing the net reported for the entire 1936 fiscal year of $736,014, the semi-annual earnings report of the company issued today disclosed.

Net income for the period after all charges, amounted to $715,931, equivalent after preferred dividend requirements to $2.39 a share on 268,685 shares of common stock outstanding. This compares with net of $232,480 earned in the same period of last year, equivalent after preferred dividends to 59 cents a share on 268,685 shares of common stock.

Wheat Prices Recover After Sharp Decline

Crop Estimates, Rains and Dust Storms Unsettle Market.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 3.—Touching the lowest levels since January, wheat prices fluctuated nervously today, unsettled by weakness of foreign markets, rains in the domestic Southwest and dust storms in Canada.

Prospects that the United States 1937 wheat production may total almost 900,000,000 bushels, largest crop in six years, was an important factor abroad. Although lacking leadership, the Chicago market rallied almost 1 cent above the previous close at times, but at other times prices were as much below.

Brokers' Loans Rise $16,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $1,140,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $16,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,176,000,000.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Are Irregular in Dullest Trading in Two Years; U. S. Bonds Steady.

New York, June 3.—Stock trading was the dullest in more than two years at around half a million shares. Price gains and losses were about evenly divided at the close. Dollars were strong on the heavy London gold sales. September wheat dropped ¾ of a cent to 108⅛ cents a bushel.

The main stock here milled about in a small corral. A few mavericks kicked up a little dust. The market took a better informed view toward the New York Steam preferred stocks, and they rose 7 to 10 points and about twice that much from their worst prices of yesterday. It was supposed that Consolidated Edison might have taken advantage of the opportunity to buy a little stock, as it had gone in so heavily for the common shares on the Curb recently.

Arbitraging in the New Haven issues was much less active, as traders apparently felt the operation was scarcely worth while, inasmuch as it may be years before the New Haven ever is permitted to reorganize. Steel recovered the best part of an initial loss of 1½ points. Republic and Bethlehem were heavy from the start. Rails weakened, although Jersey Central recovered and Santa Fe improved. Metal shares backed. Nickel lost a point. Chrysler picked up a point but other motors were ignored.

Chemicals Lower.

Mail order, tobacco, rubber and oil shares were little changed. Chemicals dropped. Telephone was the only utility to attract much interest outside the Edison group and the local tractions. BMT sank into new low ground with a 2-point loss. The preferred dropped 5 points and the bonds weakened. Baldwin preferred added 4 points on one sale to its recent decline.

Security and money markets were affected little if any by either the partial announcement of the Treasury's tax date financing or by the record-breaking sales of gold now taking place in London. Much of the gold appearing on the London market is now being diverted from this country, and in any event the belief is strong in most quarters on both sides of the Atlantic that no reduction in the gold price is likely to be made. Such action is doubly improbable, now that even high Government officials are beginning to show some anxiety lest the seasonal business recession go too far.

Government bonds were a light shade weaker, although the $500,000,000 in new money which the Treasury expects to borrow is the minimum sum predicted by the market. If necessary, as usual, the Treasury is properly rigged to receive the new loan, but the time has long passed when any one turns enthusiastic over the prospect for a new Treasury issue. Banks are finding it increasingly difficult to make any money out of Treasury financing.

Reassurance.

Markets were more influenced on business prospects by their own dullness than by anything else. Such facts and forecasts as were produced were mildly reassuring, although the strike at some of the steel mills promises to reduce for some time activity in that industry and to cut into railroad traffic, as well as to reduce purchasing power in the affected areas.

Secretary of Commerce Roper gave his views on the business outlook.

They came with announcement by the Secretary of the Treasury that because of too much optimism on tax collections and too much exuberance in expenditures, the Treasury would have to go back on its promises not to borrow any more money this fiscal year, beyond the usual weekly discount bill sales and would need a half billion of new cash at the June tax date.

Those views were more restrained than recent practice at Washington has led anyone to expect. The Secretary thought activity would be "moderately sustained" during the summer, unless too much labor trouble intervened.

He also said that to splendid crop prospects and increased purchasing power of wage earners may be added "increasing industrial dividend payments" as making a tendency to resist seasonal recession. If the Secretary meant increasing industrial profits, his position is sounder than if he merely meant that corporations are being forced to pay out in dividends a larger portion of profits than formerly was considered prudent. In any event, dividend disbursements have not been rising much lately.

It is well to note that at least one member of the Cabinet admits that "heavy emergency spending" by the Government cannot "continue indefinitely." Many had begun to fear that we had developed a chronic sort of emergency, with acute symptoms every four years. On another point the Secretary is less convincing. He says, "It should be recalled that at this time last year bonus payments gave unusual buoyancy to business conditions." Preparatoins for bonus payments possibly did, as bonus recipients anticipated the payments; but it was not until June 15 that actual payments began.

Gold Price.

Although gold in London was a penny an ounce higher, actually the price in terms of dollars sank to a new low, namely, $34.6597 an ounce, about 41 cents an ounce below "parity," which is $34.77 an ounce. With a profit of 11 cents an ounce it would be expected that banks here would be anxious to do gold arbitraging, but they stood on the side lines, except for modest amounts, and let the British and American stabilization funds take the bulk of the metal. In one bank it was stated that the size of the new Treasury financing for June suggested that the Treasury was willing to buy at least $200,000,000 or $300,000,000 more gold before reconsidering the whole policy of sterilization.

Record Offerings.

Later in the day sterling declined further, bringing down the price of gold to about $34.63. The offerings in the London market at the time the price was fixed reached a record total of £2,533,000, and one bank received word that a great deal of the offering was metal released from Swiss hoards, the purchase of which was sidestepped by the Swiss control authorities. Some bankers feel that the British authorities are encouraging the circulation of gold price cut rumors so as to bring as much gold out of hoarding as possible and thereby get rid of the overhanging supply. While it is frequently pointed out that the President under existing law could raise the dollar only a slight percentage, the rub comes in the high degree of discretion given the Secretary of the Treasury. That official could say he didn't want to buy any gold until next week or next month.

Rail Traffic.

Railroad freight car loadings last week advanced only fractionally from the preceding week, but the gain over last year was well maintained. The total, which was only slightly below the high of this year, was 0.3 per cent higher than the week ended May 22, and 20.8 per cent above the corresponding period of 1936. Car loadings this week will be curtailed somewhat by the Memorial Day holiday.

Motor Car Sales Set New Quarter Peak

Detroit, June 3 (AP).—Retail sales of 1,502,963 passenger cars and trucks during the first four months of 1937, topping the record of any previous corresponding period in the motor car industry, were reported today to the Automobile Manufacturers Association meeting here. The figures do not include sales of the Ford Motor Co., only producer not a member of the association. The association re-elected as its president, Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Car Co. Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of the General Motors Corporation, was elected first vice president.

M'Lachlen Now In Line to Head D. C. Bankers

General Chairman of Recent Convention Elected 3d Vice President.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Following the usual precedent, election of Archibald McLachlen, secretary and treasurer, McLachlen Banking Corporation, as third vice president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, means his election to the presidency of that organization in four years. Mr. McLachlen was chairman of the general committee in charge of this year's convention of the association at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. He is a brother of Lanier P. McLachlen, president of McLachlen Banking Corporation and a former president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

Albert S. Gatley, executive vice president of Lincoln National Bank, who was re-elected treasurer of the local bankers association, has filled that office for 26 previous terms. Local bank presidents in attendance at the convention included Francis G. Addison, jr., Security Savings & Commercial Bank; Willard G. Barker, Morris Plan Bank; Clarence F. Burton, City Bank; Robert V. Fleming, Riggs National Bank; E. C. Graham, Hamilton National Bank; Ord Preston, Union Trust Co., John A. Reilly, Second National Bank; John R. Waller, International Bank.

New Hamilton Manager.

The appointment of Stanley S. Gordon, Washington hotel man, as manager of the Hamilton Hotel, was announced yesterday, effective immediately. For the past eight years he has held positions as assistant manager at the Hamilton and the Ambassador Hotels. Prior to these associations, Mr. Gordon was employed by the Hotel Statler, Boston, and the famed Saranac Inn, in Saranac, New York.

S. S. GORDON.

Originally a Bostonian, he received his schooling in New England. Mr. Gordon has spent the past 14 years in Washington. He is recognized as an excellent violinist, having attended the New England Conservatory of Music for several years, and for some time played with several Washington orchestras.

Insurance Conference.

Griffin M. Lovelace, vice president of the New York Life Insurance Co., was in the city yesterday to be present at a sales congress attended by the company's agents in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia. The sales force of this territory dedicated six weeks to write new business in honor of Mr. Lovelace and in that period delivered 322 applications for $901,000. The leading record for volume was made by David Samakow with $104,125 worth of new business. The record on number of applications was made by Sidney Simon with 28.

The meeting closed with a dinner at Columbia Country Club attended by Mr. Lovelace, Fred S. Munsell, inspector of agencies, Earl D. Krewson, local agency director, and the 14 leading salesmen of the local territory, and their wives.

Commerce and Savings Dividend.

Thomas J. Groom, executive vice president and cashier of the Bank of Commerce & Savings, announced that the board of directors of the bank declared a regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent and an extra dividend of 1 per cent, both payable July 1, to stockholders of record June 20. This is a continuation of the dividend action taken last year when a total of $10 in regular dividends was paid and $2 in extra dividends, or total dividends of $12 per share. Mr. Groom reported a healthy growth in deposits and estimated that earnings for the first six months of 1937 would be quite satisfactory.

Check Charges.

The question of charges for cashing checks is expected to come up for discussion at the convention of the National Association of Credit Men, this month. In the monthly review of the National Association which has been received by members of the Washington Association, Henry H. Heimann, executive manager of the national group, opposes any charge by banks for the cashing of checks. While the practice of charging for check collections has been confined chiefly to the smaller cities, the matter has often caused much discussion in general banking circles.

Mr. Heimann desires that the entire matter of bank service charges be considered by a joint committee of bankers and credit experts. Reminding that firms have been organized for the purpose of cashing checks after banks' business hours, he sees the possibility of such agencies engaging in other forms of banking. This might result in unfair competition because banks are closely limited through State and National regulations and the outside organizations are not under similar rules at present.

Impost Revived.

Recent revival by some banking institutions of the service charge for check cashing will be considered at the national convention of the association at Chicago, June 21-24, when a movement to obtain abandonment of the practice will be launched. Bankers in smaller cities, however, are defending their service charge rights. Explaining that bank checks have become the most important currency of the nation so far as daily settlements are concerned, Mr. Heimann states: "There is little distinction between discounting bank checks when they serve as your currency or discounting currency. Obviously you would not expect to receive $4.90 for a $5 bill because in getting it changed you had to pay 10 cents for the privilege. A bank check is, in practice, currency. You should not be expected to pay for the clearance of a bank check."

Credit Convention.

Washington Association of Credit Men will send a delegation to this, the forty-second annual meeting of the association. The national meeting is held for the purpose of exchanging ideas and information relative to the best methods of securing credit information and protecting commercial accounts.

Bank Clearings Decline 4.8% From Year Ago

Decrease of 10.8% in New York Is Chiefly Responsible.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 3.—The bank clearings exhibit for the past week presents a very irregular picture. The total for New York, despite the Decoration Day holiday and the stock market closing on May 29 and May 31, showed a gain over the preceding week, while the outside centers declined.

Aggregate volume of clearings for 22 leading cities of the United States for the week (five days) ended June 2, according to Dun & Bradstreet, amounted to $5,276,296,000, against $5,541,939,000 in the same week (five days) of 1936. This represented a decrease of 4.8 per cent, the first such decline reported since the week of May 5, last.

Clearings for New York City aggregated $3,304,945,000, a loss of 10.8 per cent from the 1936 comparative of $3,704,025,000. At the outside cities the clearings volume for the week was $1,971,351,000, as compared with $1,837,914,000 last year, or a gain of 7.3 per cent.

The week's clearings represented a loss of $7,845,000 from the preceding week's total.

J. P. Morgan Partner Undergoes Operation

New York, June 3 (AP).—George Whitney, a partner in the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co., was operated upon today for appendicitis at the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center. Hospital attendants said his condition was "good."

Whitney, who is 51 years old, is one of the most active of the Morgan banking partners. With Thomas Lamont, Whitney appeared frequently in Washington in the last few years during the Senate's Wall Street investigations.

Eastern Shore Of Va. to Crown Potato Queen

Third Annual BlossomFete Starts Tonight in Accomac.

By the Associated Press.

Onancock, Va., June 3.—Virginia's arations today for its third annual Eastern Shore watched final prep- potato blossom fete, a seasonal tribute to the peninsula's leading crop.

Miss Mary Rose Fisher, of Accomac, will ascend the festival throne tomorrow night to receive her crown as queen of the State's greatest potato-growing section.

Another erstwhile ruler, little Miss Martha Lee Scott, will preside over earlier Friday cermonies as the "baby queen." She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Scott, of Exmore.

Trick automobile racing by Zeke Meyers, speedway driver, afternoon and night vaudeville performances both Friday and Saturday, and horse races, also both days, will be other events on the festival program.

Preceding Miss Fisher's coronation, floats, bands, bugle corps and other units from all parts of the Eastern Shore will combine in a colorful procession depicting the potato-growing industry.

J. H. Whitty Dies; Poeana Collector

Richmond, Va., June 3 (AP).—James Howard Whitty, 78, owner of the world's largest general collection of the writings of Edgar Allen Poe and one of the Nation's outstanding authorities on the life of the melancholy poet, died late last night at his home here.

His death followed an attack of pneumonia.

A half century ago he came to Richmond and began his study of the surroundings in which Poe spent his boyhood. In the years that followed, Mr. Whitty amassed his collection of Poeana, which he steadfastly declined to sell. Several years ago he refused the offer of Duke University to build him a house at Durham if he would bring his collection there with him.

TUESDAY, JUNE 8, 1937— ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF TWO-STORY BRICK DWELLING, No. 3422 NINTH STREET NORTHEAST, WITH BUILT-IN GARAGE.

By virtue of a deed of trust, recorded in Liber No. 6841, folio 151, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises on TUESDAY, THE EIGHTH DAY OF JUNE, 1937, AT 4:15 O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to wit: Lot 12 in square west of Square 3829 in James J. Galvin's subdivision of Lot 4, in Block 2, "Brookland," as per plat recorded in Liber 79, folio 92, of the records of the Office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia. Subject to the covenants that no building shall be erected within 15 feet of the front line of said Lot 4; that no spirituous or malt liquors shall be manufactured or sold thereon; that no slaughter house or slaughter houses shall be erected thereon; nor shall the said land or premises be used in any way for the purposes hereby prohibited.

TERMS OF SALE: One-fourth of the purchase money to be paid in cash, balance in equal instalments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in one, two and three years, with interest at 6 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semiannually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $300 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within thirty days from day of sale, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

$14,600 Stolen From Diplomat In Capital Store

Dr. de la Casa Is Robbed While Trying on Coat; Carried $22,600.

Senor Dr. Don Enrique Carlos de la Casa, second ranking diplomat at the Spanish Embassy, was robbed of $14,600 yesterday while being fitted for a suit of clothes in a downtown department store.

Police last night were looking for a young man dressed in sports togs who was standing near de la Casa when he removed his coat and laid it across a counter before trying on a new jacket. When the embassy counselor, who will become charge d'affaires when Ambassador de los Rios returns to Spain soon, came back from the fitting room his billfold, which had been left in the inside coat pocket, was gone.

The brown leather case contained ten negotiable Treasury bond coupons, each worth $1,400, and $600 in currency. De la Casa, who is reputed to be one of the wealthiest envoys in Washington, escaped a still greater loss. According to police, he had $8,000 in cash in his pants pockets.

Police estimated the securities from which the coupons were clipped must have a total value of at least $1,000;000.

He told police he was planning a short trip to New York and was going to cash the bond coupons when they became negotiable June 15.

"It is the general belief," police said, "that Senor de la Casa was followed by someone who had knowledge of the coupons that he carried on his person."

The coupons were numbered consecutively from 13122 to 13131, inclusive, bearing letters in the following order: B, C, D, E, F, H, J, K, L, A.

Robbed of $14,600

Boy's Death by Fall Ruled Accidental

A certificate of accidental death was issued yesterday for Eugene C. Melia, 9, who died Wednesday night in Georgetown Hospital of injuries suffered when he fell on the sidewalk while playing near his home, 4225 Brandywine street.

The verdict followed an investigation by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald and police. An autopsy revealed that the boy died of a fractured skull.

He was playing on Forty-third street when the accident occurred, the boy's father, Frank Melia, said. His brother John, 14, carried him home unconscious. He later was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

In addition to his father and brother, John, he is survived by three sisters, Frances, 17; Mildred, 15, and Margaret, 12. He was a fourth grade pupil at the St. Anne's School.

Session Is Ended By Garden Group

Richmond, Va., June 3 (AP).—Newly-elected officers of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, in final executive session of their convention here, said today the work of the organization will be centered in the future in Washington and Richmond.

Mrs. Murray Boocock, of Keswick, Va., national president, was given full authority to extend the work according to her discretion.

Following the appointment of committee chairman, the executive committee joined other delegates for a motor trip to Petersburg for a luncheon at the Country Club. This was followed by a visit to the National Battlefield Park and Brandon on the James.

Confederate Heroes Honored by Virginia

Richmond, Va., June 3 (AP).—Heroes of the battlefield who gave their lives for the losing cause of the Confederacy received the tribute of the South today as it celebrated the birth anniversary of Jefferson Davis.

Virginia and Georgia observed State holidays. The Elliott Grays Chapter of the U. D. C. sponsored exercises tonight in the historic old Virginia Hall of the House of Delegates, where eight descendants of Confederate veterans received crosses of honor and military crosses.

Camp 171, United Confederate Veterans and Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy, postponed their observance until Sunday, when memorial services will be held in Arlington National Cemetery with Representative Rayburn (Democrat,) Texas, as the speaker. A wreath will be placed on the grave of the Unknown Soldier.

Banks in some Virginia cities were closed today, including Danville and Newport News. For other business, there was no holiday.

Group Arrested Plotting Death Of Schuschnigg

Weird Scheme Included Bombing Chancellery From Plane.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, June 3.—A chancellery official tonight disclosed the discovery by police of an immature conspiracy to assassinate Chancellor Kurt von Schuschnigg and a "fantastic" plot to drop incendiary bombs on the chancellery from the air.

He said persons to whom police attributed Nazi sentiments had been arrested after a lengthy investigation, launched in September when a bomb in a suitcase exploded in the west railway station.

Police declared their inquiry led to discovery of a group of conspirators, who apparently were without effective leadership, and documents hinting at a plan to shoot the chancellor when he visited the grave of his wife.

The documents, it was alleged, also outlined a plan to attack the chancellery from the air.

"It is fantastic," the chancellery spokesman said, "but it will be brought out in court in the next few weeks."

Police minimized the seriousness of the affair, stating the alleged plot seemingly had not progressed far beyond the idea stage.

The conspirators, for example, they said, had thought of dropping a bomb on the chancellery from a sightseeing plane, which regulations prohibit from flying lower than 2,000 meters (6,561 feet) over Vienna.

Convention Is Opened By Maryland Baptists

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., June 3.—The annual convention of the Western District Baptist Association opened here tonight at Mount Zion Welsh Baptist Memorial Church, the Rev. William D. Reese, pastor, being moderator of the association. Following devotional led by Rev. W. Randolph, jr., Grace Church, Cumberland, Thomas Davis, Frostburg, gave the address of welcome.

Following devotionals tomorrow morning by Rev. Edwin W. Saylor, First Church, Cumberland, Rev. Cecil Carter, Westernport, will submit the report of the committee on obituaries. Rev. Paul B. Watlington, First Church, Hagerstown, will speak on "Evangelism."

About 200 delegates attended.

Elevated Highway Plan Studied by Roads Group

Baltimore, June 3 (AP).—Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the State roads commission, said today that the roads body was considering the proposal of Dr. Thomas W. Koon, Mayor of Cumberland, for an elevated arterial highway through that city.

Dr. Tabler said the Cumberland mayor conferred with him and Commissioner C. Nice Wilkinson yesterday concerning the possibility of constructing the overhead road along the National pike through Cumberland.

U. S. Doctor Lost On Trip to South; Search Is Asked

Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the Public Health Service, said last night he had asked the Secret Service to search for Dr. Charles V. Akin, surgeon in charge of the Rosebank Quarantine Station, Staten Island, N. Y.

He said Dr. Akin apparently had disappeared while driving from New York to Columbia, S. C.

Dr. Parran expressed fear that Dr. Akin, who was going to Columbia for the graduation of his son, C. V. Akin, jr., from the University of South Carolina, had met with foul play or suffered amnesia.

Dr. Akin left New York Saturday and wired Mrs. Akin from Norfolk, Va., Sunday that he had arrived there, Dr. Parran said. The following day he wired from Raleigh, N. C., and said he would go to Columbia on Tuesday.
